"Lights On" Event Draws Attention To After-School Prog.

Communities across the country held Lights On Afterschool events on Oct. 20. This initiative was an effort of children, parents, and after-school supporters to call attention to the importance of after-school programs. In Garrett County, the Lights On theme was celebrated by nearly 250 individuals at the 4-H camp near Bittinger, according to Ann Sherrard, 4-H youth development educator, Garrett County Extension Office.

A highlight of the celebration was the launching of luminaries onto Cunningham Lake at the 4-H center. The luminaries were created by the young people at each of the after-school sites.

"The eerie moon-glow light created an interesting reflection across the lake," Sherrard said. "The luminaries that floated out across the lake represented the four after-school sites that are currently operating. These four will soon be joined by programs that will resume in Kitzmiller and Friendsville."

Accident Elementary School provided the first floating luminary, which featured the school's name silhouetted by multiple candles protected inside a translucent covering.

Next, the Grantsville after-school group launched its creation, which was layered with CDs for a reflective surface and topped with dozens of candles and several sparklers for an added dramatic effect.

"Loch Lynn after-school followed with a beautiful luminary that featured intricate cut-out designs on all four sides," Sherrard said. "The candles within the luminary provided a perfect contrast of light and dark that revealed each design."

The final launch was made by Southern Middle School students. Their project featured a light source provided by glow sticks inside a "New-Age" dome, Sherrard said.

A police dog demonstration was presented by Officers Chris Helbig and Tim Sanders.

The Lights On After-school event was coordinated by staff from Community Action, Garrett County Health Department, and Garrett County Extension Office. Each of these three offices provide support to after-school programs.

"Many of the after-school groups have enjoyed overnight camping here at the 4-H center this year," said Tammy Humberson, 4-H after-school coordinator. "We were pleased to host this, important Lights On Afterschool event at the camp." The after-school activities provided by the 4-H staff are funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Many families can benefit from after-school care for their children," said Marvin Beckman, after-school coordinator for the Partnership for Children and Families. "Young people in after-school programs are not only safer but are more likely to have success in school. Providing quality programs is a priority for the county."

After-school programs in Garrett County are supported by a partnership with the countywide 21st Century Community Learning Centers Grant, which is coordinated by the Partnership for Children & Families and the Garrett County Board of Education.

LIGHTS ON AFTERSCHOOL OBSERVED – Lights On Afterschool events were held recently across the country to draw attention to the importance of after-school programs. Locally, more than 250 students, parents, and supporters attended a Lights On celebration at the 4-H center near Bittinger. The evening's activities included the lighting of luminaries and a police dog demonstration, pictured, by Officers Chris Helbig and Tim Sanders. See story for details.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Well, it looks like the geese that were hanging out at the Peat Moss Lake disappeared when we got our first major snowstorm of the season. Bittinger isn't an appealing location for the winter months.

Here it is Halloween again. That means exactly one week until once again I turn 39. Ha! Ha! However, a major event will take place, with Ferne Beachy celebrating her 92nd birthday on November 11 while her sister Beulah Moon will also celebrate her birthday on the 14th. Also let's not forget the pair of West Virginia University alumni – Kevin Bass and Bill Southerly – celebrating on the 7th, and Sharon Buckel on the 12th.

Well, I got two crowds of absolutely adorable trick-or-treaters. The first group was accompanied by Grandmother Cindy Stanton, and the second group was Linda Buckel's adorable grandchildren. They were not scary, but sweet and cute and polite. Little McKenna Stanton could not quite say "Trick or Treat," but I got a chorus of "Thank You" from the whole bunch of them.

I am very glad that Halloween is past, as for one thing my old movie channels for the last month have had nothing on but horror or crime movies. I never choose to watch a horror movie, as it really unsettles me.

A couple of Bittinger woodmen got their black bears recently, namely Shane Buckel and Owen Beitzel.

Don't forget this Saturday night is the Lutheran Braille workers' turkey dinner at Northern High School cafeteria between 4:30 and 7 p.m. You can eat in or carry out the dinner. Crafts and baked goods will also be available.

Pastor Jim Mitchell is dealing with some major health challenges and will have a catheterization this week at Sacred Heart Hospital. He has had some heart problems in the past.

My mother visited a heart doctor in Morgantown on Friday and was relieved to find that she wouldn't have to have another catheterization.

It is not too late to view Garrett County's finest autumn foliage, even if it is past peak form. Rock Lodge Road along the lake and beyond is beautiful. The downed branches add a new look. The delightfully warm weather we are enjoying will go away with the wind, according to Gary Buckel, and we will be in for some cold weather next week. The wind is very brisk today. It blew away an armfull of mail from me yesterday.

Gary also accurately predicted the result of the Monday Night Football game between my Steelers and his Raiders – except that he predicted a much larger winning margin by the Steelers.

The Northern football team continues on its winning streak, as the Huskies easily handled Westmar on Monday night.

Lottie Brenneman is still having some medical problems and was briefly in the hospital again last week.

Sally and Lenny Poholsky attended Torrey's final "World Series" baseball game in Greensboro, N. C., on Saturday. The "Grey Team," which was the underdog, won 4 – 1 in extra innings of play. Sally spent the prior week before the big game in Greensboro to attend the final weekend of fall ball at Greensboro College. Sally missed the Garrett County snowstorm, but enjoyed the North Carolina warmth. The regular season of baseball will begin in February, which will not be too soon for Torrey!

Southern GOP Women Meet

The Southern Garrett County Republican Women's Club met Oct. 19 at Mtn. Glade Adult Day Care Services, Oakland. Members in attendance were president Ann Rebele, Kay Small, Nita Roberts, Margie Funk, Clara Anderson, Pat White-Moore, Judy Wilt, Arzella Parsons, Nancy Jordan, Bea Crosco, and Lisa Thayer Welch, and associate members DeCorsey Bolden and Ed Clemons.

Garrett County commissioner Dave Beard, the featured speaker, presented "Hot Topics in Garrett County." His discussion included the county commissioners' decision to hire a six-month contractual employee to develop a proposal for creating a department of parks and recreation. Beard noted that Garrett is the only Maryland county without a parks and recreation department.

He and the club members also discussed the proposed Oakland bypass, the state "flush tax," economic development and employment opportunities, and the construction of a new detention center and public works center in the county.

President Rebele conducted the business meeting. Thank-you notes for the club's donation of school supplies were read, and the treasurer's report was presented. Roberts updated members on the status of the club's stained glass lamp raffle. Tickets are still available from any club member.

Delegates to the western region's Maryland Federation of Republican Women fall convention were Rebele, Crosco, Parsons, Roberts, and Small. The event was held Oct. 28-29 in Cumberland.

The Oakland parking meter that the club adopted and decorated for the Autumn Glory Festival received numerous compliments, according to a group spokesperson. The members discussed ideas for the next decorating event, which will begin Nov. 26.

Funk won the meeting raffle, which she donated to last week's convention for its raffle. The group's next meeting will be Wednesday, Nov. 16.

Oakland Update

by Asa McCain

In follow-up to Autumn Glory, fall activities, the first winter storm, and other Oakland activities, I wanted to share the following information:

AUTUMN GLORY – Wow! Thanks to the chamber and all their helpers, the crafters, the vendors, the fire department personnel, police personnel, the parade participants, visitors, etc. The festival and all the activities were superb.

DECORATE A METER CONTEST – Everything looked beautiful for the Autumn Glory Festival. Thanks to all of you who participated in the "Decorate a Parking Meter" contest. We look forward to seeing the winter decorations at the end of November.

HOME DECORATIONS – Thanks also to everyone who decorated their homes and businesses. We appreciate those who go the extra mile to make our community look fantastic. I am so proud of our community and how everyone works together.

AUTUMN GLORY CLEANUP – Did you ever wonder what happens to all of the trash left in Oakland after the parades? If you see any of our Street Department personnel, tell them "Thanks" for making it "disappear."

WINTER STORM DAMAGE – As a result of the recent storm, Oakland residents are reminded that our street crews will be chipping broken limbs up to 6" in diameter. Please be patient as the cleanup will take some time, because there is so much damage. We are all thankful that there were no major injuries and no major property damage reports.

LEAF COLLECTION – The Street Department is continuing the annual leaf collection process. Please rake your leaves out to the curb for collection. Please, no apples, rocks or sticks. They create a hazard for our personnel.

BULK PICK-UP – The Street Department has suspended Friday bulk pick-up for our residents because of the recent winter storm.

OAKLAND ARMORY – Effective Oct. 1 the town of Oakland has taken possession of the National Guard Armory. Thanks to all of those who made this happen. The town is working on a grant to do a study to help determine the best use for the building and property for the town and the whole community. In the meantime, if your group or organization is interested in using the facility, please submit a letter in writing (if you have not already done so) to Oakland City Hall, 15 South Third Street, Oakland. We will be contacting those who have already submitted a letter, and then reviewing all the requests. We will be determining a fee schedule for using the facility, to help defray the cost of utilities.

UNITED WAY DAY OF CARING – Thanks to all of those who helped out with projects for Oakland, its parks, walking paths, etc. Even though the weather was not the best, the efforts and intent were certainly from the best of hearts.

GLADES PARK – We wanted to let those who use the Glades Park know that the ball court lights will be turned off until next spring.

GOBA MEETING – The next meeting of the Greater Oakland Business Association (GOBA) will be coming up soon, on Nov. 15 at 5:30 p.m. at Oakland City Hall. GOBA meets the third Tuesday of every other month. New members are always welcome.

WEB SITE – Our web site, www.oaklandmd.com, has been updated. We have information on our GOBA member businesses, some of which is limited. Local businesses should check the site and submit updates and additional information in writing to Oakland City Hall.

•The mayor requested that the clerk organize a Veterans Day celebration for the town on Friday, Nov. 11.

•A letter was read from Mrs. Hardesty concerning the paving of the Kitzmiller Addition alley.

•There is a water leak at Tim Wilt's residence which he said he reported to the Sanitary District six months ago. Water in a stormwater kirain was found to be treated water, with the leak located under the new pavement on E. Main Street. The mayor has informed the Sanitary District that, once the leak is repaired, the pavement must be replaced in in the same condition it is in now.

LOCH LYNN HEIGHTS

•Residents are reminded to come out and support Wanda Dawson and Richard Smith by voting on Monday, Nov. 7, from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. They will fill the two council seats vacated by Ruth Foley and Betty Wollord at the beginning of the year.

•Leaf pick-up will resume as soon as debris from the recent snow storm has been collected, and will continue as weather permits. Leaves need to be raked to the edge of the street. Do not include any yard debris because this could break the machine.

The next regularly scheduled council meeting is Dec. 6 at 7 p.m.

Books 'N Pajamas Program Slated At Ruth Enlow Library

The Ruth Enlow Library system has slated its November Books 'N Pajamas program. Each 45-minute program will feature a reading of the bedtime story Gooseberry Goose by Claire Freedman. One hardback copy of the book will be given away at each branch.

Books 'N Pajamas will be offered at the Oakland and Grantsville libraries at 7 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 7. The program will meet again at the three other branches on Wednesday, Nov. 9. That evening's offerings will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the Kitzmiller library; 6 p.m. at the Accident library; and 7 p.m. at the Friendsville library.

Children ages 2-5 (and interested older siblings) are encouraged to dress in their pajamas and bring their families to the programs. All children must be supervised by an adult.

Traffic Stop Leads To Many Charges

An Oakland man was arrested for drunk driving after police observed his vehicle weaving, crossing the center of the roadway, and exceeding the speed limit early Wednesday morning on Sand Flat Road, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Clinton Ray Harvey, 29, failed field sobriety tests. He was charged with driving while impaired, driving while under the influence, failure to drive right of center, exceeding the maximum speed limit, and operating a vehicle in violation of a license restriction.

Fall Bearing Raspberry Plant Order Planned

by Cheryl DeBerry, Garrett County Economic Development

Considerable interest has been generated in the county about growing raspberries. Fall bearing raspberries produce fruit in the late summer and early fall.

One advantage of the fall bearing varieties is that none of the canes are overwintered. During the winter, the entire cane is removed, and new growth in the spring produces the fruit later in the fall.

Dr. Harry Swartz, with the University of Maryland, has been involved with the development of four varieties of fall bearing raspberries: Caroline, Jacklyn, Josephine, and a yellow variety called Anne.

Jacklyn is the earliest fruiting variety, and Caroline is the most aggressive growing variety. These varieties will perform excellent outdoors, but will perform even better inside a high tunnel (a greenhouse frame with a single layer of plastic and no heat).

Trials conducted by Dr. Swartz utilizing the above varieties in high tunnels in Garrett County have yielded four pounds per foot of row, which is equal to nearly 30,000 pounds of berries per acre. Demand for raspberries has been strong at both local and regional markets. A pint (.75 lb.) has been selling for $2 to $3 at most markets.

If you are interested in starting to grow raspberries, a group order will be placed by Dec. 10. Two reasons for placing the group order now are:

First, we can have considerable savings by ordering in quantity. The plants will cost between $1.50 and $2 per plant if we can purchase 25 or more of each variety.

The second reason for placing the order now is that most of the companies offering these varieties were sold out last year by late spring.

Anyone interested in placing an order or learning more information about fall bearing raspberries may call the Extension Office a call at 301-334-6960.

Nominations Still Open For AFT Steward Award

Nominations are still being accepted for American Farmland Trust's 2006 Steward of the Land Award.

The $10,000 prize is presented annually to a farmer or rancher who best exemplifies American Farmland Trust's (AFT) mission of stopping the loss of productive farmland and promoting farming practices that lead to a healthful environment. The deadline for nominations has been extended until Dec. 1.

Nomination kits can be requested by calling 1-886-5170, ext. 3055, or can be downloaded on AFT's website at www.farmland.org/steward/nomination_instructions.pdf.

The 2005 Steward of the Land Award was presented to Steve Sinton, a wine grape grower and fourth generation cattle rancher from Shandon, Calif. Throughout his 18,000 acres of ranchland and 125 acres of vineyards, Steve utilizes a variety of innovative practices to promote sustainability and protect the environment. Efforts on Steve's ranch have even resulted in the reintroduction of the California condor, which nests on parts of his property. He was also instrumental at the state level in the creation of the California Rangeland Trust, California's statewide agricultural land trust.

"The Steward of the Land Award showcases the diversity of American agriculture and illustrates the many benefits farmers and ranchers provide to the general public, like habitat for wildlife, a filter for clean air and water, and scenic vistas," said Sinton. "I'm a rancher, but I know that past winners of this award have also been grain growers, dairy farmers and fruit [illegible]. There [illegible] in every aspect of agriculture that are engaged in good stewardship practices."

Past winners of the award can be found across the United States — in California, Maryland, Wisconsin, Indiana, New Hampshire, Oregon, Colorado, and South Carolina.

Entering a landmark 10th anniversary year, the Steward of the Land Award is also working to raise awareness of the public benefits that agriculture provides as discussions about changing farm policies in the 2007 Farm Bill begin.

"As the 2007 Farm Bill approaches, it's more important than ever to show examples of the many faces of agriculture working so hard to implement good stewardship practices on their land," said AFT president Ralph Grossi. "American Farmland Trust can only honor one farmer each year through its Steward of the Land Award, but by supporting incentive-based farm policies that link payments to good stewardship and sound land management, our nation can honor thousands of farmers every year."

American Farmland Trust's Steward of the Land Award was created in 1997 in honor of farmer and conservationist Peggy McGrath Rockefeller, a founding AFT board member who cared deeply about protection and conservation of the nation's farm and ranch land, a spokesperson said.

American Farmland Trust is a national nonprofit organization working with communities and individuals to protect the best land, plan for growth with agriculture in mind, and keep the land healthy. As the leading advocate for farm and ranch land conservation, AFT has ensured that more than a million acres stays bountiful and productive.

AFT's national office is located in Washington, D.C. For more information, persons may visit www.farmland.org

SOLD, 2, 3, 4!

Hooray! You've sold your home and handed the keys over to the new owners! Now what?

Do you need to buy another home and move? The agent who sold your home may be a likely candidate to help you locate another, but buying and selling require different skills. If you're moving some distance, you might want a referral for another agent who knows your new area well.

If you cleared a good deal of cash from your sale, consider putting it in a safe, although possibly temporary, spot. While Money Market Accounts aren't earning exactly astronomical returns at the moment, they are safe, usually guaranteed, and give you easy access to your money and check writing.

Now what about all that paperwork you amassed during your listing and sale? Hold onto it, because you'll need it for next year's tax return. And hold onto it after that, in case (shudder) your return should be audited. Since you can add the cost of improvements to your home's cost basis, you may still need all those repair and improvement receipts to document your capital gains formulations.

Be sure to keep up with changing tax laws and changing life situations (like a promotion, a baby, or a divorce) that could impact your next purchase decision and tax return.

Preparation before your sale makes life afterward even more satisfying!

Let's Get Down To Business!

HUNT & MOORE GRANTWRITING

Two West Virginia women have created a new business to help groups and individuals secure private and public grants. The new business, called Hunt & Moore Grantwriting, is the brainchild of Sarah Hunt and Susan Moore, who plan to run the business from an office in Davis, W.Va.

Hunt, formerly the administrator of a non-profit community health center, is well versed in the labyrinth of health care and federal grantsmanship.

"Grants are what keep most small non-profit businesses like health clinics open. They also help fund innovation – new programs and wellness projects that wouldn't be possible otherwise. But often they are written by people who already have too much to do. That is where we can come in and lend assistance rather than an organization adding an additional staff member to work on grant projects or risk burning out existing employees with added workload," said Hunt.

Moore's writing background comes from years spent as an advertising copy writer at Charles Ryan Associates, a technical writer at the Morgantown Energy Technology Center, and the communications manager at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of West Virginia.

"I've written many types of business and marketing documents from proposals and speeches to TV spots and video scripts. Basically, it's all about persuasion," said Moore.

Different Vaccines Available For The Flu

Influenza or "the flu" can cause mild to severe illness and can even lead to death. Some people, such as older people, young children, and people with certain health conditions, are at high risk for serious flu complications. Most healthy adults may be able to infect others beginning 1 day before symptoms develop and up to 5 days after becoming sick. That means that you can pass on the flu virus to someone else before you know you are sick, as well as while you are sick.

The best way to prevent this contagious illness is to get a flu vaccination each fall. There are two types of vaccines. The "flu shot" is an inactivated vaccine (containing killed virus) that is given with a needle. The flu shot is approved for use in people older than 6 months, including healthy people and people with chronic medical conditions. The nasal-spray flu vaccine is a vaccine made with live, weakened flu viruses that do not cause the flu. It is approved for use in healthy people 5 years to 49 years of age who are not pregnant. October or November is the best time to get vaccinated, but getting vaccinated in December or even later can still be beneficial. Check with your local pharmacy to see which vaccine may be best for you and your family.

Oakland Mah Charged With Sex Offense

An Oakland man was arrested for sex offense charges stemming from an act committed against a child in Oakland earlier this year, according to Garrett Bureau of Investigation.

Garland Jackie Friend Jr., 55, was arrested on an arrest warrant as he returned home on Monday, Oct. 24, police said. The arrest stemmed from an investigation that began from a reported alleged illegal sex act that occurred to a 3-year-old child. The alleged act occurred earlier in the year, but was just recently reported, police said.

Friend was charged with one count of child abuse, one count of sexual abuse against a minor, a second-degree sex offense, one count of a perverted practice, and second-degree assault.

He is currently being held in the Garrett County Detention Center on $60,000 bond.

Resident Charged With Child Abuse, Porn Solicitation

A combined investigation with the Garrett Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Social Services led to the arrest of an Oakland man for allegedly photographing children naked and in sexually suggestive poses, according to police.

Miles Martin Rausch, 49, was charged with 11 counts of child sexual abuse, nine counts of child porn solicitation, second-degree sex offense, third-degree sex offense, fourth-degree sex offense, second-degree assault, perverted practice, two counts of sexual display to a minor, and illegal possession of a firearm.

According to GBI, some of the children were related to Rausch and some were his relatives' friends. The victims ranged in age from 4 to 11 years old, and the abuse has been ongoing for the past four to five years, GBI said. Further investigation revealed Rausch was sexually involved with at least two of the victims.

Rausch was originally arrested on Sept. 12 on

THEY'RE BAAAACK – Great flocks (also called "murders") of American crows have become a regular sign of fall and winter in parts of Garrett County over the past several years. While sightings of crows were actually rare some 30 or 40 years ago, now they are here in huge numbers, often to the irritation of the human residents. According to Fran Pope, a local bird expert, the crows flock this time of year when they are not breeding or setting up territories. They are basically just trying to survive the winter. And the birds have been here for a very long time, but have been flocking increasingly in the more populated areas, and therefore are more visible to more people. There are many theories as to why this is happening, one being that the more "urban" areas are slightly warmer because of all the buildings. So the birds are drawn to these places to roost. And they have possibly made the connection that lots of light (street lights, for example) means more warmth, another reason for the increase in towns such as Oakland. They do not pose dire health threats to humans, and despite the flock's eerie resemblance to Alfred Hitchcock's infamous feathered murderers, these birds are actually rather fascinating to watch as they congregate, chase, fight, and finally settle in for a night's sleep. They will hang around our towns until sometime in March, when breeding begins all over again. Photo by John McEwen.

Veterans Day Program Slated In Oakland Friday

American Legion Post #071, Oakland, will conduct a Veterans Day program at Veterans Park tomorrow, Friday, Nov. 11, starting at 11 a.m. The park is located at the corner of Third and Oak streets in Oakland.

Judge Ralph Burnett will be the guest speaker, and Congressional Medal of Honor winner John Baca will make a special appearance at the program.

"Everyone is invited to attend this program honoring all veterans of all branches who served and those still serving in the armed services of the United States of America," said a post spokesperson.

In case of inclement weather the program will be presented in the Garrett County courthouse rotunda.

Inquiry Continues Into Bomb Threat At Southern High

The investigation continues into the bomb threat that was received at Southern High School last Wednesday, according to the Garrett County Sheriff's Office.

An operator for the AT&T Relay system contacted the school shortly before 11 a.m. to report she had received a call through the Relay system advising that a bomb was located in the second story of the high school. The school was evacuated by school authorities, and was searched by Tfc. Durham and his K-9. The school was searched again with law enforcement

County Expands Recycling Efforts At Refuse Sites

The Garrett County Solid Waste & Recycling Division, General Services Department, has improved three refuse and recycling sites, Kim Madigan, the division's recycling coordinator, announced this week.

"Residents and businesses will benefit from the arrival of new recycling containers at the Bumble Bee, Kings Run, and Weber sites," she said.

The Bumble Bee Road site now has a compactor for the collection of cardboard. This allows for cardboard to be placed in the container without flattening it first. Other changes in-

Coal Truck Crash Claims Life Of Driver

A Pennsylvania man was fatally injured early Tuesday morning when he lost control of a coal truck as he was leaving the Mountain View Mettiki Coal Mine.

Chad Cook, 25, Hyndman, apparently lost control of his 2006 Mack truck, which is owned by Savage Services Corp. The truck was hauling coal for Mettiki. According to West Virginia State Police from Grant County, he lost control of the truck in a curve and the vehicle overturned.

Two Mettiki employees, who are also emergency medical technicians, initially responded to the scene. They were assisted by two other drivers from Savage Services. Bayard Volunteer Fire Department and Southern Garrett Rescue Squad also responded to the 1 a.m. scene.

Cook was pronounced dead at the scene by the Tucker County medical examiner.

The crash remains under investigation by state police.

SHS Band Wins Chap. 13 Tourney; Now Headed To Championships

After taking first place in Group I at the Chapter XIII Tournament of Bands Championship, the Southern Garrett High School Marching Band has secured a position in the Atlantic Coast Marching Band Championships, slated for Nov. 12 in Scranton, Pa.

In competition with four other Group I bands at the Chapter XIII tourney, held at Musselman High School, Inwood, W.Va., on Nov. 5, Southern earned a score of 87.05, taking first place in front of Westmar at second place with a score of 81.15. The Northern Garrett High School Marching Band took third place in the tournament with a score of 80.05. (The groupings are based on band size. Group I is the smallest. There are also Group II, III, and IV bands in Chapter XIII competition.)

Now the Southern marchers will go on to compete at Scranton. The opportunity to compete in the Atlantic Coast Championships is only earned by bands that win the chapter contest. Some additional groups are accepted based on their season records.

In addition to taking first place, Southern also earned the specialty awards at the chapter tournament in for Best Percussion and Best

SHS BAND TAKES CHAPTER XIII FIRST; NOW SCRANTON-BOUND – The seniors of the Southern High School Marching Band will go out on a thrilling note this season, as the band has earned a spot at the Atlantic Coast Marching Band Championships. The chance at the championships comes to bands only when they are victorious at Chapter XIII Championships, which is exactly how last weekend turned out for Southern. The band, under the direction of Richard Clever, assisted by Duane Salisbury, took first place in the contest, which was held at Musselman High School in Inwood, W.Va. Now the band will go on to Scranton, Pa., to see how well they fare against award-winning bands from across the Atlantic Coast region. Southern's marchers have had an excellent competition season this fall, taking several first and second places, as well as earning multiple specialty awards for such things as the best percussion, best music, and best color guard, to name a few. "We are incredibly proud of what our students have accomplished this year," said Clever. See story. Pictured above are the seniors of the band displaying their awards. Inmates To Help With County Snow Shoveling

Certain inmates of the Garrett County Detention Center will assist the county with sidewalk snow removal at the courthouse, the health center, and the Public Service Center, according to Gary Mullich, director of General Services.

Two crews of three to five inmates along with a correctional officer currently assist the State Highway Administration in the summer months with grass cutting. Now one crew will continue work through the winter months.

"The prisoners really want to do this," said Chief Deputy Gary Berkebile. "Doing some work instead of sitting and watching a clock tick by is very good for the prisoners. It's also good for the community that they help."

The inmates are always supervised by a correctional officer, and have to meet certain criteria. Berkebile said the inmates must have been already processed in court and sentenced, and must not be an escape risk or have given the officers any problems in the past.

Appalachian Crossroads personnel had been providing the snow removal for the county in the past, but were having transportation problems and were not continuing that service, said Mullich.

"We were having difficulty finding someone to provide this service, so this solution is very beneficial to all of us," said Mullich.

The county will also save money with this arrangement, according to Monty Pagenhardt, county administrator.

For the courthouse and health center locations, the snow removal cost for the 2003-04 season was $5,616, and for 2004-05 it was $5,264. That is a total of $10,880 for two years.

Berkebile said the dispatcher will decide each morning if a crew is needed. The first crew will start around 4 a.m., he said, and will continue circulating around the three areas as needed according to the weather.

DNR Approves Synergics' Roth Rock Wind Facility

Last week the Maryland Department of Natural Resources recommended that Synergics Energy Services be allowed to construct its proposed Roth Rock wind turbine facility along the ridgeline of Backbone Mountain. The agency made its recommendation to the Maryland Public Service Commission (PSC), which has the final authority to grant or deny permission for the 40 megawatt project, consisting of between 15 and 20 turbines, to proceed. The PSC's final decision is expected by the end of the year.

In its initial finding of April 20, DNR indicated that it would likely approve the project, although several unfinished studies would have to be completed and reviewed prior to the agency issuing its recommendation. Those studies included a nesting bird survey emphasizing species of concern; vegetation and wetlands studies; and evaluations of impacts to approximately 50 Maryland Inventory of Historic Properties located within two miles of the project site.

In last week's letter to the PSC signed by DNR Secretary C. Ronald Franks, the agency said those studies had been completed, and gave its approval for the project with the qualification that several turbines in the initial proposal are situated at sites not suitable for construction. The 10 turbines originally planned for those sections have been moved to different locations within the project site, and several have been eliminated from the company's proposal.

Franks also stipulated that post-construction studies of bird and bat kills be undertaken at the site, and if the numbers are determined to be excessive the wind company will be required to greatly curtail production during time periods of highest risk, such as the annual fall migration.

The PSC case record for the Synergics application, including the DNR approval, may be viewed on the commission's web site at www.psc.state.md.us/psc, under Case 9008.

GCHD Earns Award At Md. Rural Summit

The Dental Care Program of the Garrett County Health Department (GCHD) received the Outstanding Rural Health Program Award during the annual Maryland Rural Summit, which was held at the Wisp Resort last week. The local program was among several recognized with this year's Rural Achievement awards for outstanding efforts to improve the quality of life in rural Maryland.

"Garrett County's Dental Care Program responded to an enormous lack of dental care by taking the lead role in developing 'Something to Smile About,' network of community dentists," said Grace Zaczek, director of the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene's Office of Primary Care and Rural Health. "It is absolutely astounding that the community has pulled together like this. I'm particularly impressed that your hospital has been so supportive of the program by providing the use of their operating room for the most severe cases. It is really forward thinking since untreated dental decay has been linked to many other health problems, including obesity, diabetes and heart disease."

Residents Asked To Participate In Recycling Day

America Recycles Day is Tuesday, Nov. 15. The Garrett County Solid Waste & Recycling Division encourages residents to take a few minutes on the days leading up to America Recycles Day to commit to recycling and buying recycled products whenever they can.

"Recycling protects our environment, is a wise use of our natural resources, and supports the economic well-being of our nation," said Kimberly Madigan, the division's recycling coordinator. "And it's everyone's responsibility to do their part in whatever way they can. It can be as simple as remembering to drop your soft drink container in a recycle bin, or asking about recycled products when you shop. Every small effort combines with others to make a big difference."

One unique feature of the campaign is the opportunity for people to sign a personal pledge to recycle. The pledge forms can be obtained at any of the county's seven refuse and recycling sites (including the landfill). Pledges can also be made online at americarecyclesday.org. All pledges will be entered into a national random drawing for a new Ford Escape Hybrid SUV and several other prizes.

The Garrett County Solid Waste & Recycling Division and commissioners are encouraging all residents to sign a pledge form.

"I have already signed my pledge to recycle," Madigan said. "And I know it makes me feel responsible to make good on that pledge whenever I have the opportunity. So I hope many of you will sign pledges too."

According to Madigan, America Recycles 2005 is one of the most comprehensive recycling awareness campaigns in the nation. Each year millions of people become better informed about the advantages of recycling at home and in the office. Last year, thousands signed or e-mailed pledges to recycle and buy recycled products.

This year's featured theme, "It All Comes Back To You," presents multiple messages: A recycled product or material can return to consumers as another new product; recycling comes back to consumers as an improved environment, preservation of resources and economic well-being of the county; and it is everyone's responsibility to recycle.

For more information about the campaign or recycling in Garrett County, persons may call 301-387-0322 or visit garrettcounty.org/swandr/index.html.

The annual America Recycles campaign is sponsored by the non-profit organization America Recycles Day Inc. and the Ford Motor Company, Recycle America Alliance, Novelis Corporation, Staples Inc., American Beverage Association, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Christmas On Main St. To Be Two-Day Event

The Greater Oakland Business Association's annual Christmas on Main Street will be a two-day event this year: Friday, Dec. 2, and Saturday, Dec. 3.

"We are hoping for a bigger and better event than ever," said Cherie Ross, Oakland's Main Street Program manager.

The Promotions Committee is busy working with businesses to finalize plans. Activities will include the annual Snowflake Queen contest, a parade, horse-drawn sleigh rides, specials at local businesses, and food and craft vendors.

Vendors interested in participating may call Ross at 301-616-3026 for further information.

She noted that more details about Christmas on Main Street will be forthcoming as plans are finalized.

Awards Bestowed At Chamber's Annual "Our Story" Conference

The recent Our Story Conference at Garrett College included an awards ceremony recognizing some of the top contributors to the county's business and economic climate. The conference, which examined the nexus of the region's education systems, political infrastructure, and business opportunities, was sponsored by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

Longtime Oakland Pizza Hut waitress Beverly Meyers was honored with the Employee of the Year Award – also known as the "Results Not Excuses Award." In presenting the award, chamber president Charlie Ross noted that Meyers's love for serving customers has kept her working as a waitress despite her extensive leadership abilities.

"An employee who comes early and stays late on a regular basis, Beverly rarely misses work, fills in when needed and keeps smiling," Ross said. "She is a self-less worker who puts the needs of the customers, her co-workers and the business ahead of her own."

Two business owners – Linda Herdering of Husky Power Dogsledding and Kim Trickett of Yellow Snow Dog Sled Adventures – shared the Mover and Shaker Award, which is awarded to individuals in business for less than five years who have shown rapid success, demonstrated community support, and who have actively marketed their business.

"Linda and Kim were nominated for the impact and excitement their businesses have generated in the tourism field," Ross stated. "Both businesses have offered special promotions and programs for local citizens to try this sport, generally only experienced by those in the far north. Also, their willingness to work with editors and writers have led to articles appearing in newspapers and magazines across the country."

The Mentor of the Year Award went to Cherie Ross for her work as Oakland's Main Street Program manager. "Cheri has a reputation of helping and supporting the business community, goes the extra mile to help out a growing business and shows community involvement," Ross commented.

"Cherie has been invaluable to the town of Oakland and its business community," said Oakland town council president Peggy Jamison. "Cherie has gone beyond the usual assistance to business by doing things such as helping re-analyze store windows, helping locate equipment for a new product line, looking at co-op advertising, developing new events to bring more people into the businesses, and visiting regularly with the businesses to talk about issue or just to visit."

The Entrepreneur of the Year Award recognizes an individual who has proven business success, employee retention, promotes from within, links to the community, and mentors other small businesses.

Judy Devlin of the Book Mark'et and Antique Mezzanine in Oakland was named Entrepreneur of the Year for a company with less than 20 employees. "The Book Market is a very successful business and is a model for customer service, product knowledge, design and display," said Ross. "Judy is always there to support others in the business community and is especially supportive to new businesses."

Janna Naylor of Naylor's Hardware received the Entrepreneur's award for a company with more than 20 employees. "A long established county business, Naylor's has learned to adapt to changes and develop new markets in the face of changing business climates," Ross remarked. "Janna has supported many community efforts and is very involved in the Recreation Trails program."

"It's always exciting to recognize those people in our community who have gone above and beyond to offer citizens and visitors alike the best possible service," said Ross.

Three Injured In Oakland Mishap Tuesday Night

A two-car collision at the intersection of Oak Street and Rt. 219 South (near the Burger King) injured three people early Tuesday night, according to the Oakland Police Department.

At 7:15 p.m. James Brian Reckart, 22, Oakland, attempted to make a left turn from northbound Rt. 219 onto westbound Oak Street. As he did so, his 2003 Dodge Ram pickup truck collided with a southbound 1991 Buick Skylark operated by David Lee Kitzmiller, 44, Mtn. Lake Park. Police said that both vehicles were operating under respective green lights, and deemed Reckart at fault without filing charges.

Kitzmiller and his two passengers, Carolyn Lorraine Moore, 30, and Oliver Lee Guthrie, 54, both of Oakland, were transported by the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad to Garrett County Memorial Hospital. The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department assisted at the accident scene.

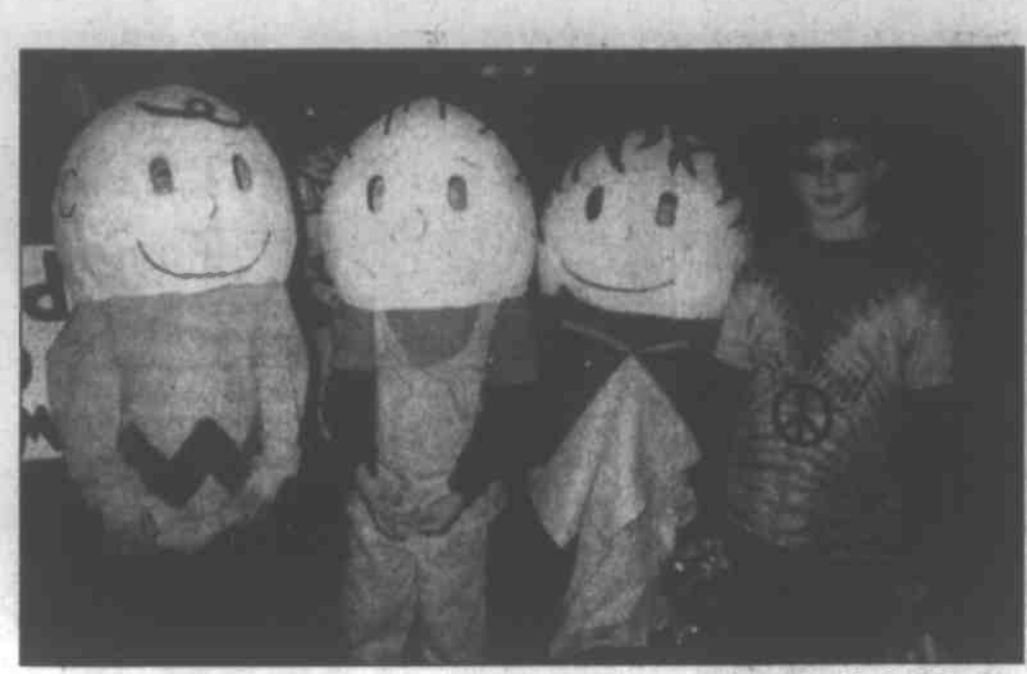
Man Sentenced To Two Years For DUI Charge

A Cumberland man pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court this week to driving under the influence of alcohol per se. Related charges against Timothy Craig Claycomb, 29, were dismissed upon his plea.

Judge Fred Thayer sentenced him to two years in the Division of Corrections, suspending all but 30 days of that sentence. Upon his release from the Garrett County Jail, Claycomb will be on probation.

He was arrested last December by Maryland State Police officers, who investigated an accident along New Germany Road, south of Frank Brenneman Road. Claycomb had apparently been traveling at a high rate of speed when his car left the roadway, overturned, and struck a tree.

The officers located Claycomb walking along New Germany Road and arrested him after observing apparent signs of intoxication, noted the state's attorney.



THE PEANUTS GANG was part of the crowd of children who flocked to the Grantsville Plaza to participate in the Halloween Parade last week, sponsored by First People's Community Federal Credit Union. The group won the prize for the most original costumes in the age 9 to 12 category. The gang included Kyle, Roberto, and Diori Pattison, Salisbury. Also pictured is Cory Ringler, also of Salisbury. His hippie garb helped him nab the prize for the cutest in his age group. clude the collection of #1 plastic, #2 plastic, and office paper.

"The collection of office paper at this site has been added for more convenience and is in response to the many requests made by Garrett County residents and businesses," said Madigan. "In the past, office paper was only accepted at the landfill site, making it difficult for people to participate on a continual basis. That is the case for several materials, thus we instituted a number of improvements to the sites."

The Weber Road site is now accepting cardboard, #1 plastic, and #2 plastic. As with the Bumble Bee site, cardboard can be placed in a compactor box without first being flattened. The collection of office paper and appliances (for an extra fee) will be coming soon, according to Madigan.

At the Kings Run Road site, residents and businesses will now be able to recycle #1 plastic. A compactor has also been delivered for cardboard collection at that site as well.

"We are pleased to bring these new containers to three of our refuse and recycling sites, and look forward to exciting changes in the future for the Garrett County Recycling Program," said Madigan.

Residential refuse permits are not required to recycle at any of the county's six refuse and recycling sites and landfill. More information is available by calling the Solid Waste & Recycling Division at 301-387-0322.

Buckel Elected

Maryland Synod of the ELCA, Buckel has served as a board member and an assembly delegate, and is currently serving on the Angel Bells outreach committee.

Buckel is known locally for her "teas," events designed especially for women of the faith, and has presented teas and/or workshops at Lutheran, Mennonite, Brethren, and Methodist events.

In her civic activities, Buckel is a member of the Rotary, the Business and Professional Women, Delta Kappa Gamma, the Bittinger Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary, and a board member of the Garrett County Community Action Committee.

Buckel has had a lengthy career in education, teaching locally for several years, and then serving 13 years as an elementary school principal.

"I believe I will be an effective board member for the Women of the ELCA in that I sense a genuine calling to respond to God's word and our mission," Buckel said.

The executive board terms are for three years, with a maximum service time of two terms.

Misdirected Criticism...

Before bear hunting was "re-legalized" in Garrett County two years ago, this column carried the opinion that the practice was not a good idea. The feeling was that the number of black bears in western Maryland was still too low, and that a hunt – even a strictly limited one – would quickly re-endanger the species in our area. That opinion of this writer really has not changed in the two years hence.

However, that stated, we are nonetheless outraged that one of "our own," a 8-year-old girl in Kitzmiller who happened to shoot the first bear of the Maryland season this year, has been the object of such criticism, literally from all over the nation. The Baltimore Sun, for example, has recently carried several letters to the editor, the writers of which have truly vilified this little girl for "murdering" a black bear. Some ranted and raved that a child of 8 should in no way be allowed to use a rifle. Similar opinions have been expressed in many other major media.

The fact of the matter is, regardless of how one feels about killing a black bear, this young lady did nothing illegal, and nothing that was not entirely within her rights as a citizen. She does not deserve to be ripped to shreds, especially by people who don't even know her. Our state government introduced and enacted the law – period. Elected officials, then, and not this little girl, should be the target of those who hate the killing of bears.

Her father has also been abused by these same critics, suggesting that he is unfeeling, irresponsible, and God knows what else, to allow his daughter to hunt bears. Once again, regardless of one's feelings about shooting a bear, this was – at least for this father and daughter – an exciting experience and a great sense of accomplishment. This father took the time and the interest to be involved with his daughter in a special way, and yet people have tried to make them feel like they did a horrible thing.

We wonder how many of those critics eat meat; those who are so quick to call this girl a murderer while they down a hamburger or a cold-cut sandwich. It's a double standard. They eat the meat, but choose to ignore the fact that someone not only slaughtered an animal to provide it, but even raised the animal for that purpose (unlike the bear).

The hunting of any animal is not an activity in which this writer has any desire to participate. But there are many positive aspects of the practice, it is legal, and it is as old as humankind.

To those who have criticized this child and her dad (particularly to those who don't even know where Garrett County is), we reiterate: direct your criticism, judgment, and energy toward those who are in charge of enacting the hunting laws.

WE WANT TO ALERT YOU ABOUT THE BIRD FLU, NOT FRIGHTEN YOU.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

"2000 Dead, 28 Marylanders," we see announced in newspapers all around Maryland.

Republican readers should go back and re-read the August 1, 2004, cover story in Parade magazine about retired Army General Tommy Franks, self-described architect of the Iraq war.

"Franks believes five years is a realistic timeline for the United States to be in Iraq" – meaning that if we project current casualty rates, at least 4,000+ American soldiers are to die in Iraq, and another 30,000+ soldiers will be wounded and many maimed for life!

No quagmire? Doesn't look like Vietnam? And no exit strategy when the announced goal, to remove Hussein's Baath Party from power, was fulfilled in December 2003, and President Bush stood on the aircraft carrier Intrepid and declared "Mission accomplished" some 2½ years ago?

Sincerely yours,
Douglas Scott Arey

To the Editor:

On November 15, 2005, Americans will celebrate America Recycles Day. Recycling is a simple way in which everyone in Garrett County can protect the environment, preserve our natural resources, and contribute to the economic well-being of our nation.

When manufacturers [illegible] new products out of [illegible] we recycle, they reduce the water and air pollution normally created and they save energy. For example, it takes 95% less energy to recycle aluminum than it does to make it from raw materials.

Every little bit helps. I invite everyone in Garrett County to renew his or her commitment to recycling and buying recycled products this year. If you fill out a pledge form located at any of the seven refuse and recycling sites or online at www.americarecyclesday.org, you'll be entered into a national drawing for a Ford Escape Hybrid SUV!

To the Editor:

It's ironic you saw racism in two incidents involving protest against Michael Steele. Both the Oreo-tossing Morgan students in 2002 and the more recent satirical photoshop image of him as a black-faced minstrel (created by a "black New York liberal activist") were communicating the idea that Steele himself espouses racist policies. It is certainly not an example of racism when some of his fellow African-Americans point out that he seems to prefer serving the overwhelmingly white power structure to fighting for justice for people of their still disturbingly disenfranchised race.

And one thing about Rosa Parks, whom you mentioned in the same column, she was a black liberal activist, too. She was secretary of her local chapter of the NAACP and had spent time with members of the labor and desegregation movements in the South at the Highland Center in Tennessee. It's possible she would have felt pride in Maryland State Senator Lisa Gladden when she pointed out that policies affecting race are more important than the color of the policy-maker's skin. It's probable Rosa Parks would have been disappointed in politicians like Lt. Governor Steele.

Sincerely,
Emily Morgan

To the Editor:

On August 25th The Republican graciously printed my exposé about how pedophiles receive favored treatment in the penal system, earning extra "good days" and early release consideration as "non-violent offenders."

Surprisingly, no Republican readers responded to this, with the exception of social worker Athey-Oxford, director of the Garrett County Partnership for Children and Families!

A similar letter appeared in The Enterprise, in St. Mary's County, and it and a follow-up generated reader response and strong political interest.

By letter of October 21, St. Mary's County Deputy Attorney Dudderar advised that my "...legislative proposal has been unanimously supported by the Board of County Commissioners for St. Mary's County, Maryland, and the Southern Maryland Delegation."

However, "since it is a state-wide proposal affecting all jurisdictions in Maryland, "I now wonder whether the Garrett County commissioners will also unanimously support this legislative proposal and advise the Garrett County Delegation to the General Assembly.

After all, the General Assembly convenes in January, just after the holidays. Do we have any politicians with backbone?

Sincerely yours,

To the Editor:

What the county commissioners did not tell you about the "flush tax": Maryland Senate would not defer septic systems for additional study as recommended by the Maryland Department of the Environment. The commissioners could have filed an appeal as did another county. Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Virginia do not impose a bay restoration tax/fee on their citizens. These states have a combined minimum total of 20 creeks and rivers that drain into the Potomac River. Plus, the Susquehanna River drains into the bay depositing more pollutants and sediment than the Potomac River.

The Sanitary District Inc. claims septic billing totals of $310,050.00 (my research doubles this amount) and water/sewer totals $186,420.00, for a total of $496,470.00 None of this money will return to Garrett County. The county can retain up to 5 percent for administrative costs. Penalty for non-compliance is set by the county commissioners.

These elected officials jumped to a conclusion without knowing all of the facts, or did they? They are in office to serve, not shaft us.

Point to ponder – where is all the money from "Save the Bay" and "Agriculture" auto license plates going?

Sincerely,
Sonny Newhall
Oakland

To the Editor:

Thanks to the greater Garrett County community for supporting the Total Biz Fulfillment's Warehouse Sale of November 5. Total sales were $4,360, and the entire proceeds will be given to the School Building Fund, Maryland Salem Children's Trust, in Grantsville. The school building fund needs $2.2 million to be raised, and about $500,000 remains to be raised to allow Salem to have future monies going toward teaching the children instead of paying a mortgage!

The TBF team was pleased to serve up to the public affordable gifts at this festive time of year, featuring dolls, games, puzzles, resin figurines, magic tricks, social stationery, and holiday paper goods. The following companies donated the goods in the sale: Corolle, Briarpatch, Country Artists, J&D Designs, Winning Moves, First for Magic, Anker, and the Great American Puzzle Factory.

Total Biz Fulfillment also would like to thank The Republican newspaper for all that they do for the greater Garrett County community! You provide a perfect combination of news articles, notices of community happenings, commerce happenings, and community needs. Lisa Broadwater wrote an excellent article that publicized the TBF Warehouse Sale, but also highlighted once again the essential community need that the Maryland Salem Children's Trust in Grantsville provides the Garrett County communities. Your advertising department did an outstanding and professional job in creating the ad. Your circulation reaches so many Garrett Countains and creates business opportunities. In these days of weather catastrophes, wars, and great human needs, there is indeed much news and happenings in Garrett County–and we get to read the latest positive and need-to-improve challenges about our community on a weekly basis. Thanks again for staff's fine work.

Our associates are already planning next year's special sale that should happen the first weekend of November 2006. In the meantime we ask that you support with the gift of your talents, time, and money the much needed school building fund of the Maryland Salem Children's Trust!

Warmest regards,
Gary Ruddell, President

To the Editor:

The war in Iraq was finds its heart in mortal sin. Many of our leaders bore numerous witness against Iraq stating that they had WMD. In fact they did not. This violates a commandment, does it not? Our nation violated a commandment and committed a mortal sin by launching a war based on faulty claims (which apparently they knew were false), and attacking a country that did not attack us and had absolutely nothing to do with 9/11 (Hussein and Bin Laden hated each other).

Proof has now emerged (via direct statements from U.S. servicemen) that the White House dropped phosphorous bombs and, perhaps, a variation of napalm on civilians in Fallujah, and probably other cities it laid under siege — and that's just what is rising to the surface at the moment (Google: U.S. white phosphorus bombs Iraq).

In short, we are using hideous and despicable weapons of mass destruction against the civilians of a nation that we claimed we invaded to save these same civilians — and us — from weapons of mass destruction (that turned out not to exist, in that country, until we started dropping them from our American planes).

Bush says we don't torture (against mountains of proof we do), at the same time VP Cheney is lobbying senators to not ban torture. How can our leaders be such transparent liars and so evil?

This has gotten beyond the revolting stage. We are in a parallel universe of lies, deception, secrecy, arrogance, and macabre horror. Who will save the good name of the United States from these horrible people who deify the rich? Who will protect us from the Armageddon they are precipitating to the glee of their fundamentalist base? Who will hold them accountable for their treason, treachery, and hypocrisy?

The only way to restore honor to our great nation is immediate impeachment and war crimes trials for this administration. Perhaps then the world will forgive us for the damage we have done and the terrorists we have created by our deceitful and murderous actions on over 100,000 innocent civilians who did nothing to us.

A Soldier's View From Iraq

Veterans Day is a very special day, and I have always tried to attend a Veterans Day ceremony since I joined the military. It is a way to honor my fellow comrades in arms, and all that they have done.

This year's Veterans Day is especially important to me. I am in a combat zone right now, and if all goes as planned, I will begin my journey home for two weeks of leave this Thursday, Nov. 10. I plan on making the most of two weeks by spending time with family and friends. I will have the chance to spend Thanksgiving with my family and feel very fortunate to have this opportunity, as most of my friends will be working here in Iraq on Thanksgiving. It will be hard to leave here, however, because I'm leaving my friends behind.

When I return to Iraq, it will be back to business. I've talked with several fellow soldiers who recently returned from leave. They all said the same thing, "It was nice to be home, but I missed this place." It's extremely hard to leave the guys, especially in a combat zone – you may never see them again.

All of us have grown close over the past year. My crew has gotten to the point of almost being a family. We live together, eat together, and work together. We depend on each other. When you are stuck inside a tank for hours on end, you talk about everything. You would think that after being with someone for a mission, many, many hours, you'd want to get away from them, but we go eat, go to the gym, then maybe sit down and watch a movie.

Combat veterans have said that you will never be closer to someone than someone whom you shared a foxhole with. It's true. These guys aren't my friends, they are my brothers.

I want to thank a special person who gave me a small item that I have kept with me since I received it. Chuck Nolan gave me a small American flag that he carried with him in Vietnam. He said that it was a good luck charm for him, and that it kept him safe.

The flag now has seen action in Iraq. I carry it with me on every mission, and nothing has happened to anyone in my tank. I carry it with me in a small Bible that I keep in my pocket.

It seems funny that we fought the same type of war – a war that has no sides, no uniformed enemy, and no front-lines.

– Sgt. Bryan Carlson

Fred Polce Jr., director of Core, said Diana Boiler of his agency has worked hard to put together a program that will be both meaningful and memorable to those attending this free meeting.

In addition to Westray's presentation, participants will discuss state grants that Boller and others have received for suicide prevention. GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE VISITS OAKLAND – Montgomery County executive Douglas M. Duncan, a gubernatorial candidate, stopped by Oakland last Friday. After graduating from Columbia University, Duncan worked for Montgomery County's criminal justice commission and then spent 13 years in the private sector working in the telecommunications industry. In 1982, he was elected to the Rockville City Council, where he served for three terms, and was then elected mayor for three terms. The 50-year-old Democrat is currently serving his third term as the top elected official of Maryland's largest jurisdiction. The Washington Post describes Duncan's governing style as "county leadership that knows when to quit mulling and start moving." One of Duncan's top priorities is education. "Schools are the key," he said in his gubernatorial announcement speech three weeks ago. "If you have good schools, good jobs will come." He will soon unveil his first major policy for better education, which includes implementing an "education first approach to the state budget, making college education affordable for more hard-working students in our state, and building a genuine public/private partnership to increase parental involvement in our schools." He and his wife Barbara live in Rockville. They have five children. More information about the candidate and his gubernatorial announcement speech are available online at dougduncan.com.

State Officials Endorse Stricter Sex-Crime Laws

by Kim Hart
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS — Maryland Attorney General J. Joseph Curran Jr. on Wednesday proposed stricter laws for sex offenders, saying that increased monitoring requirements will make it possible to more closely track criminals.

"We need to make sure we have a reliable registration process," Curran said before a legislative committee. "Otherwise it's completely useless."

He proposed requiring that all sex-offenders be monitored for a minimum of three years after being released from jail or parole. At that point, a specialized team of law enforcement officials and trained counselors will decide whether to continue supervision for additional years.

Under current state law, people convicted of sex-crimes are required to register their residence with the state, but only the most serious offenders, like sexually violent predators, are monitored after their jail time or parole ends.

Watching the offenders more closely for longer periods of time, Curran said, will keep the state's records more complete so that residents can be better informed of the locations of criminals in their community. Currently, about 3,000 of the 4,300 registered sex offenders in Maryland are not monitored.

"Do I know where all of them are?" he asked. "No, not really. Some are where they're supposed to be and some aren't."

Curran's proposals mirror those of other state officials concerned with the increasing number of sexually violent criminals that go unwatched.

In August, Gov. Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. pushed to increase penalties for the most dangerous sex offenders to a maximum of life imprisonment. Baltimore Mayor Martin O'Malley, a Democratic candidate for governor, suggested that convicted child molesters should wear tracking bracelets for life. Both endorsed increasing the charge for failing to register a correct address with the state from a misdemeanor to a felony.

"If a penalty for an offense is a life sentence and a person does not serve a full sentence, they should be supervised for life," said Alan Friedman, a policy advisor to Ehrlich.

The Maryland chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said it wanted to see the details of the proposed legislation before commenting.

Doug Duncan, the Montgomery County executive and another leading Democratic candidate for governor, has accused both O'Malley and Ehrlich of politicizing the issue.

"The political gamesmanship that is being played does nothing to prevent attacks or help the victims of these horrendous crimes," Duncan said in a statement issued last August and reported by The (Baltimore) Sun.

Laura Ahearn, executive director of the New York-based child abuse prevention advocacy group called Parent's for Megan's Law, said lifetime supervision is the best way to cut down on sex crimes toward children.

"It's a very proactive approach when the state is willing to make the financial commitment to monitor an offender for life," she said. "It's what we've been lobbying for in all of the states."

Curran also supported using satellite tracking bracelets to keep a closer eye on all sex offenders, but noted that it is just one tool that should be used as part of a multi-faceted team approach involving parole officers, treatment providers and polygraph test administrators to keep convicts on the right track.

"We're dealing with troubled people who've done bad things and they're not incarcerated, so the next best thing is to monitor them," he said.

But Wilson Parran, chief information officer for the Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services warns that, while using satellite tracking devices may help law enforcement find the criminals, the real challenge will be using that information "to prevent these offenders from committing the crime again."

As of Friday, there are four sexually violent predators — the most serious designation — in Maryland, and one of them is in violation of state registration requirements, said David Wilonski, assistant director of the department's Criminal Justice Information System.

The state can supervise the small number of more dangerous criminals, but it will become more difficult if new laws require additional offenders to be monitored for years at a time, he said. The new measures may actually provide more ways for them "to beat the system" if there is a shortage of monitoring staff.

Curran proposed using technology more efficiently in order to lessen the load on law enforcement personnel. He suggests sending e-mails to residents and police officers to community meetings to inform people that a sex offender has moved into their area. Using other states as a model, he said he wants to set up a Web site where residents can look up the addresses of offenders and directly contact their parole officer with new information about their whereabouts or behavior.

"Police don't have to be the only resource — we can all be a resource," he said.

Parran is confident people will take advantage of such a Web site. Every week, about 200,000 people visit the state's current site that lists all of the state's sex offenders, and about 11,000 people visit a site that shows the picture of all offenders who are in violation of state law.

Curran has already arranged for his proposals to be introduced to both houses of the General Assembly in January. During the last legislative session, three bills passed that strengthened registration requirements for many levels of sex offenders.

"We now need to make sure that they are not only registered by monitored by trained parole agents," he said.

On November 13, 1999, six years ago, my son was killed as the result of a gun accident. "Not my son, please God, no!" You think that something like this could never happen to you. But it can. Some days it seems like yesterday and other days it seems like a lifetime has passed since I last held DeReck in my arms, breathed his scent, and heard his laugh. I think, please God help me through another day.

When reading this memorial, please Keep Safety First when handling a gun or out hunting with others. DeReck's death was on Youth Deer Hunting Day. This year it is on Saturday, Nov. 12. Please remember to be careful. Guns can change your life in A blink of an eye.

News Shocks Area SUV And Van Buyers

Morgantown, WV.,

Good news! Major media sources proclaim gas prices are on their way back down to $2.00 and SUV and van buyers are in for quite a shock. SUV buyers typically purchased their vehicles because they wanted safety for their family as well as room and comfort, but the media's incessant harping on gas prices, and other negative news has scared buyers out of the market, and according to one auto insider this story has a huge silver lining. Mike Wood of the New Bortz KIA had this to say, " Due to serious slacking demand for the SUV and van, manufacturers are scrambling to move inventories and they're doing it with phenomenal offers like I've never seen before. Imagine, a couple new vehicles I have in mind is the KIA Sorento and KIA Sedona that has over $7,000 in factory rebates and other incentives. These savings are so dramatic they swallow up years of high fuel prices which are already on their way back down to below $2.00 a gallon. I think the manufacturer has over reacted, and that's a huge silver lining. You don't have to sacrifice your family's safety for gas prices."

It was quite a surprise to know that the New Bortz KIA is selling safe vehicles with some models turning up to 40 M.P.G And better. Wow! And the good news doesn't end there. Again Mr. Wood added, "Price is obviously a major issue to the auto buyer… A concern we're keenly aware of at the New Bortz KIA. We decided long ago that we would be fiercely competitive when jt comes to price. If you have seen any of Bortz KIA TV ads you know we are serious. We call it a low price guarantee, our customers call it peace-of-mind knowing that they are getting the right price and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty. This month we are sweetening the deal even more by offering a minimum 110% of Kelley Blue Book value for trade-ins."

The New Bortz KIA is located at 696 Fairmont road in Westover. Phone: 304-291-5090 or toll free at 866-313-5998.

The New Bortz KIA alao has a quantity of previously titled 2005 KIA Sedona's priced from $14,995, that's more than $10,000 off the original M.S.R.P.

With prices this low and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty you don't have to sacrifice your family's safety, room and comfort because of high gas prices.

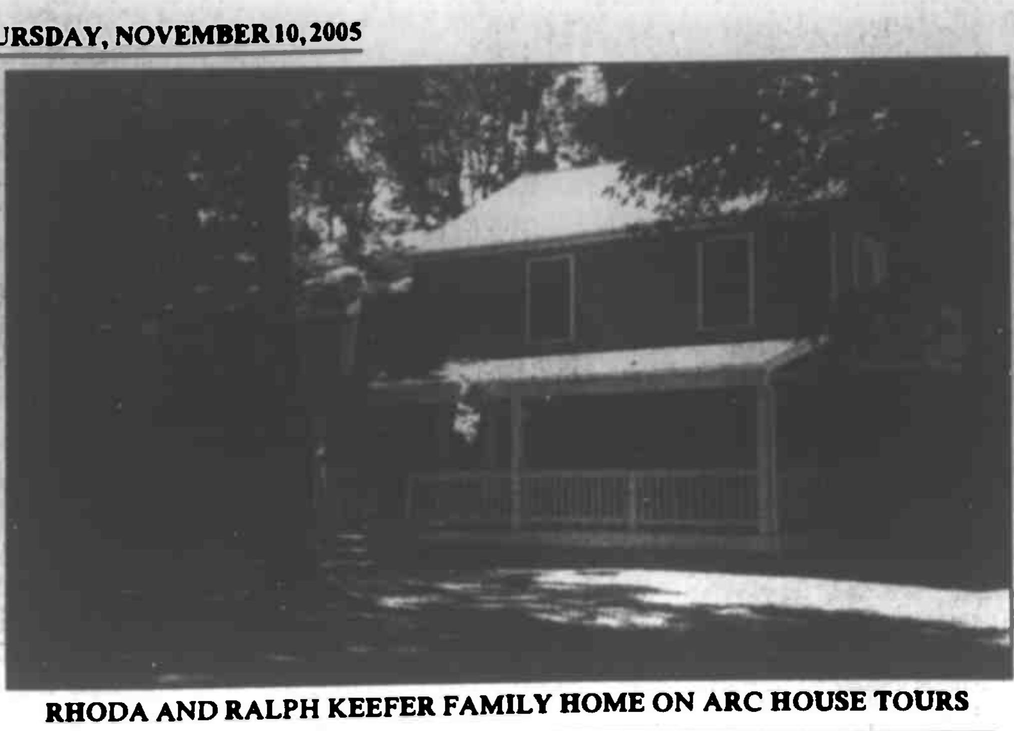
Red Cross House Tours To Include Keefer Home

The Western Potomac Chapter of the American Red Cross will host the 14th annual Home for the Holidays House Tours on the first weekend in December. The home of Rhoda and Ralph Keefer is one of five homes featured this year.

The Keefer home, located at 605 Southern Pines Drive, was built in 1982 and expanded in 2002 to accommodate the Keefers' large family of one biological child and five adopted children. The home will be decorated for the holidays with a theme of "celebrating Christmas through the eyes of a child."



RHODA AND RALPH KEEFER FAMILY HOME ON ARC HOUSE TOURS

A number of antiques and family heirlooms will be on display, including a dry sink that came from Rhoda's childhood home. The 100-year-old piece was part of the furniture in a playhouse of Rhoda's and her sisters. A 1950s hobby horse made by Amish bishop Joe Yoder will also be on display. It is a reproduction of a hobby horse of Bishop Yoder's that was made by Rhoda's great-great-grandfather, Joel B. Miller (1822-1885).

A marble rack, another antique toy, will be featured. It was made in the 1930s by Rhoda's father, the late Floyd J. Miller. Also on display will be a hickory rocking chair and a porch swing designed especially for the Keefers' porch.

Exhibited on the rocking chair will be a set of dolls owned by Rhoda's mother, Fannie Zook. The dolls, Minerva and Nona, are dressed in the same clothes they wore when Mrs. Zook played with them as a child. The dolls were made by the Keefer children's great-grandmother, Ida Bender. She ordered the heads and then created the bodies and sewed the clothes.

A family room with a fireplace is in the downstairs of the house. Upstairs, guests will tour the master bedroom, four regular bedrooms, and three bathrooms. A Christmas tree will be found in each room of the house, with the one in the family room decorated with school photos and ornaments made by the children. As guests go through the house, videos of the Keefer children's past Christmas mornings will play on the television for all to view.

Tickets for the tours, including all ages, are $8 in advance and $10 on the days of the event. They will soon be on sale at the following pharmacies: Proudfoot's, Gregg's, and Deep Creek, as well as Arrowhead Market. All proceeds from the ticket sales will go to the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The directions to the various homes will be printed on the back of the ticket, and directional signs will be placed at intersections to help guests find the locales. Local businesses have donated a variety of items that will be raffled off at each location. Guests will be asked to remove their shoes before going into the homes, and no photographing or videotaping will be allowed.

The other homes on this year's tour are those of Ruth and Robert Hinebaugh, Kevin and Cindy Heselbach, Dan and Bobbi Fornear, and Chuck and Linda Wieland. Feature stories on each are being published in The Republican each week leading up to the event.

Family Literacy Night, Fun Fest Slated Next Week

A Family Literacy Night will be held for Head Start and Judy Center Child Care Partners, parents, and children on Wednesday, Nov. 16, from 5:30 until 7:30 p.m. at the Mary Browning Senior Center, 104 East Center Street in Oakland.

Garrett County Community Action notes that the date for this event has changed. It was previously advertised for Nov. 17.

There will be a light supper followed by a parent-training session facilitated by Nancy Fazenbaker and a parent/child "make and take." Each family will receive a free book.

The Wrap Around Child Care (WACC) program, which is housed at the Overlook Judy Center, is also sponsoring a family literacy event called a Family Fun Festival. The festival will be held for WACC children and their families on Thursday, Nov. 17, from 5 until 7 p.m. at the Judy Center, 41 Highview Drive, Oakland.

Activities will include games, art show, crafts, and storytelling with Dr. Gail Herman, professional storyteller. Light snacks will be served.

Parents who are interested in attending any of these events or would like more information about how to read to their children may call the Judy Center at 301-334-4211, ext.111.

All Community Action Early Childhood Programs focus on family involvement with a concentration on family literacy, according to an agency spokesperson. For more information about the various family literacy opportunities, individuals may contact Barbara Homyak at 301-334-4211, ext. 119.

The network of abolitionists and safe houses [illegible] slaves escape to the North was called the Underground Railroad. The "stations" along the route were the safe houses. The "conductors" were those who guided the escapees, and the "passengers" were the runaways themselves. It is estimated that 100,000 passengers ran from enslavement between the American Revolution and the Civil War. For the quilt, pictured above, the Underground Railroad pattern was used with contemporary fabrics. Raffle tickets are available at Rudy's. SOUTHERN RAM HONORED IN NOVEMBER – Matt Steyer was named the November Perkins Random Acts of Maturity Student of the Month for Southern Garrett High School. Steyer was nominated by Erin White for his work with the school play Bullies. "He has been particularly helpful with those students in need of understanding the ramifications of bullying, both how to deal with the action and why it is not acceptable. The Arts

Ireta Skipper Sweitzer Art On Display At GC

The Art Gallery of Garrett College is currently featuring an exhibition of artworks by local artist Ireta Skipper Sweitzer. The exhibition is on display from now through Dec. 8, and represents a retrospective of her life's work in art, according to Ron Skidmore, art department chairman.

An artist's reception is planned for Friday evening, Nov. 18, from 7 to 9 p.m. The public is invited.

The show includes a variety of media: oil paintings, acrylic paintings, pastels, etchings, drawings with ink or charcoal, and a stone sculpture.

Sweitzer is a Garrett County native who can trace her family tree back to 1763 to John Friend of Friendsville. She currently resides in Crabtree Valley, where she maintains an art studio in her home. Although primarily self-taught, she studied art with Catherine Baker while a student at Oakland High School, with Michael Zuckerman at GCC, and at the Students Art League in New York City. She was featured with artists from all over the world at the International Sculpture Symposium near Harper's Ferry, W.Va.

In 1995, her pastel drawing titled "Renaissance" won first place in the "Maryland You Are Beautiful" art competition sponsored by the office of the governor. Sweitzer last displayed her work at Garrett College in June of 1996 and drew one of the largest crowds in the gallery's history, Skidmore noted.

This exhibition is made possible in part by a grant from the Garrett County Arts Council and the Maryland State Arts Council. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and on evenings and weekends during special events. For more information, persons may contact the Garrett College art department at 301-387-3024.

THE ART OF IRETA SKIPPER SWEITZER is currently on display through Dec. 8 at the Garrett College Art Gallery. Two of her works are pictured here. Sweitzer creates her art in a variety of media, including oil paintings, acrylic paintings, pastels, etchings, drawings with ink or charcoal, and a stone sculpture. An artist's reception is planned for Sweitzer, who is a Garrett County native, on Friday, Nov. 18, from 7 to 9 p.m. The public is invited. See story.

Ordinary Heroes

by Scott Turow

Review by Terri Schlichenmeyer

c. 2005, Farrar, Straus, and Giroux $25, 371 pages

When you were a child, didn't you love hearing stories about your parents when they were younger? They might have told you about games they played, schoolteachers they liked (or disliked), or memories of your grandparents. Maybe they even told you stories of their courtship or how they met.

Trust me on this: You don't know everything.

That's a hard lesson for Stewart Dubinsky to learn, but in the new novel Ordinary Heroes by Scott Turow, he's about to find out things about his father that some wish had stayed buried.

After more than 60 years of cigarettes, David Dubin is dead. David was a lawyer; calm, deliberate, and taciturn; always letting his wife, Gilda, do the talking. He had been a judge advocate general in Europe during World War II, and had always been reluctant to speak even of those years. So when David's son Stewart finds a box of old letters while cleaning out his father's closet, Stewart is puzzled by what he reads.

During the war, Dubin had a sweetheart back home, to whom he was engaged. The letters were first full of love and longing, then spoke of anguish and a broken heart. Since childhood, Stewart had heard the story of his parents' meeting at a concentration camp where his father felt love-at-first-sight for a liberated inmate. But these letters, this women Grace... Stewart was intrigued.

True to his love of digging for truth, former journalist Stewart began probing for the real story of his father, a story that the letters only teased. He petitioned the government and searched for people who had known David Dubin. He spent hours in libraries, excitedly reading classified documents. This story of his father could become the book that Stewart had always wanted to write. When he finally found his father's lawyer, now an ancient man in a nursing home, Stewart got the shock of his life.

The book had already been written. It was written by his father, nearly 60 years ago. And the truth was full of heroism, devotion, and a secret that David Dubin hoped his children would never know.

Oh, my. What a book.

Based very loosely and partially on true events, Ordinary Heroes is kind of like The Greatest Generation in novel form, and with a hint of mystery, lots of World War II details, and a dash of love story. In this book, author Scott Turow ekes out information in "real time"; you see what's going on just as his character Stewart learns it. While I had an inkling that I knew what the secret was, I was never really sure until the end. An end which – incidentally – came at 2 in the morning, because I just couldn't stop reading.

If you are a child or grandchild of someone who remembers World War II, or if you just want to read a finely crafted novel that you won't want to put down, then this is the book for you. I think you'll find that Ordinary Heroes is an extraordinary book.

"The staff of the Southern Marching Band is incredibly proud of what our students have accomplished this year," said Richard Clever, director. "Through illnesses to band members and staff, and through scheduling problems, it seems as though each obstacle was treated as a challenge rather than a hindrance.

"Our kids fought, they scratched, they clawed, and they have another chapter championship to show for it. Now it is on to the Atlantic Coast Championships to represent Southern and, in fact, all of Garrett County," the director said. Clever is assisted by Duane Salisbury.

The Atlantic Coast Championships will be held at Scranton on Saturday, Nov. 12.

"The staff and I want to thank our students for all their hard work," Clever said. "We also say 'thank you' to our boosters who have worked tirelessly to make this season a success. We appreciate you all."

Leading up to last weekend's Chapter XIII competition, the Southern band fared well at two other contests. The marchers competed at the Avonworth High School Tournament of Bands on Oct. 29 in Pittsburgh, Pa. There were three bands competing in Group I.

Southern came in second with a score of 85.2, barely edged out by North Catholic High School Band, which earned an 85.8. The Crestview High School trailed in third place with a score of 77.4.

Southern's band won the specialty award for Best Percussion at the Avonworth contest.

On Nov. 3, Southern competed in the Big Apple Tournament of Bands, also held at Musselman High School.

Four bands competed in Group 1, and Southern won with a score of 84.40, trouncing Westmar's second place score of 78.85. Taking third in the competition was Northern Garrett with a score of 77.05.

Specialty awards won by Southern in this contest were those for Best Color Guard, Best Music, Best Marching, Best Percussion, and Best Drum Major.

ACCEPTED INTO PRESTIGIOUS GROUP – Mary Lou Bauer stands near one of her award-winning watercolors in her Swanton home. She was recently named a Signature Artist Member of the Baltimore Watercolor Society. Established in 1885, the non-profit group now encompasses five states, including New York, and is considered one of the most prestigious art organizations in the country. The society encourages, educates, and promotes professional excellence in the creation and development of original works of art executed in water-based media. To be named a Signature Artist Member, applicants submit four framed examples of their recent work, which must receive a favorable jury review from the society's board of governors. Bauer said she was very happy for the recognition "since it brings artistic viewpoints to the Garrett County region."

and school administrators. No explosive device was found, according to police. The students were then dismissed.

A follow-up investigation revealed that the call was placed to the Relay system through a computer with an IP address linked to the Jefferson County school system in Jefferson County, Ky. Authorities said they also discovered this same computer system was used to place additional calls, one of which was a bomb threat to a high school in Texas.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been contacted to assist the Garrett Bureau of Investigation with this case. According to GBI, the goal is to identify the individual(s) involved and to successfully bring them to prosecution. The individual(s) involved will be subject to felony charges, as well as thousands of dollars of restitution to the Garrett County Board of Education.

An accurate estimation has not been obtained; however, Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent, told police that with the loss of meals already cooked at the time of the bomb threat, the lost time of teachers, and the additional bus runs that had to be made, the estimate will be substantial, police said.

After 19 Seasons, Tom Bosley Says, "I'm The Lucky One"

Coach Pacella Takes Over Ram Program

by Don Sincell

Next Tuesday, Nov. 15, will be a tough day for Tom Bosley. That's the day that practice officially begins for the Southern High School varsity boys' basketball team; a day that for 19 seasons Bosley was on the Rams' floor giving his players their initial preseason talk about what his expectations were for the season.

After 305 victories in 454 games, a .671 winning percentage, five 20-win seasons, three area titles, five Western Maryland Interscholastic League championships, two Potomac Valley Conference championships, two regional titles, two state tournament appearances, and a whole lot of soul searching, Bosley decided to announce his retirement as the Ram mentor this past summer, turning the reins of the program over to fellow coach and long-time friend Paul Pacella.

"It's time," Bosley said. "Immediately after our last game last year, I never dreamed at that it would be my last season. But as summer approached, I realized I just did not have the same level of excitement when it came time to travel to Altoona (Pa.) and the Cumberland summer leagues. Without that level of excitement, I just feel it would not be fair to the kids in the program for me to continue. So really, the time is right, and I feel okay about not coaching."

The Southern alum (class of 1971) and former collegiate player for both Garrett Community College and Frostburg State took over the Southern varsity program in 1978, holding the job until 1982 when he accepted the head coaching position at Garrett Community College. After spending three successful seasons with the Lakers, Bosley ultimately returned in 1989 to lead the Ram program, and has been there ever since.

Over the course of Bosley's 19 years at Southern, Ram teams have averaged 16 victories per season. In one four-year stretch (1998-02), Bosley's squads amassed an amazing 83 victories in 100 games.

Last year, in his final season, the Rams finished 17-7.

But Bosley is quick to share the credit for the Rams' years of success with many other people.

"The way I look at, I'm the lucky one," he said. "For more than 20 years I have been able to do what I had wanted to do since junior high school.

"Because of the influence of Coach Tom Kuhn (Bosley's coach while a player for Southern), I became a student of basketball, and wanted to learn all I could about it. Then I was fortunate at the college level to have coaches like Dermis Fearnow and Don Douds at Garrett, and Kurt Wolfe at Frostburg State, all of whom enhanced my desire to keep learning and to pursue a coaching position.

"Then I was so incredibly lucky to land at Southern High School and immediately have the opportunity to be an assistant for Coach Don Stemple. I really can't put into words how educational and rewarding it was to work with Don, and what a great influence he had on me," he said.

"As for the many accomplishments of our program over the years, though, the credit largely goes to a great group of assistants," he said. "We have so much consistency in the program, with the same guys returning year after year to coach. Really, I was just one of three head coaches that we had for the varsity team, with Dave Bender (former coach at Northern) and Paul Pacella (former Union coach) on staff.

"And we had Matt Redinger with us for 12 years, someone I consider a basketball genius who knows the game inside and out. My brother Jim as jayvee head coach has been a great asset, as his record speaks for itself about his ability to prepare teams and work with kids. Jon Hegeman has done a super job as our freshman coach for the past 10 years.

"So our feeder system is very strong because of all of the continuity, the consistency, and the abilities of so many people. Plus these guys have been so loyal to me all these years," he said.

"Finally, there are very few programs that have the level of community support that we do at Southern," he continued. "The businesses, the media, the parents... so many do so much to support us.

"So again, I am the lucky one," he said.

Bosley also noted the steadfast support of Southern principal and former football coach Tom Woods, who praised Bosley for his dedication, not only as a coach, but also as a teacher and mentor to students.

"Tom has coached year-round and has helped kids in every sport and in every walk of life in our school," he said. "His commitment and dedication to the school, his players, and to sports, particularly basketball, are unmatched.

"Very few coaches prepare for opponents the way Tom always did. He scouted teams repeatedly, filmed them, watched game films every night, and always had his team ready to play," Woods said, which was obviously one of the keys to the program's many years of success.

"He's also a great classroom teacher, as most great coaches are," Woods added.

The transition to a new head coach should be a relatively smooth process for the Rams, with Paul Pacella stepping into the role.

"Paul is also a student of the game, and he will do fine," Bosley said. "He is such a great 'people person,' he is very intelligent, he has many years of experience, and he is a real workaholic when it comes to basketball. So that combination will result in the continued success of the program."

Pacella played high school ball at Mountaineer (now Tucker County) High School, and is a 1980 graduate of Fairmont State College.

He began his coaching career right out of college, starting as the junior varsity coach and assistant varsity coach at Union High School near Mt. Storm, W.Va.

He became varsity head coach at Union in 1983, and during a five-year tenure led his teams to sectional titles in 1985, '86, and '87.

The Tigers were regional champions in 1986 (first ever at Union), and Pacella's 1987 team set a school record of 18 victories.

Pacella was hired as a teacher at Southern Middle School in 1987, and immediately joined the SHS football coaching staff of Tom Woods, as well as the junior varsity basketball coaching staff. Since 1993 he has served as a varsity assistant to Tom Bosley and, since 2001, has also served as junior varsity assistant with Jim Bosley.

Outside the school system, Pacella was the organizer and first director of the Union Little League baseball program in Mt. Storm, served as the Union Youth Basketball League director for 20 years, and has served as the Oakland Service Club Basketball League director since 2001.

"I know I have very big shoes to fill," Pacella said, "but fortunately I have had the opportunity to work with Tom for many years, and I have always considered him a mentor. I will certainly incorporate some of my own aspects and philosophies, but the basics of the program will be maintained, including being fundamentally sound, always playing hard, keeping our strong defensive philosophy, and most importantly, representing our community by the same high standards that were set by Tom, Coach Kuhn, Coach Stemple, and others."

Pacella said that his players have responded well following their shock of Bosley's retirement announcement.

"Certainly it was a shock for them," he said. "But kids like Evan Lantz and Joe Tressler have really stepped up as team leaders, and I have just been thrilled at how well the players have responded this fall. I'm so pleased with their strong work ethic."

Pacella said that he intends to continue to bend the ear of his former coaching "boss."

"I will always use Tom as a resource," he said. "I'd be crazy not to. We've met many times this fall to talk about many things, which is making the transition so much smoother."

Not only will Bosley be gone from the program, but most of the aforementioned coaches have also departed, for a variety of reasons. Redinger is now an assistant at Garrett College. Bender has retired because of some needed surgery, plus he wants to be able to spend more time watching his son play collegiate ball. Hegeman has departed as freshman coach, at least temporarily, to pursue a degree in education.

"Thank goodness I still have Jim Bosley heading up the jayvee program!" Pacella said.

"But I have a great group of experienced people besides Jim who will be working with me. Brad Frantz and former Northern coach Mike Friend are helping Jim. Bill Ewing is working with the freshman team, and Dave Martin (long-time assistant at Garrett College) and Ryan White are helping me at the varsity level."

Pacella reiterated Bosley's comments about the support of the school administration and the community.

"Tom Woods has been so supportive in this transition, and the support for Southern basketball in the community is overwhelming. It's just not like that in most areas. Like Tom, I feel very lucky, and am excited about our upcoming season," he said.

STEPPING DOWN, aftar a long and highly successful career as haad coach of the Southern High School varalty basketball team, is Tom Boaley, who over 19 seasons as the Ram mentor won 305 of 454 games coached, along with numerous league, area, and regional honors. He is pictured above in action, going over game strategy during one of the literally thousands of timeouts he experienced in his career. Among the greatest of his many personal accolades was being named the National Federation of High School Coaches Association's Mideast Sectional (encompassing seven states and the District of Columbia) Boys' Basketball Coach of the Year in 2003, the presentation of which by Ned Sparks, executive director of the Maryland Public Secondary Schools Athletic Association, is pictured below. Bosley announced his retirement from the position early this past summer, and taking over the reins is long-time fellow coach Paul Pacella, pictured below right. See story.

Jim Bosley Relinquishes Reins After 26 Years As Rams' Baseball Coach

Jim Bosley, Garrett County's all-time winningest high school varsity baseball coach, submitted his resignation from the Southern High baseball program this week, ending a stellar 26-year run at the Rams' helm.

"This was the toughest decision I've ever had to make, but time constraints have made it impossible for me to dedicate adequate time to the sufficient running of the SHS baseball program," Bosley said. "One of the main reasons for that is my son Cory will be playing baseball at Garrett College this spring, and if I were to continue coaching at Southern I'd never get to see him play. I think any father can understand that reasoning."

Since taking the reins of Ram baseball in 1980, Bosley has accumulated a career 386-116 varsity won-lost record for a phenomenal .769 winning percentage. SHS's squads under his tenure played in two state championship contests, made five state semifinal appearances, and claimed five Maryland Class 1A West Region crowns.

Furthermore, since the "Area" designations were instituted in 1987, the Rams have taken 10 of 19 Area titles, as well as 9 of the 10 WMIL (Western Maryland Interscholastic League) championships stemming from the time that honor was created.

"We've had a lot of great sports programs at Southern High over the years, but Coach Bosley took SHS baseball to an elite level" commented Southern principal Tom Woods. "His dedication on and off the field produced a program that commands statewide respect.

"One of the things people elsewhere don't realize about baseball in Garrett County is the factor our weather plays. Coach Bosley could take a squad that had next to zero opportunities to get on the practice field before the start of the regular season and turn them into winners immediately. That's a tribute to the fundamentals he taught his players, and the discipline he instilled in them to learn something quickly and right," observed Woods.

"I've been blessed with a lot of outstanding players and coaches, and all successful programs rely on those two ingredients," commented Bosley, who noted that one of his proudest accomplishments was the number of SHS players formerly under his tutelage who went on to play at the college level, and the number of players who went on to become "outstanding young men."

The ranks of college baseball players, past and present, who played high school ball at Southern under Bosley reads like a Who's Who list of area baseball. In the past four years alone the Rams' program has graduated the following athletes to current college ranks: Cory Bosley, an infielder at Garrett College; catcher Billy Reams and pitcher Chris Smith at Allegany College of Maryland; Brad Reese, an outfielder at Frostburg State University; and Tobi Stoner and Bryson Meyers, who pitch for Davis and Elkins College and Marshall University, respectively. In addition, ex-Ram baseball player Brad Palmer is currently playing Division I football for the highly ranked West Virginia University Mountaineers.

Southern sporting successes involving Coach Bosley have not been limited to the baseball diamond, as in 14 years as a junior varsity and freshman football coach his teams recorded a .660 winning percentage; in four years as a boys' freshman basketball coach his squads netted a .617 winning percentage; and his 15 years on Rams boys' junior varsity basketball bench have resulted in a .763 winning percentage. He will continue coaching jayvee basketball at Southern this year.

"I'll certainly miss my current baseball players, as well as assistant coaches Dan Holler and Steve Weaver," said Bosley. "Without dedicated adults like Coach Holler and Coach Weaver, and former assistant coaches like Terry Helbig, Fred Colaw, and Ed Wildesen, our program would be nowhere close to what it is.

"I feel that I'm leaving the Southern High baseball program on an extremely solid foundation," Bosley stated. "It's been a great run, and I will always be grateful for the opportunity that Southern High School has given me to get to know so many fine young men and adults."

Note: A feature retrospective on Coach Bosley's career will appear in a future issue.

Rams Succumb In Second Half To Mountaineers, 20-8

It was a relatively even contest through the first half of action between the Southern High School Rams and heavily favored Liberty Harrison of Clarksburg, W.Va., last Friday evening, but the home-standing Mountaineers took the lead and control of the game in the second half to record a 20-8 victory, their ninth win in 10 starts this season.

The loss was the sixth in nine games for the Rams, who will conclude their season this Friday at Northern.

Coach Fred Gregg and his staff were wary of the outstanding abilities of Liberty's skill-position athletes, and that concern proved to be genuine, as running back Eric Roby finished the evening with 180 yards on 29 carries, plus scoring all of his team's points, running for three touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

The Ram defense kept Roby and company out of the end zone in the first quarter, which ended in a scoreless tie.

The Mountaineers took a 6-0 lead with 6:22 left in the first half, as Roby capped a drive with a two-yard touchdown run. The conversion kick was no good.

The Rams took the lead late in the second quarter when Bret DeWitt broke loose on a 24-yard touchdown carry, and then ran successfully for the two-point conversion to give Southern an 8-6 lead with 2:38 to play in the half.

Roby's second TD of the evening, scored on a 15-yard run at the 9:59 mark of the third stanza, put the Mountaineers on top for good.

Roby added an insurance touchdown about midway through the fourth period, this time on a 14-yard carry, and then ran for the extra two points to conclude the scoring for the night.

DeWitt also had an excellent night carrying the ball against the Mountaineers, rated sixth in West Virginia's AA standings, as he finished with 134 yards and a touchdown on 21 carries.

Liberty's senior quarterback Mark Broadwater had a solid night throwing the ball, connecting on nine of 15 passes for 108 yards.

Leading the Southern defensive effort were Andrew VanBogelen and Anthony Schrock, who were each credited with 11 tackles.

"We were not upset with our kids' overall effort," stated Coach Gregg. "Defensively we did a good job of containing them in the first half, and offensively we moved the ball well. But we had only three possessions in the first half, and we just couldn't stay with them in the second half."

Gregg noted the performance of Roby, but felt that quarterback Broadwater played just as big a role in Liberty's win.

"He just did an excellent job of running their offense, which is what he has done all year," Gregg said.

"We were hoping to be able to control the line of scrimmage a little better than we did," he continued, "but Liberty is a very good football team. Their linebackers were a little better than we had anticipated, plus our defense was on the field for a long time."

The Rams will once again be the underdog this week when they travel to the Cove to take on the 6-2 Northern Huskies, with "Garrett County bragging rights" on the line.

It has often been said by local fans that records mean very little when it comes to the annual Northern-Southern match-up, and history has proven on several occasions that such is an accurate statement, with the underdog often emerging as the victor.

"Northern has a vast array of weapons," Gregg said. "Halfback Tyler Warn (senior, 5-11, 180) leads that arsenal, and Casey Kamp (senior quarterback, 5-6, 140) does an excellent job running their wishbone offense. He hides the ball well, and he's a fast, tough runner himself, despite his relatively small size.

"Then they have a big, bruising fullback in Corey Carr (junior, 5-11, 225)," he added.

"We also think their center, Corey Yoder (senior, 6-1, 175) is very good."

The Huskies' 5-3 defensive unit is led by sophomore nose guard Matt Mason (5-8, 205), Carr at a middle linebacker position, and junior Brock Glotfelty (6-1, 220) at tackle.

"They do a lot of creative things on defense," Gregg said.

The Huskies are physically bigger than the Rams, "but we've faced that situation almost all year," said Gregg, "and that's not a great concern.

"They are also faster than we are overall," he said. "Warn is definitely faster than anyone we have on our team, so obviously we are going to have to try to do everything we can to keep him from getting in the open field."

Gregg said that his squad came out of the Liberty game with only minor bumps and bruises, so the Rams should be at full strength Friday night.

Adam VanBogelen, who missed much of the season recovering from a serious foot injury, will be making his third start as Southern's quarterback, with his brother Andrew playing more as a running back in the Rams' three-back set.

"Andrew will still be taking some snaps, but he is a very versatile athlete and a good, strong runner," Gregg said. "So he will be in the backfield a lot, as will Bret DeWitt, Nick Gregg, and Jeremy Gregory."

Gregg said he expects the usual high level of enthusiasm for Friday's big county clash.

"No matter what your record is at this point in the season, this game is special," he said. "Obviously we would like to wrap up with a win over our county rival, and over a very good team."

Friday's kickoff at Northern is set for 7 p.m.

Huskies Aim To Shore Up Playoff Chances With Win Over Southern

There's a lot more than just cross-county bragging rights riding on tomorrow night's Northern vs. Southern High varsity football game for NHS's Huskies, who must come away with a win in order to have a shot at making the upcoming Class 1A West Region playoffs. If Northern wins – and Fort Hill (6-3) loses to top-ranked Allegany (9-0) tomorrow – the Huskies (6-2) will lay claim to the fourth seed slot in the region's post-season bracketing.

Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m. tomorrow night at Northern High, with Senior Night festivities to take place before the contest and during the halftime intermission, where the 1955 NHS football team will be among the honorees (see below for details).

The Huskies' sole route to the playoffs must go through the Rams, who have lost their last three outings to some very strong opponents. Despite struggling in the won-lost column, Southern is "not your typical 3-6 team," as Husky coach Phil Carr put it this week. "You can throw the records out for this game every time, especially tomorrow, because this year's match-up is about as even as it has been in a long time," the Northern skipper observed.

The conflict will be likely be decided by two factors, according to Carr: the showdown along the line of scrimmage, and the turnover ratio.

"Southern's line has been steadily improving, and is now playing quite well and with a lot of confidence," the coach said. "Like us, the Rams are all about executing your game plan, which begins at the line of scrimmage. It's a matter of 'what you see is what you get,' and you just have to go out and do it.

"The same thing holds true for the turnover differential; the team that forces more turnovers than it commits is going to have the edge. You have to go out there and make turnovers happen, while protecting the ball when you have it."

Carr remarked that the Huskies are concerned with the Rams' backfield, which mainly runs out of a two-back I formation with senior fullback Nick Gregg (5-9, 186) and halfback Bret DeWitt (6-1, 164) lining up behind junior quarterback Adam VanBogelen (6-0, 174). At times SHS shifts into a three-back power formation, with either senior Andrew VanBogelen (6-2, 188) or classmate Jeremy Gregory (5-11, 167) joining Gregg at a second fullback spot in an inverted wishbone set. Southern's passing game has a legitimate threat in junior split end Ryan DeWitt (6-3, 166).

Southern's 5-3 defense is anchored by a strong linebacking corps of Andrew VanBogelen in the middle, flanked by Bret DeWitt and Gregg. The Rams play an aggressive brand of defense, and the linebackers are known to come after opposing quarterbacks with some effective blitzing schemes. Much like the SHS offensive line, the Rams' defensive front has been steadily improving over the year, Carr noted.

"We've beaten Southern in our last three straight meetings, making for our longest win streak against SHS in our program's history," stated Carr. "We know Coach Gregg and his Ram players are going to be pumped up to put a stop to that.

"It's going to be a real knock-down, drag-out battle."

SENIOR NIGHT FESTIVITIES

Tomorrow's 7 p.m. Senior Night contest will be preceded by Senior Night events slated to begin at 6:40 p.m. Senior Husky cheerleaders and football players will be recognized during the pre-game festivities.

The halftime show will feature a salute to senior members of the NHS Marching Band and a tribute to the 1955 Northern football team, the school's inaugural squad which was coached by the late Denver Mitchell. Any former player who was a member of that squad is encouraged to attend tomorrow night's game and step forth to the field for the halftime introductions.

Rams Down Alco, But Swept Out Of Regions By Warriors

The Southern High School varsity volleyball squad started opened the Maryland Class 1A West Region quarterfinals with a sweep over Allegany Monday night, but were swept in turn last night by the powerful Boonsboro Warriors. Last night's loss eliminated the Rams from the post-season, and brings the curtain down on an excellent 13-3 season.

"We had a very good week of preparation, and last night we were able to execute everything we had worked on, but we were up against a very strong team with a very strong defense," SHS coach Sue Newton said this morning. "Boonsboro stopped the schemes that we've been successful with all year. They have extremely quick athletes – they are quick on offense, quick on their feet, and they know where the ball is going and they go after it."

Southern was dominated by the host Warriors in the first game, which ended in a 25-8 Boonsboro win. Southern made some adjustments before the next game, aiming to hamper an extremely proficient outside hitter of the Warriors by backing up the floor rotation by putting one of the Rams' best blockers at the net. Although the match grew much more competitive, Southern still lost the next two 25-20, 25-21.

SHS senior Chelsea Wassell tallied eight kills and two blocks during the contest, while junior Sarah Stephens netted four kills and seven digs, senior Jenna Wagner recorded nine digs, and junior Adrienne Yoder dished out eight assists. Senior Randi Bennett also played an outstanding match.

Boonsboro (14-1) advances to host Williamsport (14-3) for the region title tomorrow night. The Wildcats earned their region final berth by dumping top seeded Fort Hill (14-2) last night in a 3-0 sweep in Cumberland.

The Rams' Monday night sweep over visiting Allegany came by game scores of 25-6, 25-17, and 25-10.

Wassell had 21 service points, six aces, nine kills and 11 digs, while Stephens recorded 13 kills and 12 digs. Bennett netted six kills, and Wagner added 10 points. Junior Natalie Rohrbaugh netted 13 assists and three kills, and Yoder dished out nine assists.

"The year as a whole was an outstanding season," Coach Newton commented today. "This was best group of girls I've ever coached, their attitudes and work ethics were great. It's going to be a tough group of seniors to let go of because they worked so great together as a team.

"Next year we'll have three returning starters, some good experience coming from our varsity bench, and this year's undefeated junior varsity team moving up to varsity level. Southern and Fort Hill should again be the top teams in this area, and we'll always have to contend with Smithsburg and Williamsport from other end of the region," Newton concluded.

Rams' Run For Regional Soccer Title Stopped By Mountaineers

An unexpected run at a regional title by the Southern High School boys' varsity soccer team came to an end last Friday afternoon when the Rams were hammered by Beall, 6-0, in a Class 1A West Region semi-final match played at Greenway Avenue Stadium in Cumberland.

The Rams, who were sporting a modest 5-9 record, advanced to the semifinals by topping Clear Spring, 2-1, in an opening-round match and then pulling off a stunning, 2-1 upset of 12-1 Northern in a quarterfinal round.

The 12-4 Mountaineers of Beall dominated the Rams on Friday, recording 34 shots on goal while allowing only four by Southern.

Beall took the lead for good just under six minutes into the first half when Tommy Norris scored off a pass by Adam Sommers.

Sommers made it 2-0 just under four minutes later, scoring off an assist by Norris. Sommers would ultimately conclude the match with a hat trick.

The Southern defense stiffened and didn't allow another Beall goal the first half.

However, the Mountaineers resumed scoring at the 36:19 mark of the second half, when Adam Eshleman scored off a feed by Matt Fiorita.

Sommers followed with his second goal of the night just under 10 minutes later, this time unassisted. He completed his hat trick about a minute and a half later when he scored off an assist by Nick Logue at the 25:27 mark.

Getting the final goal of the match was Beall's Shawn Guyer off a pass from Logue with 19:53 to go.

Josh Bittner stopped all four of the Rams' shots to earn the shutout, while Mike Edwards recorded 14 saves and Drew Betz was credited with seven for the Rams.

The Mountaineers went on to face Williamsport in the regional championship match Tuesday, also played at Greenway Avenue Stadium.

Alco Sweeps Huskies Out Of Region Tourney

The season came to an end for the Northern High School volleyball squad Friday night, as the Huskies were downed by Allegany in three straight games in an opening round Class 1A West Region playoff match.

The Campers won by scores of 25-18, 25-9, and 25-9.

NHS junior Jackie Rodeheaver had five attacks and two kills for the Huskies, while classmate Nicole Espada finished with three attacks and a kill, and senior Angie Umbel had four points. Ashley Peterson paced Allegany with 32 serves and five aces, 11 hits, and four kills.

Northern finished the year with a 5-11 mark.

LAKERS TO OPEN SEASON — With the return of several key sophomores and the addition of some promising transfer student athletes and freshmen, anticipation for another winning season is running high at Garrett College, as the Lakers prepare to open their 2005-06 campaign this weekend out west in the Iowa Tournament. Pictured from left, seated, are: Chris Henderson, Pat Carwile, Jason Moore, Isaiah Austin, Josef Kariuki, and Aaron Meachum. Standing are: Jerome Jack, Nehemiah Boykin, Ivan Funcic, Steve Ross, Tyrice Watkins, Tavon Kennedy, Dyre Ross, and Barry Cornish. Garrett will open against perennial power Indian Hills this Friday and face Sheridan College on Saturday. Their home opener will be their own McDonald's Classic, slated for Nov. 18-19.

LAKERS OPEN AT HOME SATURDAY – The 2005-06 Garrett College women's basketball season is just around the corner, and this year's talented Laker squad is poised to make another run at another stellar season. A powerhouse of late in both Maryland JUCO and Region XX play, Garrett netted a 22-4 mark last year, and JUCO and Region titles the previous season. Pictured above, seated from the left, are Jemi Anderson, Cornelle Hilton, Ancethe Dudley, Brittney Jackson, Jessee Gibson, and Tiffany Yoder. Standing are Nytearie Burrell, Tiffany Torres, Flodyeha Peterson, Eugenne Carson, Christine Barnes, Kayla Nazelrod, and Kierre Wilkins. The Lakers kick off this year's campaign with a 2 p.m. home court contest Saturday against Cecil, then Allegany pays a visit for a 7 p.m. meeting Wednesday in McHenry. A season prognosis will appear in next week's issue, along with complete scheduling and roster information.

Lakers To Open Campaign Friday In Iowa Tournament

Four experienced sophomores, coupled with a number of potentially exciting transfer students and incoming freshmen, will take the basketball court for Garrett College this season, as the Lakers and Coach Dennis Gibson will work to improve upon a successful 21-9 overall record last year.

The Lakers' 2004-05 season ended when they were edged by Allegany College in the Region XX Division I championship game, 66-64. They will face a major challenge right off the bat this year when they travel west and open their campaign this Friday against perennial powerhouse Indian Hills in the Iowa Tournament.

Returning to the Laker lineup are sophomores Tyrice Watkins, Ivan Funcic, Josef Kariuki, and Pat Carwile.

Watkins, at 6-7, 220, will play both forward spots and could see some action in a #2 guard position. He and Funcic (6-5, 185) will likely be the top three-point shooters on the team and, along with transfer Barry Cornish, are expected to lead the team in rebounding.

Karuiki (6-0, 165), a walk-on player last year, is a "very athletic" shooting guard, according to Gibson, who will likely help with defense and ball handling.

Carwile, a 6-4, 220-pound point guard, was a part-time starter last year, backing up the departed Akeem Scott at the point and playing the wing position.

The aforementioned Cornish (6-6, 230), who transferred from Jacksonville Junior College in Texas, is the Lakers' top post player and brings an impressive list of credentials to McHenry. Last season at Jacksonville he averaged 14 points and eight rebounds per game. He was named to the Texas Junior College Conference All-League squad. Following his senior year at Lansdowne High School, he was named Co-MVP Baltimore City Player of the Year, and MVP of his team, of the Charm City Challenge, and of the Baltimore All-Star game. He led Lansdowne High to a 24-2 season and a state runner-up title.

Another transfer Gibson [illegible] will have an immediate impact is Chris Henderson, a 6-2, 210-pound wing guard who was a red-shirted player at Morgan State University last season. At Central High School in Bowie, Henderson led his team to the Maryland state title game two years ago. He was an Honorable Mention All-Met selection, and a Washington Post and McDonald's All-American nominee.

A pair of red-shirted freshmen who will also see considerable action are Dyre Ross (6-4, 190) and Aaron Meachum (6-3, 175). Ross, a high school state champion in track, will be asked to back up Cornish and Watkins inside, while Meachum is a solid shooter and defensive player who will see time in both guard and forward positions.

"Dyre has been very effective in controlling the offensive boards in pre-season scrimmages," Gibson said, "and Aaron has great range and will be another three-point threat."

True freshmen Jerome Jack and Jason Moore will be called upon to play the point when Carwile is out.

"Jerome is very similar to Carwile as another big, physical guard, while Jason provides a change of speed and three-point shooting ability as a smaller, quicker point guard," Gibson explained.

Rounding out the roster for this semester are freshman wings Nehemiah Boykin (6-4,), Tavon Kennedy (6-4, 190), and Isaiah Austin (6-4, 180).

"These guys are going to have to play a lot bigger than 6-4 to help make up for our lack of overall height inside," Gibson said.

Boykin finished his prep career at Lauringburg Prep, where he averaged 11 points per game. Austin, who hails from Parkdale High School in Cheverly, is described by Gibson as "not as polished as the other forwards, but a tremendously hard worker." Kennedy is more of a slasher who can get to the basket and find the open man, he said.

Expected to join the team second semester is Steven Ross (6-6, 190), who was rated as one of the top two centers in Pittsburgh last year. JUCO rules require transfers to sit out one semester if they did not complete a grading term. He was named the Seneca Valley Top-Off MVP, Pittsburgh Hoops Classic MVP, and a Valley News Dispatch first-team all-star.

"I'm excited about this young squad," Gibson said. "We have one of the better all-around defensive teams that we have had at Garrett in recent years.

"Offensively, they will have to make up for their lack of overall size with teamwork and making good decisions with the ball," he continued. "They seem ready to step up to the task, but our schedule is very, very tough. Opening the season against a team like Indian Hills may not be fair to them, but it will let us gauge what we have to work on for the rest of the season."

Gibson said that, while he likes the way his freshmen have been playing in the preseason, the success of the Lakers' season will depend upon the efforts of the sophomores.

"If we don't have leadership from within, we will have a hard time winning close games," he said.

"Hopefully we can make a good showing out west and then come home and win our own McDonald's Classic."

The Lakers will also face Sheridan College in this weekend's Iowa Tournament, with that game slated for Saturday at 5 p.m. Friday's contest with Indian Hills will tip off at 7 p.m.

The home campaign will begin with the Lakers' annual McDonald's Preseason Classic, scheduled for November 18-19.

Gibson will be assisted this year by long-time assistant Dave Martin, Brett Coleman, and newcomer Matt Redinger.

STEELERS COMPLETE PERFECT RUN – It was 10 up and 10 down for the Northern Steelers' Division II squad this season, as the team dominated the Cumberland Area Youth Football League by running up a perfect 10-0 mark. The Steelers capped their perfect season Saturday by taking a hard-fought 18-6 win over the Personal Best Patriots in the CAYFL Div. II Super Bowl at Frankfort High. The Northern unit (players, cheerleaders, and coaches) are pictured above, starting from the left in Row 1: Nicole Tichinel, Tyler Bittinger, Austin Tombley, Adam Finzel, Matt Thomas, Kameron Kamp, and Melissa Oanoe. Row 2: Marley Kamo, Alex Baker, Jacob Bosley, Alex Ruff, Brian Umbel, Tyler Wilt, Daniel Uphold, and Kelsey Jo Durst. Row 3: Alan Wingrove, Zach Meyers, Andrew Sisler, Nick Buckel, Sean Kamp, Josh Mason, and Michael Burns. Row 4: Kelsey Smith, Marysa Wilson, cheer coach Holly Shaffer, football coaches Dave Mason, Buddy Duckworth, Ben Sisler (head coach), Kelby Kamp, and Justin Lewis, cheer coaches Amanda Friend and Brandy Fazenbaker, and Haleigh Werner. BAKER EARNS CAYFL HONORS – Alex Baker was honored by the Cumberland Area Youth Football League with the Roy A. Menges Memorial Trophy denoting his selection as Most Valuable Player of Saturday's CAYFL Division II Super Bowl. The linebacker helped propel Northern to victory by returning a recovered fumble and an intercepted pass for two long touchdowns. Alex was also named Most Valuable Player of the CAYFL's Div. II regular season. Pictured above with Steelers' head coach Ben Sisler, Alex is the son of Karen and Blair Baker of Grantsville.

Northern Steelers Crown Perfect Campaign A's CAYFL Div. II Kings

The Division II Northern Steelers are the 2005 Cumberland Area Youth Football League (CAYFL) champions after taking an 18-6 victory over the Personal Best Patriots in the league's "Little Super Bowl," played Saturday at Frankfort High. The Steelers recorded a perfect 10-0 mark for the season, and Northern linebacker/running back Alex Baker was honored as the Super Bowl and regular season Most Valuable Player (see photo).

The championship contest was a defensive battle from the outset, as both squads held the other in check through a scoreless first quarter. Northern finally broke the ice in the second stanza, when Andrew Sisler gathered in a 19-yard touchdown pass from Jacob Bosley to put the Steelers up 6-0.

The first of two huge defensive plays by Northern's Alex Baker doubled the Steelers' lead in the third quarter when the linebacker scooped up a Patriot fumble and returned the ball 34 yards for a touchdown. The Pats answered with a 62-yard touchdown run by Shawn Metheny that made the score 12-6.

Baker turned in another defensive score in the final stanza by picking off a Patriot pass and returning the ball 36 yards for a touchdown, giving Northern its 18-6 margin of victory.

Along with Baker, the victorious Steel Curtain defense was anchored by Austin Tombley, who recorded two interceptions and five solo tackles, plus Matt Thomas and Kameron Kamp. Standouts on offense included Kamp, Bosley, and Tyler Bittinger.

Still just in the lower grades of middle school, the Steeler players have already established quite a winning tradition. The majority of roster members began playing together in the Pee Wee League, where their C team Maddawg squad took the title three years ago. Two years ago they took the Pee Wee League B title, and last season they made it to the A team championship contest, where they were defeated.

Discipline, dedicated practice habits, and plenty of positive support from parents and volunteers were cited by Northern's coaches as among the top factors contributing to the unit's continuing success.

Southern Girls Finish Second In West Region CC Championships

By virtue of a second-place team finish in Saturday's Class 1A West Region cross county championships, hosted by Clear Spring High School, the Southern High School girls' team has qualified for the Maryland State 1A Championships, slated for this Saturday at Hereford High School.

The Southern girls, coached by Steve Cosner, finished with 82 team points, second only to region team champion Williamsport, which recorded 30 points.

In third place was Smithsburg with 92 points, followed by: Clear Spring, 117; Catoctin, 123; Boonsboro, 132; Brunswick, 166; Poolesville, 197; and Fort Hill, 246.

The top five girls' teams advance to the state meet, as do the top 16 individual runners.

Meanwhile, the Southern boys' squad placed eighth among 13 teams, finishing with 195 team points.

Clear Spring won the boys' race with 52 points, followed by: Beall, 62; Williamsport, 131; Catoctin, 152; Brunswick, 153; Smithsburg, 164; Allegany, 172; Southern; Poolesville, 196; Fort Hill, 197; Boonsboro, 262; and Westmar and Northwood, both with incomplete scores.

The Southern girls were led by sophomore Jennifer Cosner, who completed the course in 21:59, followed by teammates Sarah Cosner in 11th place (22:22); Courtney DiSimone, 17th (23:00); Melinda Smith, 27th (24:11); Leah Warnick, 33rd (24:50); Kelly Taylor, 36th (24:57); and Katie Lucas, 50th (26:11).

The Cosner sisters were named to the All-Region team for their finishes.

Winning the girls' race, and tagged as the favorite to capture the state individual Class 1A title, was undefeated Lauryn MacFawn of Allegany, who ran away from the rest of the field to record a time of 19:21, which was 1:39 faster than second-place finisher Makenna Hardy of Williamsport (21:00). Rounding out the top five finishers were Laura Ruprecht of Brunswick (21:03), and Theresa Ruland (21:10) and Laura Forsythe (21:12), both of Williamsport.

Derek Upperman led the Southern boys, coached by Jamie Beeman, with a 14th-place finish in 17:30, and was named to the All-Region squad. He and teammate Mike McConnell, who placed 19th in 17:40, both qualified to be individual runners in Saturday's state meet for being among the top 20 finishers in the regional event.

Other SHS finishes in the boys' race were: Ben Warnick, 51st; Joe Bever, 58th; Andrew Sauder, 62nd; Patrick Sisler, 68th; and Co

Northern Ice Completes Perfect Season; Whips Opponents 67-1

Another incredibly successful season was recently recorded by the Northern Ice under-14 girls' team sponsored by the Northern Garrett Soccer Club, as Ice captured another Cumberland AYSO regional title and finished their season with a perfect 12-0 record.

The U-14 girls' region consists of nine middle-school teams from Allegany, Garrett, and Mineral (W.Va.) counties.

Another even more remarkable statistic recorded by Northern Ice is that the team outscored its opponents this year by a margin of 67-1.

"These girls have demonstrated that they are top-notch athletes," stated Jeff Graham, who has managed and coached the club for the last four years. "The girls set lofty goals for themselves at the beginning of the season and by far exceeded even their own expectations."

Northern Ice generally plays in both the fall and spring seasons, and over the past four years has logged an impressive 70-5-5 overall record, along with a dominating scoring margin of 378-46.

This year's squad was paced by 12 veteran players, plus three new members. Adria Graham led the team in points with 19 goals and 14 assists from her center midfielder position. She has posted an amazing total of 124 goals over the past four seasons.

"Adria poses a consistent attacking threat to opponents," Coach Graham said. "Her leadership on the field is equally matched with her technical and tactical abilities with the ball."

Kaitlynn Fratz led the team this year in goals scored with 22 from her center striker spot, and also had four assists.

"Kaitlynn's speed and aggressive play in front of the goal make her extremely difficult to mark," said Graham.

Midfielders Jenny Shaffer, Morgan Broenihan, and Callie Vernon combined for six goals and three assists while controlling the tempo of each match with a precise pass/run system.

Goalkeeper Brittany Mallow logged 11 shutouts this season, with the one and only goal scored against her and her team coming off a direct free kick just outside the penalty area.

Leading the Ice defense, besides Mallow, were Nikki Diehl and Kaitlyn Walker at center fullback positions, complemented by the tenacious play of Brooke Yoder, Chelsea Diehl, Cara Stough, and Alex Diehl. The defending line allowed only 15 shots on goal for the entire season, and also accounted for six goals and three assists with overlapping runs into the strike area of their opponents.

Graham attributes much of his team's success to "a competitive spirit that burns deep inside these girls."

"Getting them to work on skill development at practice was never a problem," he said, adding, "They push each other to succeed."

Coach Melanie McFarland said, "These girls have a tremendous love for the game, plus their families have always supported their efforts and have been great role models for success."

A PERFECT SEASON and a Cumberland AYSO regional title were recently recorded by Northern Ice, a team sponsored by the Northern Garrett Soccer Club. Not only did the girls finish the season with a 12-0 record, but they also recorded an astounding overall scoring margin of 67-1 in goals. Over the past four seasons, they have amassed a record of 70-5-5. Pictured front, from left, are: Kaitlyn Walker, Brittany Mallow, and Brooke Yoder. Kneeling are: Callie Vernon, Sydney McFarland, Jenny Shaffer, Adria Graham, Nikki Diehl, Kaitlynn Fratz, Chelsi Kling, and Cara Stough. RUNNIN' RAMS REGIONAL RUNNERS-UP — The Southern High School girls' cross country team has qualified for this Saturday's Maryland Class 1A Championships by finishing second among nine teams in the Class 1A West Region meet, held this past Saturday at Clear Spring. The state meet will be held at Hereford High School. Pictured from left above, front, are team members Kelly Taylor, Jennifer Cosner, and Melinda Smith. Standing are: Elizabeth Thayer, Leah Warnick, Courtney DiSimone, Sarah Cosner, and Katie Lucas. Jennifer and Sarah Cosner earned All-Region honors by virtue of their strong finishes in Saturday's regional meet. See story.

Mohomed Khelapha of Fort Hill was the fastest runner of the day, winning the individual regional title by crossing the finish line in 16:27.

Scott Bonnette and James Carney of Beall placed second and third in 16:53 and 16:54, respectively. Justin Cole of Williamsport finished fourth in 17:00, and rounding out the top five was Eric Morris of Westmar in 17:05.

The top six boys' teams qualify for the state meet. The boys' Class 1A race is set for 2 p.m., and the girls' event will begin at 3 p.m. at Hereford High School.

sulted in the following measurable improvements in local oral health:

- In 1998, 41 percent of children registering for kindergarten had untreated dental decay compared to just 18 percent in 2005.
- Today, more than 68 percent of families have access to fluoridated water.
- 1,504 children received dental care in 2003, up from the 517 who received care in 2000.

"In setting up the program, the health department negotiated a higher rate of reimbursement, assisted network dentists with claim submission, guaranteed payment for valid claims, initiated a public health dental clinic, and renewed efforts in community health education around dental issues," Zaczek stated.

"These improvements resulted in more dentists seeing MCHP and MA patients; however, it also resulted in more patients seeking care. To meet the demand, the health department opened a dental clinic in the health center and established a dental surgery center at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. The network also advocated for fluoridation of community water supplies and for an increase in oral health education in the public schools," she said.

"We are really pleased that our dental network is being recognized," remarked Garrett County health officer Rodney Glotfelty. "We have the best rates in the state because of the outstanding partnership between our community dentists, Garrett County Memorial Hospital and the Health Department dental staff.

"This shows what a community can do when they all work together. Our community dentists and the hospital should be very proud that Garrett County is now setting the standard for other communities."

The Rural Achievement awards are sponsored by the Rural Maryland Council, the Maryland Rural Health Association, the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene Office of Primary Care and Rural Health, and the state's five rural regional planning and development councils.

Gasoline Prices Still Falling, But Consumers Wary

Gasoline prices have continued their downward trend, but consumer behavior indicates that concern over high prices is no distant memory. Moreover, yesterday in hearings before the Senate, oil company executives were called on the carpet regarding recent gas spikes and high profits.

"Although prices have fallen by 70 and 90 cents since early September, by all accounts, consumers still seem wary and perhaps a little stunned by previous 'sticker shocks,'" said Ragina Averella, manager of public and government affairs for AAA Mid-Atlantic. "And it's no wonder since motorists were seeing prices at the pump hiked at a never before seen pace."

In Maryland, gasoline prices jumped from $2.73 on September 1 to $3.26 September 2, reaching a record of $3.27 on September 6. Oil companies attributed higher prices due to damage sustained by first Hurricane Katrina and then, Hurricane Rita. Although crude oil production in Louisiana is still at about 50 percent capacity (according to the U.S. Department of Energy), the cost of crude oil has fallen in recent weeks, primarily because of decreased demand and warmer weather.

This downward demand and weather is also helping gasoline prices to decline. In Maryland, prices at the pump began a continued steady drop on October 7, according to AAA's Daily Fuel Gauge Report. Within the past week, prices in the state have fallen nine cents to $2.32 a gallon and the national average dropped by 10 cents to $2.35 a gallon.

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, gasoline demand, which has typically increased one to three percent a year during the past decade, was flat compared to this time last year. Consumers also seem to be indicating their concern in their choice of new vehicles. Despite decreasing prices, sales of large, new vehicles were down dramatically in October, while companies such as Toyota and Honda, which produce primarily more fuel-efficient vehicles, reported higher sales.

In Maryland, state officials linked lower than expected gasoline tax revenues as well as toll revenues to changes in consumer behavior following high gas prices.

Concern also remains at the federal level. Yesterday, five oil company executives testified, but not under oath, to the U.S. Senate on high gas price spikes and profits. The Senate has mandated the Federal Trade Commission to investigate price gouging.

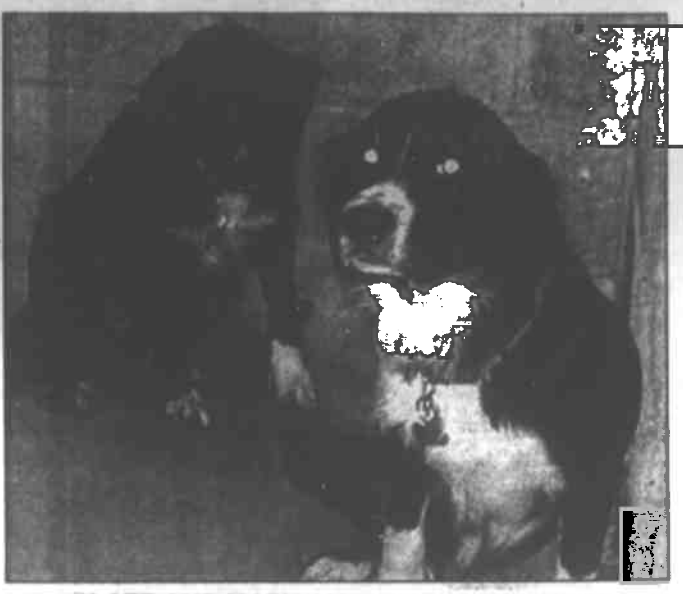
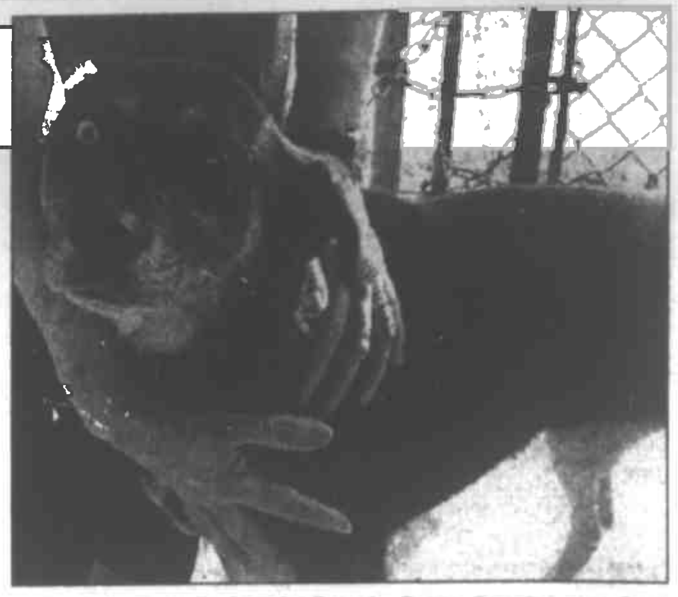
Adorable Adoptables





BLAZE AND MARY JANE are 1½-year-old brother and sister border collie/mixes. They were given up by their owners and are described by a Humane Society spokesperson as "nice dogs." Casey, pictured above right, is a 2-year-old female shepherd/husky mix, who was also an owner give-up. She was kept indoors, and is described as "a very nice girl" with one blue eye and one brown eye. The female yellow Lab mix, pictured below left, was picked up in Grantsville near Penn Alps along with a male black Lab, pictured below right. They have been at the Garrett County Animal Shelter for a week, and no one has reclaimed them. Not pictured is a larger, friendly black Lab that was picked up at Sandy Beach, Deep Creek Lake, last week. Several kinds and sizes of cats are also looking for homes. Some went to a rescue last week, but the shelter is still very full. "Please come in this week and see what nice animals we have for adoption," said the spokesperson. "Don't wait because we can't keep them all indefinitely, especially if more come in." Last week's two adult felines were adopted together, and the shepherd mix wearing a shock collar (but no identification) was reclaimed by its owner. "Please put IDs on your pets," said the spokesperson. "It could save their lives!" For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553.

GC Lithuanian Students Promote Md.-Baltic Ties

Two international students from Garrett College, Lithuanian natives Vita Pagrizauskaite and Mykolas Gudelis, attended a recent meeting of members of the Maryland Baltic Educational Consortium (MBEC), a coalition of Baltic and Maryland organizations working together to fasten strong relationships between the U.S. and Baltic partners.

The meeting was attended by representatives of several cities that are involved in Sister City programs with cities in the Baltic countries. Also attending were a representative from the Estonian embassy, the director of internal affairs from the office of the Secretary of State, and Garrett College president Dr. Steve Herman.

During the meeting MBEC members reviewed the Sister City/County projects between Baltic countries and Maryland to determine how efforts between cities/counties, the Maryland National Guard, and Maryland state government could be best coordinated. Members also attempted to identify and agree upon specific activities that can be achieved within a one year time frame.

Both of the Garrett College international students from Lithuania were involved in the discussion.

During the meeting Gudelis met Bruce Van Dervot, president of the Greater Catonsville Chamber of Commerce. Catonsville and Anyksciai, the city in Lithuania where Gudelis comes from, signed a Sister Cities agreement in 2002. Catonsville's Lithuanian community and the Rotary Club of Catonsville raised funds to help the Lithuanian students come to Garrett College.

Gudelis and Pagrizauskaite said they are happy to be involved in activities regarding international cooperation between Maryland and Lithuania.

"The most important thing is to maintain relations between the two countries," said Pagrizauskaite. "Because through time, relations develop into friendship, big international projects, and other initiatives from which people from both sides of the ocean benefit."

"I sincerely believe that the Maryland and Lithuanian friendship will continue," Gudelis stated. "We are proud to be the first Lithuanian students to attend Garrett College, and I believe next year there will be more."

Pagrizauskaite and Gudelis are already working on a cultural exchange project with help from the MBEC. The students are planning to coordinate art exhibitions of two Lithuanian photographers at Garrett College, and are also planning to bring a group of Lithuanian actors for performances in Garrett County schools.

FAMILY CAREGIVERS MONTH PROCLAIMED – National Family Caregivers Month recently drew the support of the Garrett County commissioners, who issued a proclamation noting the November observance. The "Caring Every Day – Believe, Protect, and Reach Out" theme encourages each of the nation's 50 million caregivers to "believe in yourself, protect your health, and reach out for help." The Garrett County Community Action Committee's Area Agency on Aging works in cooperation with the Garrett County Health Department (GCHD), Mountain Glade Adult Day Care, the Alzheimer's Association, and other organizations to provide respite opportunities and education programs throughout the year, including a monthly Alzheimer's/Caregivers Support Group. For information about local programs available for family caregivers, persons may contact the Area Agency on Aging at 301-334-9431, ext. 143. Grantsville Man Pleads Guilty To Marijuana Charge

A Grantsville man was handed a 10-day jail sentence for marijuana possession during a recent Garrett County District Court hearing, with visiting Judge Edward Malloy presiding.

Stanley William Platter, 28, was arrested in May by Maryland State Police troopers during a New Germany Road traffic stop. As part of a series of sobriety tests, troopers had Platter walk the white line along the road. After he did so, police found a pipe bearing burnt marijuana residue lying on the pavement where it had not been previously.

Platter faced additional charges of marijuana and drug paraphernalia possession that were placed on the stet docket. State troopers filed those charges in July after discovering several suspected marijuana plants growing near Platter's residence.

In other District Court news, a Cumberland man pleaded guilty to destruction of property and was handed a 60-day suspended sentence.

Daniel Curtis Warnick Jr., 27, was jailed by state troopers following a September domestic altercation with his girlfriend at the Meadow View apartments in Grantsville. He had broken into the residence and stolen some money. Visiting judge Teaette Price presided at the hearing.

Kenneth Wayne Lantz, 21, Gormania, pleaded guilty to violating an ex parte order was handed a 30-day suspended sentence, fined $100, and placed on 18 months of supervised probation by visiting Judge Malloy. The charge stemmed from Lantz's June arrest by Garrett County sheriff's deputies after he had entered his estranged wife's apartment while the court order was on file.

Lantz was also deemed "not guilty" of second-degree assault and destruction of property when the alleged victim of a May domestic altercation refused to take the stand to testify against him. Oakland police officers investigating that incident had jailed Lantz after he had allegedly tried to smother the woman with his hand.

William Allen Sody, 22, McHenry, pleaded guilty to driving while under the influence (DUI) before Judge Malloy's bench, and received a 90-day sentence, all but two days of which were suspended, along with a $250 fine and 18 months of supervised probation. Sody's May arrest by sheriff's deputies came during a traffic stop during which an unlabeled medication bottle was found to contain some prescription pills. An additional charge of possession of a prescription medication with intent to distribute was placed onto the stet docket.

Shawn Allen Louis, 20, Oakland, was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ) ruling by Judge Burnett after he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Louis also received a 30-day sentence, all but four days of which was suspended, one year of supervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. The charge stemmed from his June arrest by sheriff's deputies checking on a report of suspicious persons walking around Mtn. Lake Park after 11 p.m. Louis voluntarily turned over a bag of marijuana and a smoking device during questioning.

Travis Matthew Skinner, 20, Sykesville, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and was handed a PBJ, a 30-day sentence, all but two days of which were suspended, a $250 fine, one year of unsupervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. State troopers arrested Skinner following an April traffic stop on Interstate 68 near Grantsville. When the odor of burnt marijuana was detected coming from his vehicle, Skinner voluntarily turned over a smoking device bearing burnt marijuana residue and a prescription bottle containing marijuana.

Luke David Peterson, 24, Avondale, Pa., pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and was handed a PBJ, a 30-day suspended sentence, a $250 fine, one year of unsupervised probation, and 30 hours of community service. Peterson's July arrest during a traffic stop on Interstate 68 near Friendsville followed a K-9 scan of his vehicle. Sheriff's deputies found marijuana and a smoking device in his book bag.

Charles Edward Joseph, 39, Oakland, was handed a stet ruling on a trespassing charge filed by sheriff's deputies in January for breaking into a Friendsville apartment and living there. A separate charge of first-degree burglary faced by Joseph, which had been filed by the Garrett Bureau of Investigation in July after he allegedly stole a checkbook and some personal items from an Oakland apartment, was not prosecuted.

Barclay Henry Dixon, 39, Oakland, was handed a stet ruling on a second degree assault charge filed in February by sheriff's deputies who investigated a domestic altercation. Described as very intoxicated during the incident, Dixon was also deemed to be in violation of his DUI probation, which was revoked with a 30-day jail term reimposed.

Jamie Lee Shiflett, 22, Terra Alta, was handed a stet ruling on charges of second-degree assault and disorderly conduct filed by Oakland police officers following a July altercation. Shiflett, who reportedly had been harassing a woman, allegedly assaulted the woman's husband when he tried to intervene.

John Mark Finch Jr., 3[illegible], Oakland, was handed a stet ruling on a second degree assault charge filed by Oak

DICKIES 500 REVIEW

Edwards makes it ...

Two in a row

Roush driver passes teammate Martin to claim win in Texas

By JEFF HOOD
Cox News Service

Justin, Texas

Make no mistake, Carl Edwards is a legitimate contender in the Chase for the Nextel Cup

Edwards, one week after his victory in Atlanta, passed Mark Martin for the lead with less than two laps remaining to win Sunday's Dickies 500 at Texas Motor Speedway.

Edwards beat Martin, Matt Kenseth, Casey Mears and Jimmie Johnson in the dramatic late-race dash to the checkered flag to climb to third in the championship chase.

The 26-year-old Edwards made the biggest jump in the standings and sits just 77 points behind in the title hunt with two races remaining — at Phoenix and Homestead.

"We're going to try and win these [final] races," Edwards said. "We probably won't beat Tony Stewart because he's an unbelievable driver. But that's not going to stop us from giving it 100 percent."

Edwards was leading Martin when the race's final caution flag was waved for debris with 15 laps remaining. His crew chief, Bob Osborne, played pit strategy to perfection by opting for two new tires on the No. 99 Ford.

After lining up sixth on the restart, Edwards quickly charged through the field and brought the near-capacity crowd to its feet when he made the winning move around Martin on the backstretch.

Minutes later, he was performing his trademark victory backflip

"I thought we were going to take four tires," Edwards later admitted. "But at the last minute, Bob said 'two tires' and it was the right call."

Martin, who led 42 laps and moved to fifth in the Chase, 123 behind Stewart, inherited the lead when Edwards went to pit road on Lap 320.

"I certainly don't regret it," Martin said. "It was the best shot we had with all that craziness back there on new tires, trying to pass cars with old tires and all that banging, wrecking and stuff that goes on."

Stewart led 15 laps late in the event after his crew performed a sub 13 second pit stop, enabling him to take the lead for the first time on Lap 295.

But Stewart's time at the front was short-lived after his Chevrolet suffered a bent fender while racing Martin for the lead with 27 laps remaining.

"It got tight after that," Stewart said. "I tried to give him room. We were just doing the superspeedway stuff.

"We ended up with a sixth-place finish and didn't hurt ourselves too much today."

Johnson, who remains second in the Chase standings, cut Stewart's points lead to 38 after passing the No. 20 with two laps remaining.

"We had a really good car all night," said Johnson. "We just lost some track position with the adjustments we chose to make."

Ryan Newman's championship hopes were dealt a major setback with 91 laps remaining when his No. 12 Dodge spun on the frontstretch while racing to remain on the lead lap

"I don't think we're mathematically out of it, but things aren't looking good," said Newman, who fell to seventh in the standings, 174 behind Stewart.

Martin, meanwhile, took the loss to his Roush Racing teammate in stride.

"I'm not disappointed at all," Martin said. "I don't like getting passed at the end ever. But it doesn't break my heart because I didn't get robbed. I got beat and I can take getting beat."

TEXAS NOTEBOOK

Decision on Busch, McMurray expected

By JEFF HOOD
Cox News Service

Justin, Texas

Roush Racing President Geoff Smith remained optimistic on Sunday that a settlement will be reached this week allowing Jamie McMurray to replace Kurt Busch as driver of the No. 97 Ford in 2006.

Smith had placed Sunday's Dickies 500 at Texas Motor Speedway as the deadline for finalizing a deal.

"That was the agreement," Smith said. "But we got a call requesting our side agree to an extension. And we ended up saying, 'Yes, we'll agree to another extension for another week.' "

BUSCH

Penske Racing South President Don Miller is confident Busch will obtain his release from Roush, allowing him to make his debut in the No. 2 Dodge in February's Daytona 500, a year earlier than originally planned.

Miller acknowledged that Ricky Rudd is the current backup plan.

Smith made it clear Busch will remain in the Roush camp next season if Chip Ganassi Racing exercises its option and forces McMurray to return as driver of the No. 42 Dodge in 2006.

"Absolutely not, then Kurt won't be released," Smith said, when asked about the scenario. "He'd be back in the No. 97."

Hamlin lands ride with Gibbs team

HAMLIN

Last summer, Denny Hamlin was racing late models in Virginia. On Sunday, the 24-year-old was introduced as the permanent driver of Joe Gibbs Racing's No. 11 Chevrolet in the Nextel Cup Series.

"This is just a great opportunity for me," said Hamlin, who reeled off consecutive top-10 finishes last month at Charlotte and Martinsville during his audition.

"Just one year ago, I never dreamed I'd be in this situation. At best, I was hoping for a part-time truck ride or something like that."

Rusty's son seeks truck ride

Steven Wallace, the 18-year-old son of Cup driver Rusty Wallace, is negotiating with owner Billy Ballew to drive the No. 15 full time in the Craftsman Truck Series next season.

"We're about 80 percent there," said Steven Wallace, who is set to compete in 14 Busch Series races for his father in 2006. "We're working on buttoning up a full-time sponsor for next year I'm pretty sure we'll do it."

If a deal is consummated, Wallace would be reunited with crew chief Richie Wauters. The two combined to win December's Snowball Derby Super Late Model race in Pensacola, Fla.

"I've known Richie forever, and I know what he and that team are capable of," Wallace said. "I can't wait for Daytona to come around next year."

Harvick captures victory in Saturday's Busch race

By JEFF HOOD
Cox News Service

Justin, Texas

Kevin Harvick capitalized on a series of late-race events to win Saturday's 300-mile O'Reilly Challenge Busch Series race at Texas Motor Speedway.

On a day when Harvick appeared destined to finish fourth, his fortunes took a turn for the better after Ryan Newman, who led a race-high 122 laps, pitted under green for tires and fuel with 40 laps remaining.

Newman found himself pinned one lap down moments later when the caution flag waved after second-place Kasey Kahne's No. 6 Dodge blew a right-front tire and slammed the Turn 1 wall.

Two laps later, Harvick's crew found time to tweak his Chevrolet and still beat Carl Edwards, Greg Biffle and Reed Sorenson off pit road to take the lead for the third and final time.

"I knew if we didn't make some good adjustments to our car on that last pit stop to get going, we were in trouble," said Harvick, who led 42 of 200 laps.

Harvick's lead over second-place finisher Greg Biffle on the final lap was more than two seconds when the seventh caution waved for J.J. Yeley's crash in Turn 2.

Edwards wound up third, while Sorenson overcame early transmission difficulties to edge Kyle Busch for fourth.

"It was a good run for us," said Sorenson, who led three laps.

Clint Bowyer reduced Martin Truex Jr.'s championship lead to 84 points with two races remaining after driving a backup car to a seventh-place finish. Truex finished 11th.

Newman, who was attempting to win his sixth consecutive Busch Series start, settled for 18th. "We obviously had a really fast car, but it was just a little bad racing luck," he said.

NASCAR

Kevin Harvick waves to fans after winning Saturday's O'Reilly 300.

Harvick's fourth victory of the season came four days after his father-in-law, John Paul Linville, died.

"It's been the hardest week I've ever had to go through," Harvick said. "This is a little bit of a release to help heal the pain."

HOW THEY FARED

A brief review of how Chase competitors performed Sunday

1.) Tony Stewart. Finished sixth. Commented on late two-tire pit strategy: "I think we would have been better off taking four. But when you're running for points like we are, you don't want to give up too much track position."

2.) Jimmie Johnson. Finished fifth. Trimmed five points off Stewart's lead when he passed the No. 20 Chevrolet with two laps remaining. Led two laps during a cycle of green-flag pit stops prior to the race's midpoint.

3.) Carl Edwards. Finished first. Lined up sixth with two new tires on the final restart with 11 laps remaining, then charged into the lead nine laps later. "If we win this championship we'll do it by having fun," Edwards said.

4.) Greg Biffle. Finished 20th. Forced to pit on Lap 49 while leading because of loose lug nuts on his left rear wheel. Spun through the frontstretch grass on Lap 82, then looped in Turn 4 with 45 laps remaining.

5.) Mark Martin. Finished second. Led 42 laps and nearly won by not pitting during the final caution. "If 12 cars had stayed out, we would have won the race," Martin said. "I don't regret the call. It was the best shot we had."

6.) Matt Kenseth. Finished third. Dominated early before alternator failed. "When the sun was out, we had the fastest car," Kenseth said. "The sun went down and the track really changed."

7.) Ryan Newman. Finished 25th. After starting at the rear of the field in a backup car, he struggled all day and never climbed into the top 10. Spun on the frontstretch on Lap 244 while battling to stay on the lead lap.

8.) Kurt Busch. Finished 10th. Failed to capitalize on his recent test at Texas. The defending Cup champ struggled to find the proper chassis setup on his No. 97 Ford as he toiled just outside the top 10 much of the day.

9.) Rusty Wallace. Finished 22nd. Ran near 10th much of the day, but lined up fourth on the final restart after choosing to forego a pit stop during the final caution. The strategy backfired, and he quickly fell out of the top 20.

10.) Jeremy Mayfield. Finished 38th. Eliminated from championship with two races remaining. Radioed to his crew on Lap 87 that his Dodge had a severe vibration, then pitted one lap later under green for tires.

TV-PIPELINE

No 'Bones' about it: Fox series has returned

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Emily Deschanel

Q: I was wondering what happened to "Bones." I saw it one time, then it disappeared. –Robert Snyder, West Palm Beach, Fla.

A: The series ran into the scheduling dilemma many Fox shows must work around in the fall: postseason baseball. That caused a bunch of pre-emptions for the Emily Deschanel-David Boreanaz mystery series, but the good news is not only that it has returned to the Tuesday lineup, but also that the network has picked it up for the entire season.

Q: I have been waiting for "Remington Steele" to come out on DVD. Any sign that this will happen? Also, any chance for a "Remington Steele" reunion, now that Pierce Brosnan is no longer Agent 007? –Sun Choi, Fairfax, Va.

A: The very best sign is that the first two years of the light mystery series are available at this moment. The first season was released by Fox Home Entertainment during the summer, and season two – in which Doris Roberts ("Everybody Loves Raymond") joined the regular cast – came out on Nov. 8. As for a cast reunion, that's up in the air, and it isn't something that was necessarily held up by Brosnan's previous James Bond commitments. He did audio commentary and interviews for the first "Steele" DVD set, but fellow star Stephanie Zimbalist didn't participate.

Q: Where have all, or any, of the Westerns gone on television? HBO used to have a channel that mostly showed them. Is it gone? –Perke Largent, Oklahoma City

A: Actually, it's the Starz/Encore group of premium cable networks that still has the channel Westerns among its offerings. Some other networks present sagebrush series regularly, if not all the time. TV Land currently has the rights to "Gunsmoke" and "Bonanza"; the American-Life TV Network has Warner Bros. classics such as "Maverick" and "Bronco"; and Hallmark Channel is the current home of "Walker, Texas Ranger," in essence a contemporary Western.

Q: Two of my all-time favorite television shows are "Hawaii Five-O" and "The Rockford Files." I was wondering if either is available on DVD or will become available in the near future. –Gary Howard, Milwaukee

A: There's no word at this writing on "Hawaii Five-O," which Paramount (and, in turn, Paramount Home Entertainment) currently owns the rights to, but there's better news about "Rockford." Universal Studios Home Entertainment is scheduled to release the first season of James Garner's series about the laidback private detective on Dec. 6. The pilot episode also features Lindsay Wagner, who was a relative unknown at the time.

4-H Club News

COUNTRY EXPLORERS

by Katelyn Gnegy

The meeting of the Country Explorers 4-H Club was held last Friday, Nov. 4. Our program for the night was "Enrollment for 2006" and a Christmas craft.

Members were to bring their donations for Hurricane Katrina victims and give them to Nathan Tichnell. The county beef tickets were to be turned in to Arlene, if members had not already done so. In addition, the Joe Corbi pizza and cookie dough orders were due at the meeting.

There were a few demonstrations. Noel Custer gave a demonstration on her photography project, and Mikail Perrine gave one on his beef project. Katelyn Gnegy gave a demonstration on her veterinary science project.

Reports were given on trash pick up, which took place on Oct. 1. Members who attended were Aaron and Levi Lantz, Eric and Greg Tichnell, Nathan, Noel Custer, and Alison Roth.

Public service announcements were made on Oct. 5 to promote 4-H Days. Members who participated were Aaron, Levi, Katelyn, Eric, Greg, Nathan, and Faith Tichnell.

Those who helped carry "leaves" designating winning entries in the Autumn Glory Festival Grand Feature Parade on Oct. 15 were Aaron, Levi, Alison, Katelyn, Greg, and Nathan.

Aaron, Levi, J.B. Gnegy, Eric, Greg, Nathan, Faith, Andrew and Jacob Hauser, Grace and Leon Dubansky, and Mikail attended the 4-H Days at the 4-H camp on Oct. 22.

Our awards program was pushed back to the Jan. 5 meeting, which will include a covered-dish dinner. At our next meeting, we will elect officers and a have a record-book workshop.

Members are to see Arlene to confirm their participation for the fair club award.

Members interested in running for an office next year were to turn in applications at the November meeting.

Record books are due at the January meeting. Those who can are to get them to Arlene over Christmas.

Members were asked to think about ideas for 2006 meetings and bring them to the next meeting on Dec. 4. The club will meet at Underwood South at 6:30 p.m. and then go to Swan Meadow School at 7:30 for the meeting. Members were reminded to bring their fair awards and ribbons. The program will be election of officers, a record-book workshop, and a Christmas craft.

TRAILBLAZERS 4-H

by Emily Cosner, reporter

The October meeting of the Trailblazers 4-H Club was held at the new Southern Garrett Rescue Squad building. The club would like to thank J.P. Pysell for giving our members a tour of the building before the meeting.

Under old business, the club was reminded of the two dates of fall weigh-in for market steers. It was also reported that our fair booth has been set up in the window of Mark IV for National 4-H Week. Linda Rush reported on the annual Livestock Association picnic, and reminded all adults who want to be a member of the Livestock Association that dues are due.

Under new business, members were reminded to turn our fair photo IDs in to Janet at the November meeting. Baby beef raffle tickets were distributed. We voted on gifts for retiring 4-H members, and planned our Christmas party for Thursday, Dec. 1, at 6:30 p.m. We will be having a gift exchange, and all members who want to participate should bring a neutral gift.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served by Audrey and Rachel Bowser.

The next meeting of the Trailblazers 4-H Club will be held on Thursday, Nov. 17, at Yough Glades Elementary School. The meeting will include an election of officers and a record book workshop.

That We Might Be Free

Some were young and had never left the security of home. Others were older, raising families and engaged in established occupations. But, they all had something in common, these brave men and women. They put a halt to their lives as they knew them, left familiarity behind, and traveled to foreign shores. They risked their lives to serve our country and protect our freedom.

Each time we cast our ballot&e very week as we worship freely&whene ver we express a political opinion without fear of reprisal, let us remember the months and years sacrificed by our veterans as they defended the rights which we enjoy today.

This Veteran s Day, may we honor the selfless men and women who have paid with a portion of their lives that ours might be free.

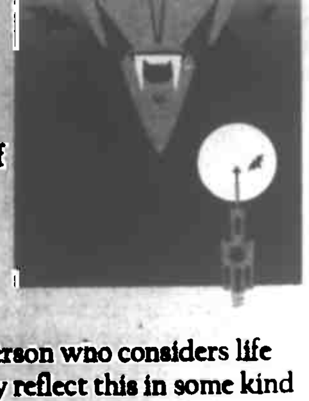
STARING AT MONSTERS



The German philosopher, Nietzsche said that when you look into the abyss, the abyss also looks into you, and that when you stare at monsters, the monsters stare back at you. By the abyss, Nietzsche may have meant the emptiness and ultimate meaninglessness of existence. And thus, what Nietzsche seems to be saying is that anyone who looks at life as devoid of meaning will have this reflected back at them. A person who considers life to be meaningless will likely reflect this in some kind of existential despair. Likewise, we cannot look at or expose ourselves to evil and be unaffected by it. There is much to be said for believing that life is good and worth living, and for living the kind of life that makes it so. And although each of us may occasionally have to jump over the abyss and struggle with monsters, we shouldn't look down while jumping over the abyss, or become a monster when we are fighting with monsters.

> Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

Folate May Help Prevent Alzheimer s Disease

Folate is one the B vitamins that occurs naturally in certain foods. Folic acid is the synthetic form of folate that is found in nutritional supplements and added to fortified foods. Folate helps produce and maintain new cells in the body, and is necessary to make red blood cells and prevent anemia. A recent study showed that folate consumption could lower the risk of developing Alzheimer's disease, a degenerative brain disease that impairs memory, thinking and behavior.

Researchers collected dietary information from 579 people ages 60 and older, who did not have Alzheimer's Over a 10 year period of followup, people who consumed at least 400 micrograms of folate daily had a 55% lower risk of developing Alzheimer's disease than people who did not. Most people in the study reached that level of consumption of folate by taking folic acid supplements. However, since the time this study began, folate has been added to many foods such as breads, cereals, and other grain products. The recommended daily allowance for folate is 400 micrograms per day

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• Considering the political climate these days, we may want to reacquaint ourselves with an archaic word: "stoopgalant." The definition? "That which humbles the mighty."

• Maria Mendoza, a Brazilian woman, was terrified of heights, so she asked psychiatrist Ed Cabrillo to help cure her. His plan was to take Mendoza by the stairs to the 20th floor of a high-rise office building; all she had to do was ride the elevator back down to ground level. Steeling herself for the ordeal, Mendoza stepped into the elevator — and plunged to her death. No one had noticed signs warning that the elevator was out of order

• When the Empire State Building was built, the top was intended to serve as a mooring point for dirigibles.

• One of the most well-known dogs in history, Rin Tin Tin, lived from 1916 to 1932 and served in World War I. After he became a film star he had his own five-room suite at the studio, a valet, a personal chef and a chauffeured limousine. He even received 8,000 pieces of fan mail every month.

• Englishman Dr. Samuel Johnson had many talents — he was a poet, essayist, critic, journalist and lexicographer, and he was regarded as an outstanding figure of 18th-century life and letters. He must also have been a noted wit; consider the following observations made by him: "Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures." "When a man knows he is to be hanged in a fortnight, it concentrates his mind wonderfully."

• The bark of the redwood tree is fireproof. If a fire breaks out in a redwood forest, it's the insides of the trees that burn.

• On Nov. 14, 1851, Harper & Brothers in New York publishes "Moby-Dick," by Herman Melville. The book flopped, and it was many years before the novel was recognized as an American classic. Living With Blindness

Q. My female border collie, "Tess," is slowly going blind, and according to the vet, her condition will only get worse. We cannot afford expensive cataract removal and need ways to deal with her semi-blindness without losing patience.

The troubles began when we moved from a large house to a small apartment. Although she knows the pathways through the apartment and has some partial vision, we continually trip over her and unfortunately yell at her to get out of the way. My husband has broached the subject of putting her to sleep. She is about 10, otherwise healthy, and still seems happy, so I would feel guilty putting her down. I've heard and known of many dogs living with blindness. I'd like to pursue other avenues before euthanizing her. — Need Advice In Florida

A. Thank you for giving Tess — and yourselves — a chance to find other ways to deal with her diminishing sight. There are many dog owners out there facing the same challenge who have found ways of coping with this disability.

The very first thing I'd like you to do is hop on the Internet and go to www.blinddogs.com. This is a Web site that offers lots of information and support for owners of vision-impaired dogs, including links to medical advice and message boards.

A book called "Living With Blind Dogs," by Caroline Levin, is highly recommended and can be ordered at the www.petcarebooks.com.

There may also be a support group in your area. There's nothing like getting support from other owners facing the same challenges.

Meanwhile, give yourselves and Tess a little more time to adjust to the new surroundings. It's natural to become frustrated when Tess is always underfoot, but I'm sure that after talking with other owners, you'll be armed with new ways to make life easier for the entire household.

Elvis Album

Q. I have an album by Elvis Presley, "How Great Thou Art," in stereo and issued by RCA. Is it worth much? — Janet, Crossville, Tenn.

A. This was an easy question to answer. If your album is mint to near new, it is valued at about $50 in the current edition of Presleyana V, edited by Jerry Osborne and Bob Alaniz, and published by Osborne Enterprises, Port Townsend, Wash.

Q. I have a photo of E.M. Morgan taken by the George H. Davis studio of Boston. It is in a mother of pearl frame, and I am curious about its value. — Shirley, Northglenn, Colo.

A. Since I have no idea of who E.M. Morgan was or is, I suspect the frame might be worth more than the picture. I suggest you take your frame and show it to some of the better dealers along Broadway's Antique Row in Denver to find out its value.

Q. Where can I find out how much a signed basketball by the players of the 1962 Boston Celtics is worth? — Ernie (via e-mail)

A. One of the better publications for basketball memorabilia collectors is Beckett Basketball Collector, 15850 Dallas Parkway, Dallas, TX 75248. This informative magazine features articles, ads and current prices and should be helpful.

Of Your Garrett County Forest Conservancy Board

by Paal Shogren

The October meeting of your Garrett County Forest Conservancy Board featured discussion of the topics listed below.

ATTENTION FOREST LANDOWNERS

Soon you will be receiving in the mail a questionnaire asking if you would be interested in attending workshops regarding forest taxation/estate planning. The board is willing to develop such workshops in cooperation with Garrett College's Continuing Education program. Please respond.

Along with the questionnaire there will be information on the increase in gypsy moth egg masses this year and the need for spraying the larva next spring. You need to become familiar with identifying egg masses and spraying.

NATURAL RESOURCES CAREERS CONFERENCE

Planning is under way for the annual Natural Resources Careers Conference (NRCC), a weeklong event held each July at the Hickory Environmental Education Center. The 2006 conference, which will take place during the centennial commemoration of forestry in Maryland, will feature Global Positioning System trairung. The program is open to two high school students from every county in the state and Baltimore city.

LIBRARY WINDOW DISPLAY

The November window display at the Oakland Library was developed by the Forest Conservancy Board, and features wood products, fire control and the 2006 Maryland centennial of forestry.

FOREST MANGEMENT IN STATE FORESTS

In addition to providing recreation, watershed protection and wildlife habitat, these lands return money to the county treasury. Governor Ehrlich recently presented the county commissioners with a $900,000 check generated by timber sales and park uses. Professional forest management techniques used in the Savage River and Potomac–Garrett state forests returned 52 percent of that amount which came from timber sales of these forests. There is a live and profitable wood products industry in Garrett County. Professional foresters make sure the allowable cut does not exceed growth on all state forest lands. Remember, look over your woods for insect and disease problems.

NOVEMBER MEETING SLATED

The next meeting of the Garrett County Forest Conservancy Board is slated for 9 a.m. on Monday, Nov. 14, at the Mt. Nebo office. The public is invited.

Exercise: Sticking With It

With the holidays right around the corner, make sure that you are sticking with your exercise and dieting plans. This is the time of year when people tend to get off track and often lose motivation. Exercise shouldn't be something you do only when you want to drop those 10 extra pounds. To be successful, it has to be thoroughly integrated into your lifestyle; it should be something you do as routinely as eating, sleeping, and taking your morning shower. Unfortunately, that can be difficult, as you may already know. The information below may help you stay on course when your motivation starts to diminish.

•Make it personal. Your first step on the lifelong path to healthy physical activity is to identify what works for you. Think about what kind of activities suit your lifestyle, time constraints, budget, physical condition, and likes and dislikes. This is a very important step because many people will quit exercise programs or make excuses not to exercise for many of the reasons previously listed. And remember, everyone is unique; the same exercise program does not work for everyone. That is where personalized exercise plans come into play.

•Make it fit. For most people, time constraints are a major problem to overcome. Start planning your exercise sessions by making a detailed schedule of your week. Look for ways you can work in blocks of exercise. Can you get up half an hour earlier every morning for a walk? Would this mean going to bed earlier? Be realistic. In addition to the time you schedule every day, look for ways to add bits of activity and recreational exercise, an extra lap around the mall when you're shopping or a Saturday morning bike ride. After the first week, adjust your schedule in places where it may not be working.

•Set some goals. Set a long-term goal, and break it into weekly or monthly targets. For example, to drop 25 pounds in a year, you'll need to lose just over 2 pounds a month. Some prefer to set short-term goals that lead toward a long-term goal. That way you can feel a sense of accomplishment when you reach the short-term goals. The goal can be as simple as exercising for at least 30 minutes every day, and keeping a calendar or exercise chart to record what you doing.

•Reward yoar efforts. Meeting your exercise goals, even short-term ones, is cause for celebration. It reflects your commitment to improving your health. Find ways to pat yourself on the back; rewards that don't involve a high-calorie treat will make you feel best. Treat yourself to a massage or a pedicure for some pampering for all the hard work you have been putting forth.

•Getting back on track. Even the most dedicated exercisers sometimes go astray. Almost anything can knock you off track: a bad cold, an out-of-town trip, or a stretch of bad weather. That's why it's critical to learn how to reclaim your routine. If you've been away from your routine for two weeks or more, don't expect to start where you left off. Cut your workout in half for the first few days to give your body time to readjust.

The bigger challenge may come in getting yourself back in an exercise frame of mind. Try to keep confidence in yourself when you relapse. Instead of expending energy on feeling guilty and defeated, focus on what it'll take to get started again. Once you resume your program, you'll be amazed at how quickly it will begin to feel natural.

If you are over age 50 and are interested in starting an individualized exercise program, please contact Flowery Vale Health & Fitness Center at 301-746-8050.

GIRLS SCOUTS ARE "A-MAZED" Members of several Girl Scout Troops of Garrett County were recently treated to a trip to the Cove Run Corn Maze. Almost 100 girls and their families tested their knowledge to find their way around the 10-acre corn maze. The girls also traded SWAPS (Share With A Pal pins) and created dolls from corn husks. The Garrett County Girl Scout Community Service Team was able to treat the Scouts to the adventure through funding from United Way of Garrett County and the Civic Club of Oakland. Persons interested in volunteering as a Girl Scout troop leader or registering their daughter in Girl Scouts may call Elizabeth Huxford, community leader, at 301-387-2280.

The hospital currently has 68 volunteers in the program. At present, the most tenured volunteers have been with the VIVA program for 14 years, since its creation in 1991. Those volunteers are Helen Atwill, Betty Croston, Letha Hanlin, Bobbie Henderson, Jackie Johnson, Patsy O'Brien, and Dottie White.

"We are extremely fortunate to have so many volunteers working throughout our hospital," said Kathy Greaser, director of volunteer services. "Our volunteers play a vital role in helping us deliver quality healthcare services to our patients."

ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT COUNCILS MEET – The Garrett County Association of Student Councils recently held two meetings at Garrett College. The purpose of the association is to provide a meeting time and place for students from all middle and high schools in the county. The students and advisors meet and review issues at each school and in the county. Reports are given by each school as well as the student member on the board (Cory Lewis) and ACE (Advisory Committee on Education) committee members. This month's agenda included the county-wide fall costume dance, state leadership conference, legislative session training and other instructional topics. Minutes from both meetings are available at both high schools and both middle schools. Persons wanting more information about the Garrett County Association of Student Councils may contact one of the high schools. Photo courtesy of Blake Herman and Ashley Walters.

First-Graders To To Take CHOPS Tours At GCMH

Each school year, Garrett County Memorial Hospital opens its doors to area first-graders to give them an opportunity to get a behind-the-scenes look at various areas in the hospital. This program, titled Children's Hospital Orientation Program (CHOPS) is designed to familiarise children with the hospital and ease their fears about receiving medical treatment, a spokesperson explained.

Students in the program begin their tour in the emergency room. Although it is subject to change based on patient volume and conditions, students are usually able to visit the radiology department and the family centered maternity suite. They also view a PowerPoint presentation on the operating room.

Through the tour, they see firsthand how a cardiac monitor works, how blood pressures are taken, and what their bones look like on X-ray film. They also receive a goody bag with items that help them share their experience with others at home.

Kearstin Hinebaugh, marketing and development specialist, heads up the CHOPS program and leads the children on their tour of the hospital.

"The children enjoy the entire tour, but their favorite stop is at the family centered maternity suite to see the newborn babies," Hinebaugh said.

Currently, more than 12 classes are scheduled to tour GCMH this school year.

For more information about Garrett County Memorial Hospital's CHOPS program or to schedule a tour, persons may call Hinebaugh at 301-533-4041.

CHILDREN LEARN MORE, FEAR LESS – That's the idea behind CHOPS, the Children's Hospital Orientation Program for Students, offered each year at Garrett County Memorial Hospital to the county's first graders. The program, which provides tours of various hospital departments to the youngsters, helps the kids understand what takes place in these areas at times of illness, injury, or when a new baby sister or brother comes along. The knowledge helps to lessen their fear, a hospital spokesperson explained, especially if they themselves have to go to the emergency room or be admitted to the hospital. See story. Pictured above is emergency department nurse Beth Spencer with CHOPS students.

Appalachian Lab To Celebrate GIS Day Wednesday

The University of Maryland Center for Environmental Science Appalachian Laboratory, Frostburg, will celebrate GIS (Geographic Information Systems) Day on Wednesday, Nov. 16, from 4 to 6 p.m.

"Come learn how we use GIS – a computer mapping and spatial data analysis technology – in our research, and how we're helping schools incorporate it into K through 12 classrooms," said a Appalachian Laboratory spokesperson.

"During the celebration visitors can independently explore the lab's many uses of GIS or participate in half-hour long staff-led investigations using GIS to look at local data layers we analyze in our research and in our school programs."

The Appalachian Laboratory is located at 301 Braddock Road, off 1-68. For more information, persons may call 301-689-7109.

Zion Lutheran Women Convene

Women of the Evangelical Church in America (ELCA) of Zion Lutheran Church, Jennings, held their monthly meeting in the church last Wednesday, Nov. 2.

The annual ingathering of the thank offering was observed. The service included singing the hymn "Lord, With Glowing Heart I'd Praise Thee," and the reading of Psalm 100.

The study, titled "Act Boldly in Peace," was introduced by Leota Baker. The lesson examined stories of childbirth in the Bible. Devotions closed with the Prayer of St. Francis of Assisi.

Judy Stanton presided over the business meeting.

The quarterly offering to the American Bible Society has been sent for the Bible-A-Month ministry.

Four baby quilts have been made and donated by Maxine Legeer, and five tops for baby quilts and material to finish them have been received from Carol Resh, to assist with the layette project.

It was decided to make a contribution to the local Warm the Children Fund.

Packages have been sent to Our Savior's Lutheran Church, Box Elder, Montana, for that church's Christmas giveaway to the Rocky Boy Indians. The packages contain 13 adult sweaters, two adult jackets, two men's shirts, two lady's blouses, eight children's jackets, one pair of slipper socks, eight pairs of gloves, five baby's romper suits, and the following hand-knit articles made by a member of Zion's unit: four caps, four baby blankest, and two cap and scarf sets.

Evergreens have been gathered to make the Advent wreath for the church.

Very Few Vaccines Contain Thimerosal

Thimerosal is a preservative used in certain injectable products. It contains about 50% mercury. Since the 1930s, thimerosal has been widely used in vaccines. Over the past several years, concern about the use of thimerosal has been increasing. The medical community has realized that even low levels of mercury exposure could raise the potential for toxic effects. Infants were of particular concem as they now receive many vaccines throughout their formative years and are likely to be a greater risk.

In July 1999, the U.S. Public Health Service and the American Academy of Pediatrics issued a joint statement formally requesting that manufacturers eliminate or reduce the amount of thimerosal in vaccines as a precautionary measure. Today, with the exception of some flu vaccines, none of the vaccines used in the U.S. to protect preschool aged children contain thimerosal. For adults, an annual influenza vaccine with current reduced amounts is likely to pose little risk. Thimerosal may still be used in the early stages of vaccine manufacturing but is removed through a purification process rendering the product essentially thimerosal-free. For a list of mercury-containing vaccines, go to www.fda.gov or to www.cdc.gov. If you get your flu shot at your pharmacy, talk to your pharmacist.

MEMORIES OF GARRETT COMMUNITY COLLEGE

"Are you still teaching?" "Are you still at the college?" I heard those questions every time I would see a former GCC student in a grocery store or on the streets of Oakland. It always made me realize two things: At least one student remembered me, and I had been working there so long that my name had become associated with longevity. The numbers added up. The college opened in 1971. I started there in 1972 and stayed for 30 years. In that time I saw the college grow from three buildings and about 100 students to what it is today, and I am proud to have been a part of that growth.

We were a true "community" college then, as most of our students came from this area and most of them were first in their families to seek higher education. The campus environment then was more like that of a large family than a college. Because I taught English, I knew most of the students, and I tried to calm their fears about writing college papers. "Write about what you know," I told them. "Get your thoughts down on paper, and don't worry about where to put the commas. We'll take care of that later." I have fond memories of those early classes and a great appreciation for the many things I learned from the students.

Another dictum to my students of writing has always been to show the reader with concrete details rather than tell about it. Two students in one of my early English 101 classes, Ben and Pete, accepted my advice and wrote about what they knew — hunting rattlesnakes in an old abandoned railroad tunnel in Swanton. I probably learned more than I wanted to know when I read those papers.

Then there was Rob in creative writing class, who showed me the beauty of an open road in the poems he wrote about going out with his bike and his guitar. In another class I learned from Johnny all the steps in the process of milking a cow – something I have never done. I also learned how to build a tree stand and where to find the biggest trout. The Garrett students taught me many things a city-bred person would never know.

Even more than sharing the know-how of being self-sufficient in the natural world, they were an inspiration to me, a tonic for my spirit. I knew several young single mothers who persisted in getting their education for the sake of their children. And there was Beulah who took her first college class at the age of 65, and Ida, mother of nine, whose door was always open to someone needing a home or just a good meal. I remember Ellis, a World War II veteran of the U.S. Army Tank Corps, who taught me and all of the students in the class the real meaning of "hillbilly" and why he was proud to be one.

Back in 1972 we had no classrooms, no stationary chalk boards, and just enough tablet-arm desks to get by. One of my afternoon classes had 32 students and 31 chairs. At the time there was a gang of 7-8 young male students who would rather play hearts than go to class. They occupied a permanent table in the room we then called Servomation, now the Art Gallery, and kept the game going all day, running to class between hands. In the hearts club I remember Tom, Bill, Charlie, Rick, Dave, Shoe, Barney, and probably a few others.

Two of the hearts players were in my afternoon class. I jokingly suggested that they take turns coming to class, one on Tuesday, the other on Thursday, thereby saving a chair. They knew I was kidding, but nevertheless decided to try the arrangement for a week. Like a dutiful teacher I marked them both absent.

A major problem with the open-space learning center where we had teaching areas but no walls was the lack of sound barriers. There were portable room dividers and portable chalk boards around us that formed a visual barrier from the knees to the head but did not contain the sound. Students sitting in English class in Area B would hear mathematical equations from Area C and the laws of economics from Area D. Wherever they sat, whichever class they were in, all of the students would hear Dr. Dailey, the history professor, he of the golden throat, whose voice carried throughout the learning center. When George was teaching, everyone took history.

Campus life for Garrett students was not entirely academic in those early days, as we had an active student government association, other clubs, a yearbook and student newspaper, and a wide variety of intramural sports that ranged from ping-pong to touch football. Younger members of the faculty and staff joined with the students to form the teams. It was not unusual to see the women's volleyball coach swatting a softball, or the history professor catching a pass in a touch football game.

Because I was advisor to the yearbook and the newspaper, students on the staffs of these publications congregated in my office, where there was usually a crowd and a jar of jellybeans. I would see editors Mary Jane and Sharon around campus with their notebooks, and Bonnie with a camera looking for photo ops. For five years we published a yearbook and attempted to get every student's photo in it.

Another project I remember well was the Special Olympics that we started in the early '70s. Each year Suzanne, Doug, and Dave led small groups of GCC students to visit classrooms in county schools and train special ed. students in the olympic events, and each spring our campus would host the Garrett County Special Olympics. It was gratifying to see the sportsmanship and the friendships between the special ed. students and college students develop over the years. I remember Roger, a perennial competitor, who was the crowd favorite, and a sweet-faced little boy named Ronnie who, despite his crippling illness, wanted to compete in the relay. When it was his turn to carry the baton, a little girl on his team yelled, "Wait for Ronnie."

In addition to intramural sports, Garrett, the newest and smallest community college in Maryland, fielded intercollegiate teams in men's basketball and baseball, and women's basketball and volleyball. Not only did we play colleges four and five times our size, but we beat most of them. Our first coach and athletic director, Dr. Dennis Fearnow, established a precedent that all Garrett teams would follow: Be first class!

Along with winning teams, Garrett had a feature the other colleges did not have – cheerleaders. Dressed in Laker blue and white uniforms, the six girls who formed the squad kept it going for about five years, rotating new girls in when others would graduate. We also had a chorus that performed at colleges throughout Maryland and West Virginia and at our commencement each year until it was replaced by the Garrett College Pipes and Drums.

As years passed, the college grew in all dimensions, and along with more students we got classrooms with walls, computer labs, new buildings, a residence hall, an information technology center, and a center for outdoor studies. We began to see the second generation of Garrett families come to college. The year before I retired it was my pleasure to have in class the daughter of a couple who had met in my English class in the early '70s. Our students are still the remarkable people they were then.

As I look back over the three decades I have taught Garrett students, I take pride and pleasure in realizing all the college has become. And I am very grateful to the students for being such an important part of my life.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Ruth DiPaolo is ill. She went into Garrett Memorial Hospital late last Thursday evening with a case of pneumonia. She was eventually admitted to the ICU last Friday night, and is in Morgantown presently for her heart. I do not know much more about it yet, but it puts me into a 7-year-old girl's mindset in which all she wants is her mommy back.

I can remember wanting to visit her in the hospital when I was that age, but kids weren't allowed. I did find out later that my sister Carol was sneaked in by our aunt, who was a nurse, when she was staying with them in Cumberland, and I was always jealous that she got to go and I didn't. Mom and my relatives discouraged me from going to Oakland to visit her because it would be difficult for me to get into the hospital right now, with all the construction.

Lesa Whittemore once said about our wind, "Oh, the wind, the wind." I raise that doubly today. I have never before seen a wind like this Sunday's, with the exception of during a major blizzard. The winds seem to be coming out of the south, which often means strong storms in our region. There is no rain with the wind. It will be a wonder if any leaves reinam in the trees after these winds.

I enjoyed a lively birthday celebration with my two darling daughters Caitlin and Meredith, who pampered me, showered me with useful gifts, and gave me a beautiful homemade card (the best kind!). I ordered a present for myself a while ago – a DVD copy of my favorite movie, National Velvet, but I have run out of time to sample it on my birthday because Meredith has become a serious Steelers fan, which occupied our television with the game between the Steelers and Green Bay Packers. As usual, I received birthday greetings from my Glotfelty aunts: Aunt Betty Hummel, Helen Englar, and Dot Quaintance, as well as my brothers and sister.

Speaking of birthday delay, this week also saw the celebration of the birthday of my brother-in-law Kevin Bass, as well as that of Bill Southerly. Kevin and Carol are in South Carolina busy helping Kevin's parents move back to Cumberland.

Maybe the wind will remove the leaves from the farm. I hope so. Actually, I wish the leaves would stay on the trees, because trees without leaves look somewhat dead to me. I can remember when I actually looked forward to real winter, snow, etc., because I wanted to ski, but, alas, I cannot enjoy that now.

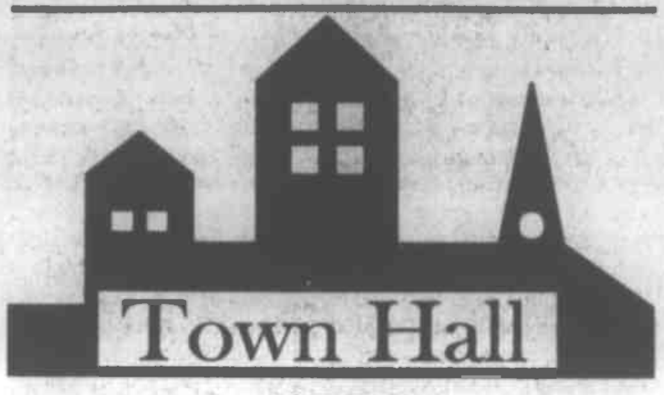
Margaret Hershberger likens her maple grove changing seasons to life, but it is a painful struggle, according to Margaret. She still hopes for a lot of prayer to give her comfort and peace. Meanwhile, my unstoppable mother is stuck in a Morgantown hospital instead of dashing here and there. I am sure she will get home before too long – hopefully Thursday – but she may have to stay there a little bit.

I believe I saw two eagles in the sky in the Bittinger area today. Since I was driving I couldn't get a good look to make sure that they were not unusually large hawks or vultures, but they looked like a painting of Wild Cat Rock on top of Meadow Mountain, soaring above the big outcrop of limestone. I am trying to paint the eagles as I saw them, big and soaring.

A Silpada Jewelry open house will be held this Saturday, Nov. 12, at the fellowship hall at Emmanuel Lutheran Church. The proceeds will go to the Relay for Life. This will be an excellent chance to do some Christmas shopping, and benefit a good cause.

Feme Beachy visited Annie Maria Maust last Friday.

While Scott Bass was home alone to take care of the house while his parents were gone, he got an unexpected visitor on Monday night – a large black bear had climbed up on the back porch! He decided not to take the dogs out for a walk.



Town Hall

ACCIDENT

The regular meeting of the mayor and town council and public hearing was held on Thursday, Nov. 3, at the town hall.

•A public hearing was held for the second reading and adoption of Ordinance 2005-6, Enforcement Ordinance Amendment. This amendment changes the process of issuing a warning or citation for municipal infraction.

•The council reviewed the project update report submitted by Clay Riley, Thrasher Engineering. Severn Trent is currently video taping the collection system lines to document leaking private laterals.

•Town resident Brian Homberg was present to discuss the speeding cars on Accident-Bittinger Road. The area residents are concerned for the safety of their children along the road.

•Craig Garrett of Champion Farm was present to discuss the meat processing business he is interested in building. He told the council he may hold a public informational meeting to answer any questions Accident residents may have pertaining to the business.

•Jo Sheffield of Devine and Sheffield was present to discuss the 2004-05 financial report.

•The council discussed the extra limbs and branches down because of the recent storm. Property owners are responsible for clearing their own debris. The limbs and branches may be put on the burn pile located on the west side of Town Park West.

•The council voted to support and pass Resolution 2005-2, Support for the Garrett County Municipal Assistance Program.

The next town meeting will be held on Thursday, Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Accident Town Hall.

Ask The Everyday Scientist

TYPES OF FUELS

by Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen

Q. What are the differences – chemical and economic – between gasoline, diesel fuel, aviation gas, heating oil, natural gas, propane, methane and butane? How are their prices interrelated?

All of these fuels are in the class known as hydrocarbons. Their chemistry is based on bonds between hydrogen and carbon atoms. The same is true of wood and coal. When a C – H bond breaks in a chemical reaction, it releases energy. The very ordinary word burning signifies exactly that: The C – H bonds break, and oxygen combines with either the carbon to form CO_2 or the hydrogen to form H_2O. The newly formed chemicals are in a lower energy state, and therefore there is a net release of energy. That energy goes into making whatever gas molecules are nearby move faster. We say the process produces heat. The hot gases try to expand, and inside an engine they can push a piston out of the way. The piston is inside a cylinder, so its motion is in only one direction; and it is connected to a crankshaft, which turns and makes a vehicle move forward.

The simplest hydrocarbon is made of one carbon atom connected to four hydrogen atoms, in the shape of a tetrahedron with the carbon at the center. The formula is CH_4, the name is methane, and it is commonly called natural gas. (It got that name because it is produced in the decay of many biological organisms.)

Generally, carbon likes to have four chemical bonds, which means it is usually connected to four other atoms. But they need not all be hydrogen. If a carbon atom bonds to another carbon atom, and then each of these bond to three hydrogen atoms, the new molecule has the form $H_3C - CH_3$, or just C_2H_6 for simplicity. That gas is named ethane.

It's easy to keep going, building up molecules with more carbons in a chain. If another carbon is placed in between the H_3C and the CH_3 groups, that carbon will have two of its four bonds connected to the adjacent carbons, but the other two bonds will have to connect to something else – typically a couple of hydrogen atoms. The new formula is $H_3C - CH_2 - CH_3$. That is given the name propane and has the simple formula C_3H_8.

If still another carbon is placed between two carbons, it too will "spend" two of its bonds on neighboring carbons, and pick up two other hydrogen atoms to complete the 4 total bonds. That new molecule is $H_3C - CH_2 - CH_2 - CH_3$. The formula is C_4H_{10} and its name is butane.

If we draw a diagram of it, it looks like:

$$\begin{array}{c} H\ H\ H\ H \\ H - C - C - C - C - H \\ H\ H\ H\ H \end{array}$$

By now it's becoming visible that a sort of chain is starting to form. It is possible to keep on inserting more carbons (each of which will pick up two hydrogens) and make a longer chain. If there are eight carbon atoms in the molecule, we give it the name octane, and the formula is C_8H_{18}. An extremely long chain – with thousands of carbon atoms in the chain – has the very simple name oil.

Gasoline is a mixture of several hydrocarbons that are pretty similar to octane. The octane rating of gasoline is a figure that indicates how much energy will be released upon burning. Aviation fuel is a slightly different mixture of hydrocarbon chains. Ditto for kerosene and for diesel fuel. In diesel fuel, as in home heating oil, in the mixture the number of carbons is (on average) somewhere around 25-ish.

Basically, all of these fuels have virtually identical chemistry: in burning, the C – H bonds break and release energy. Other factors determine the choice by the user.

The most influential factor for vehicles is that the fuel be a liquid. Cars, trucks and buses can run perfectly well on methane, but it's clumsy to use, because it has to be stored as a compressed gas. Butane is a liquid at room temperature (and propane only needs to be compressed a little), but it's hard to beat gasoline for convenience. As the hydrocarbon chains get longer, they become more viscous liquids, and the convenience diminishes. On cold days, a diesel engine won't start unless the fuel is first preheated to get it to flow. There is an industrial heating oil named Bunker C that is very thick, and must be pre-heated under all conditions.

On the other hand, if you're not moving, you might as well go with the lightest hydrocarbon, methane. That's why natural gas is so popular for heating homes, provided a pipeline runs to your house. No gas pipe? Use propane or heating oil and watch virtually the exact same chemistry take place.

Economics comes in when we ask where these fuels come from. When crude oil comes out of the ground, it is sent to a refinery, perhaps in tankers crossing the ocean. Oil starts out as an extremely long chain, and at the refinery that chain is broken up into smaller pieces – the process is called cracking, naturally enough. Depending on the fine tuning of a refinery, they can produce larger or smaller shares of heating oil, gasoline, diesel, aviation fuel, and so on. The refiners estimate what's likely to be in demand a few months ahead, and produce more of that product and less of another. For example, hardly any home heating oil is produced in late spring and summer.

If the price of crude oil goes up, the price of all refined products will go up. There can be local price spikes by happenstance, as when a very cold winter comes along after the refiners guessed a smaller amount of home heating oil would be needed. Substitution of one fuel for another is happening on a limited basis: Biodiesel fuel made from soy or cornstalks or sugar beets is being used in some markets; a blend of ethanol and gasoline is popular in the farm states.

Methane gas is likewise taken out of the ground; in nature it often is found in conjunction with oil. Through a series of interconnected pipelines, gas utilities store it in huge chambers (especially in the summer when little is needed) and deliver it to buildings on demand.

Every stage in the process from underground to your home or vehicle involves some economic activity, and somebody makes money at every stage. The laws of supply and demand come into play. In today's world, where OPEC supplies 2/3 of America's oil, and China and India would like to buy five times as much as they're getting, supply is stretched pretty thin and prices have gone up.

Natural gas in America has always been produced domestically. In the late 1970s there was a shortage, but eventually the price regulations were lifted and people drilled to find more; and a decade or so later there was a glut and the price of methane dropped. Now we're back to a shortage of natural gas again, and the price has gone way up.

The price of natural gas is slightly tied to the price of oil, because many industrial factories can use either, and will naturally select the cheapest fuel available. However, factors like a cold winter/mild winter or the pricing strategy of OPEC are more important factors in establishing the price.

The Family of Harold "Rob" Upole

would like to thank the many people of Garrett County for the love and support they gave to Rob during his illness and after the passing of our son and brother. To our families who shared his short 38 years with fun, escapades, and love. He enjoyed his cousins very much and built many memories. To all his many friends at Arrowhead whom he loved deeply. The 20 years he spent there were some of the best of his life. You were his family apart from us. Thank you for your cards, calls and stopping by. You highlight his life and made him feel so loved. To Garrett County Memorial Hospital, the many nurses, doctors, and other staff members who over the years came to know him so well. It always amazed Rob when he would stop by the Emergency Room how he was always remembered and you knew his name. In the last few months, especially the people in ICU, 3rd Floor, and Emergency Room who took such great pains to make him feel comfortable. To Home Health and Hospice workers who made it possible for him to be at home, which was what he so wanted, and to the newest medical person in his life, Dr. Paolini, for his excellent care. As Rob would say, "You're the best!" To the many churches and friends for the prayers, cards, and hugs they always were giving, and to all who gave us support with cards, food, phone calls, etc. When Rob passed away, the Burdock-Durst Funeral Home for helping us to give Rob the beautiful sendoff that he wanted. Rob wanted everyone to know that he had not realized how many true friends he had until this past year; how blessed he felt that so many people in Garrett County and those who had moved away cared about him with so much love. Although "thank you" seems like such an inadequate phrase in comparison to all the love and support you have given to Rob and to us, it is the only words we have to give. As Rob prepared for his final journey his hope and wish was that he would not be forgotten, and as the sun warms your face and the wind touches your cheeks, you will know he is still there with a soft and gentle touch and that you will remember him with a smile; you will remember him with love.

God Bless you all for sharing Rob's life.

State Announces An Increase In Heating Assistance Funds

by Chris Landers
Capital News Service

BALTIMORE – Gov. Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. announced Tuesday that the state would add $13 million dollars to a program helping low-income families with their heating bills this winter.

In the face of spiraling costs for home heating fuels, officials are expecting more Marylanders to apply for energy assistance.

Mary Lou Kueffer, director of the state's Office of Home Energy Programs, said the number of people applying this year has already risen 10 to 12 percent.

Ehrlich said the program will be expanded by raising the income limits for eligibility to 175 percent of the federal poverty level. For a family of four, the new limit is $33,862.50 a year.

He also said a program to help winterize area homes will get an additional $400,000, and Baltimore Gas and Electric and Constellation Energy will kick in an additional $26 million for energy assistance and winterization programs.

The governor made a "direct pitch to the people of Maryland," asking them to "be a little more generous this winter," and give to non-profits that help low-income Maryland residents pay the bills.

The Maryland Energy Assistance Program is largely funded by the federal government, which gave Maryland around $29 million last year. This year, Kueffer said, "we're hoping we get somewhat more," but she's concerned that the amount could be less.

"This extra funding [from the state] is going to help us tremendously," she said.

The latest projections from the federal Energy Information Administration indicate that consumers can expect to pay about 40 percent more to heat their homes with natural gas this winter than last. Heating oil will cost about 27 percent more. Although natural gas prices fell slightly at the end of October, they remain near record levels for this time of year.

Ehrlich announced the new funding at the home of Earl and Barbara Harris, a few blocks from Pimlico Racetrack.

Harris, a retired school bus driver, said he lives on a fixed income of about $700 a month, and last year's heating bills took about half of that.

"You've got to eat, got a couple other bills to pay. This is going to help a lot," Earl Harris said.

He gave a tour of his home, pointing out improvements made recently by the state and by local energy companies as part of a winterization program – weather stripping around the doors, expanding foam in cracks, insulation in the attic, a new door where rain used to leak into the basement, and energy efficient light bulbs.

"Our heating bill was high [last year]" Barbara Harris said. "We had drafts – now we don't have that." She said she hoped her neighbors would sign up for the program.

"We have to say 'come forward,'" she said, adding that pride kept some from applying, but "when the cold weather hits, you don't care who knows it."

Women Veterans Honored As BPW Women Of Year

by Jo Donaldson

There are more than 43,000 women veterans in Maryland, said Cindy Smith, a women's issues coordinator, at a recent meeting of Business and Professional Women. Women veterans were honored as Garrett County's BPW Women of the Year.

Most women veterans do not take advantage of their VA benefits, she said. She is helping to get information to women veterans as part of an outreach program for the Maryland Department of Veterans Affairs. This meeting to honor women veterans and those currently serving in the military was a good place to discuss benefits.

"We wanted to honor these women and others from Garrett County who have served their country or are currently serving their country," said Phyllis Trickett, co-chair of the event.

Nellie Fraley, joined the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in 1943.

"Ike was there to meet us in England," she said. The current Queen of England was still a princess then, and was driving an ambulance. Fraley had opportunities to talk to her and even loaned her a pair of hose when her father was coming to visit.

There was a lot of discipline, she told the audience, but she felt it was a privilege to serve in the military. Fraley did use her veterans' benefits to get her bachelor's degree of divinity.

Mary Ann Daly wanted to become a nurse and join the service from the time she was 3 or 4 years old. She took care of servicemen and their families in Turkey and later in Honolulu, where she also saw many wounded young men from the fighting in Vietnam. She was an Air Force nurse and then in the Army

"I will be proud when I see that lady standing in the park," said Delores Proulx, who was in the military in 1958. Enlisted in the Women's Army Corps, she was in the U. S. Army Signal Corps.

Joan Lyons said her military experience was easier because of the efforts of these women. Unlike the earlier veterans, she was allowed to continue serving after having a child. A graduate of the U.S. Army War College, she was a lieutenant colonel when she retired four years ago.

Serving in Saudia Arabia, Desert Shield and Desert Storm, she said, was a character building experience. She could see the lights at night from the bombings. A dietitian, Lyons stressed the importance of good nutrition for soldiers in battle, including keeping a consistent weight so gas masks fit correctly.

Wendy Groves served in Korea, Germany, and Iraq. She worked in a 187-bed field hospital just 30 miles south of Baghdad. Because this is a humanitarian effort, she also took care of babies and others needing medical treatment. She often didn't see mail for three months, since the unit was moving around. Running out of supplies was a constant worry.

In spite of various challenges, all the women were proud to have served their country.

"You paved the way," Groves told the other women veterans.

Brief biographies of some other women veterans also were read that evening. All were invited to the dedication of the statue in Oakland.

"These women are an inspiration to all women. and we are very proud to have had the opportunity to honor them," said Joanne Harsh, co-chair.

WOMEN IN ARMED FORCES HONORED – Women in the armed forces were honored at the recent Garrett County Business and Professional Women meeting. From the left are Nellie Fraley, World War II veteran; Wendy Groves, who recently returned from Iraq; Cindy Smith, Maryland Department of Veterans Affairs, Veterans Service Officer, and the Department of Women's issues coordinator; Joan Lyohs, who recently retired with 26 years of service; Mary Ann Daly, who served during the Vietnam War; and Dolores Proulx, World War II veteran. When the Lights Went Out, Your Patience Came Shining Through

Thank you for your patience and understanding during the recent unexpected snowstorms power interruptions. Knowing we have your support makes our job a little easier.

The most destructive storm in our company's history hit our three-state region on October 24 and 25, ripping limbs from trees, breaking utility poles, knocking down power lines, and interrupting electric service to more than 300,000 customers. While we know you had to adjust your life during the time it took for power to be restored, please know that a dedicated team of Allegheny Power employees, electrical contractors and neighboring utility workers labored around the clock to restore your service as quickly as possible. MLP Church Sets Missions Conference

The annual Missions Conference of Faith Evangelical Free Church is slated for Friday through Sunday, November 11-13, with services nightly at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 10:45 a.m. This year's conference theme is "Around the Corner, Around the World."

The keynote speaker will be Dr. Rochunga Pudaite, founder, president, and CEO of Bibles for the World, headquartered in Colorado Springs, Colo. Additional presentations by missions representatives Brad and Beth Steele, Nellie Ashby, and Dan and Sheila Jeffreys are also on the agenda.

Pudaite was born in the remote village of Senvon, Manipur, in India. He founded Partnership Missions in 1959, which spawned Bibles for the World. That organization has distributed over 15 million free copies of the New Testament to over 108 nations around the world. The goal of the effort is to make 1 billion Bibles available during this generation.

A motion picture, Beyond the Next Mountain, was filmed and produced in Hollywood to tell the story of Bibles for the World and Pudaite's life. Reared in a jungle village in a tribe of former headhunters, Pudaite has translated the entire Bible into the Hmar language and has authored several books.

ROCHUNGA PUDAITE

NELLIE ASHBY

Under Pudaite's leadership, a junior college, five high schools, and 25 village schools are in operation in Manipur, Mizoram and Assam, India, and five schools are operating in Delhi, India.

Pudaite graduated from Allahabad University in India. He studied theology for one year in Scotland and for three years at the Wheaton College Graduate School of Theology. He later earned a master of science in education administration from Northern Illinois University.

The Steeles have worked with Wycliffe Bible Translators since 1999. They served as translators in remote Oaxaca, Mexico, prior to assuming their present position as Wycliffe recruiters, working out of the agency's northeast regional office in Pennsylvania.

Oakland resident Nellie Ashby is the founder and director of Mountain Top Crisis Pregnancy Center, which has offices in Mountain Lake Park, Keyser, and Kingwood. The center served 350 individuals in 2004. After training in the electronics field with NASA, she worked extensively in the electronics industry, building surveillance equipment a portion of that time.

Dan and Sheila Jeffreys will be representing Mountain Top Youth for Christ. Members of YFC's board of directors, the couple have taught Sunday school and been involved in youth programs and athletics for years. Both natives of southwestern Pennsylvania, Dan works in sales and Sheila is employed by Railey Realty.

Nursery care will be provided during each service, and missions classes for elementary school-age children will also be available.

IT'S TIME AGAIN TO HELP...

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Winter Clothing For Needy Children

For the ninth year, The Republican newspaper and the Civic Club of Oakland are asking for your help. Without it, many Garrett County children will go cold this winter.

Just what is the WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM?

THE REPUBLICAN
GWFC Civic Club of Oakland

The Republican's WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM is basically neighbors helping neighbors. We here at the paper are asking for monetary donations (tax deductible) from you, the readers. The collected funds are being used to purchase new winter clothing for Garrett County children in need. Because the newspaper administers the program, there are no added fees or overhead costs. Every penny donated is used to buy the winter items.

How are needy children being identified?

A special corps of volunteers is working right now to identify those in need this year. (Please do not call for the service. If you have been selected, you will be notified.)

How will the children's clothing be purchased?

Members of the Civic Club of Oakland are taking the families shopping at Wal-Mart. The children, with the help of their parents, may select their own new coats, hats, sweaters, long johns, jeans, boots, pajamas, or other needed winter items, spending up to $100 per child.

The Civic Club of Oakland is again heading up the volunteer/shopping coordination in the southern part of the county. Betty Ellington is the head coordinator, assisted by several other club members. For the northern part of the county, Lisa Broadwater will continue in her role as the coordinator of shopping at the LaVale Wal-Mart. Many other functions of the program are being handled by Civic Club members, for which the newspaper staff is very grateful. Dora Hanlin has again volunteered to help handle the applications, as she has from the beginning of the program. Her help is invaluable.

To make a donation, please complete the coupon below, cut it out, and mail it along with your tax-deductible contribution to the address noted. All checks should be made out to Warm the Children.

Donations should be postmarked by December 3, 2005. Those collected after December 3 will be saved for next year's campaign.

Farmers "Granted New Fields" By Harford Marketing Group

by Dorcas Taylor
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON – From summer to fall, David Keyes and his employees pack up his trailer, hitch it to his pickup, and travel to farmers' markets in Harford County, selling [illegible] and cheeses made from his dairy cows' milk.

Although going on the road is sometimes grueling and eats into family time, Keyes, 50, might expand his cheese and ice cream business, separate from his 200-acre dairy operation in Havre de Grace, because it turns a profit – a sometimes elusive goal for farmers

What made that profit possible was a unique program from the Harford County Marketing Cooperative. Keyes was one of 14 farmers to win a grant from the group designed to help farmers move toward financial viability and independence by rewarding innovative ideas to expand their businesses.

The idea for the cooperative, in existence since 2002, came from discussions about how the county could help farmers make more money from their goods, said John Sullivan, agricultural coordinator in the county office of economic development.

Last spring, Keyes received $2,600 from the nonprofit's pool of $25,000, and bought an ice cream dipping cabinet and devoted some money toward advertising.

Keyes began selling cheeses made from his cows' milk about five years ago and ventured into ice cream in 2003. The cheese is made by an Amish man in Pennsylvania; a friend in Delaware makes the ice cream.

Initially, low milk prices and the thought of maintaining economic independence and control prompted Keyes to venture into direct retail.

Keyes, who knew of one other farm selling cheese in the county, thought, "If they can do it, then we can do it too."

Although he said he's unsure how much money he made from his ice cream and cheese this year, Keyes said he's certain it is at least double what he could get commercially.

The $1,900 dipping cabinet Keyes bought with his grant stores three sizes of the 14 ice cream flavors he sells in 3-ounce cups, pints, and quarts. He is not licensed to hand dip the ice cream, so it is sold in prepacked containers. Keyes also sells three kinds of Colby and nine types of cheddar cheese.

Being a dairy farmer isn't easy, said Kate Dallam, a dairy farmer and president of the cooperative's nine-member board of directors. Typical dairy farms sell to cooperatives that work through brokers to sell their product to grocery store chains and other companies, she said. The money then is funneled in reverse order to the farmer.

"They say you can't sell milk unless you're selling cigarettes and gasoline," Dallam said.

Dallam started her own cheese-making business in January 2001, and operates Broom's Bloom Dairy, a retail store in Bel Air that sells locally produced ice cream, cheese, vegetables, and other products.

Dallam shares a kinship with fellow farmers, especially younger ones who are innovative in their grant proposals that come before the board each October.

"Sometimes all it takes is for someone to support your idea," she said.

Among the ideas the board has considered, Dallam said, were ice cream startups, tires for a cow manure spreading business, organic farming, and a semen tank for cow embryos.

Awards are announced around February, said Bill Tharpe, board vice president. Requests last year were for more than $41,000, following the recent trend toward more requests for money than there is funding available, he said.

During the last two grant cycles, $25,000 was divided among grantees, whose requests ranged from $500 to $10,000. The cooperative likely will become more discriminating in the future, Tharpe said. The organization also is looking for state and federal aid to expand its funding.

To get a grant, farmers have to commit to the new aspect of their business for three years and only use the money for it. As a precaution, the cooperative writes the checks directly to the business providing the farmer with the necessary equipment or service.

Failing to meet the requirements or closing the business before the three years is up means any unused funds must be repaid, Tharpe said. So far, no one has reneged on the rules.

"It's not like we're bankrolling these ideas," Dallam said. "When you get to the point where you're about to sell the farm there's not much we can do to help."

The number of Maryland farms has steadily decreased. According to the state's Agricultural Statistics Service, there were 12,100 farms last year, but 14,500 in 1994, a 16.5 percent decline. At the beginning of the 20th century there were 49,000 farms in Maryland. The 2002 Census of Agriculture said there were 683 farms in Harford County, fifth overall in the state.

The grants may not be much, Keyes said, but 'it's money we didn't have to spend ourselves. It makes a difference when you have to pay for everything yourself."

Keyes recently bought a 40-acre farm in Aberdeen, and leases the Havre de Grace farm. If he decides to expand his ice cream and cheese business, Keyes said, he'd likely have to scale back on working with his dairy cows.

Although not economically feasible, Keyes said, "I wouldn't mind if I could give the product away . . . it's the kids really, I see their eyes light up and they say, 'Ice cream.'"

DON'T PAY FOR THEIR MISTAKE!

An important early step in purchasing a home is to get a lender's "pre-qualification" for financing. Then you'll know how much home you can afford before looking at homes with your agent, or setting foot into an "Open House." You'll also make a strong impression on sellers, because they'll know that your offer is solid.

A step to take before you talk to the lender about pre-approval is to get copies of your credit report and review them thoroughly. If your credit report contains errors, you jeopardize your chances for the best rate.

The interest rate you pay may be based on your credit score – the higher your score, the lower the rate. The lower the rate, the more home you can afford!

Lenders review reports from The Big Three – Equifax, TransUnion and Experian – and you should, too. Starting this fall, you can get a free copy of your credit report from each of the Big Three once a year Go to www.annualcreditreport.com. This website is jointly sponsored by the three companies.

Get a copy of your credit report a couple of months before you start looking at homes. Creditors usually have thirty days to correct errors, but give yourself some wiggle room. Verify that the debts are correct and belong to YOU (not someone else at the same address or with the same name).

You'll be amazed how many doors open for you with a clean credit report and low interest rates. Now you're ready for some happy house hunting!

If you'd like to buy a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call at the office, or on my cell phone at 301-501-DALE.

Farmers Warily Accept Olive Branch From Environmentalists

by Mary Ellen Slayter
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – First they announced they were "just dating."

Then the Chesapeake Bay Foundation began lobbying the General Assembly on behalf of Maryland's farmers, asking for $100 million a year to support programs such as cover crops, agriculture education and technical assistance, and land preservation.

Now, the relationship is getting downright serious, as environmentalists and farmers, traditional foes, are teaming up to push for measures that will benefit both.

"In order to save the bay, we have to save the farmer," Kim Coble, Maryland executive director for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, said at a news conference in September announcing the results of the foundation's study on the health of agriculture in the Bay's watershed. Maryland Farm Bureau president Earl "Buddy" Hance joined Coble for the conference at the foundation's Clagett Farm in Upper Marlboro.

It's quite a change from just a few years ago, when the state's farmers and environmentalists were at odds over whose fault it was that the Chesapeake Bay was in such sorry condition and who was responsible for the cleanup.

Bill Satterfield, executive director of Delmarva Poultry Industry Inc., a trade association for the chicken industry, greeted the shift as good news. "We welcome the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's help in our efforts to preserve agriculture in Maryland," he said.

But as much as they officially welcome their new partners, many farmers are still a bit skeptical about the turnaround, struggling to get past the wounds inflicted in the pfiesteria scare in 1997. High nitrogen levels from runoff are believed to have contributed to a bloom of the microorganism, leading to fish kills in the Chesapeake Bay watershed. Farmers were blamed for most of the problem.

"Farmers in general resent the implication that we're not good stewards of the land," said David Shaw, who owns a small organic produce farm in Howard County.

Lynne Hoot, executive director of the Maryland Grain Producers Association, said the farmers she represents are "cautiously optimistic" about the new alliance. "There's not as much trust as there could be," she said, adding that some of her farmers refer to environmental groups as "cash by fear" operations, more concerned with fund-raising efforts than solving problems.

"Farmers want an understanding of the facts because they're not afraid of them," Hoot said. "It's certainly not the farmer's goal to waste fertilizer."

Hoot credits the change in attitude to new leadership at the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. In particular she praised Coble, who became the group's Maryland executive director in July 2003. "We seem to be dealing with people who are looking for solutions, not problems," Hoot said.

Coble said the change goes beyond her work, though, and speaks to a fundamental shift for the group. "If you were to talk to my counterparts in Pennsylvania and Virginia, you'd hear the same thing," she said. "The change is based on really looking at our mission and asking some tough questions."

Those questions brought them to one concern they share with the state's farmers: land. Development pressure is the biggest threat to agriculture and the envi-

COUNTY COMMITTEE ELECTION UNDER WAY

KINGWOOD – Eric M. McCartney, executive director for USDA's Farm Service Agency in Preston County, has announced that the election period for the FSA County Committee is now under way and will continue through December 5. A representative from Local Administrative Area (LAA) 1 (Grant and Pleasant districts) will be elected to serve.

"County committees help administer federal farm programs at the local level. It is vital that FSA committees represent a cross-section of producers in each community," said McCartney. "I encourage all eligible producers, especially minorities and women, to make a difference by voting in this year's FSA county committee election."

FSA county committees help ensure that FSA agricultural programs serve the needs of local producers. Committees provide input on commodity price support loans and payments, conservation programs, disaster payments for some commodities, and other farm disaster assistance. FSA committees operate within official regulations designed to carry out federal laws. Most committees consist of three to five members, and may have one or more appointed advisors to further represent the interests of minority and women farmers.

Agricultural producers who participate or cooperate in any FSA program and are of legal voting age are eligible to vote. A person supervising and conducting the farming operations on an entire farm, but not of legal voting age, may also vote.

Ballots were mailed to eligible producers on November 4. Eligible producers should contact the Preston County FSA Office if they do not receive a ballot. All ballots must be returned to the voter's FSA office or be postmarked by December 5.

During this year's nomination period, the following LAA I producers were nominated: Suzanne Benson and Phyllis Summers, both of Bruceton Mills; and Delmas Westfall and William Whetsell, both of Albright.

The candidate receiving the most votes serves a three-year term as the elected county committee member. The person receiving the second most votes serves a three-year term as the first alternate. The candidate receiving the third most votes serves as second alternate for three years.

Approximately one-third of the nearly 8,000 committee seats nationwide are up for election annually. Newly elected committee members and alternates will take office January 1, 2006.

Producers can learn more about FSA county committees by visiting the Preston County FSA Office, located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza, telephone 304-329-1923, or online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/. •

Turkey Day Is Drawing Near...

by Willie Lantz, Maryland Cooperative Extension Agriculture Educator

As the temperature gets colder and the leaves start to fall off the trees, we start making plans for the big fall holiday of Thanksgiving.

The key player in the holiday is the turkey. Turkey is thought to be the traditional meal for Thanksgiving and Christmas, but it was not until the 1940s, when modern turkey production dramatically cut the price of turkey, that it became the most common food for the Thanksgiving and Christmas meals.

The modern domesticated turkey is descended from the North American wild turkey. The modern turkeys are broad-breasted varieties, which are often white in color. These varieties are prized for their white meat, fast growth, and excellent feed conversion rations. Commercial turkey production focuses on producing a large number of birds in environmentally controlled houses. These birds are fed a diet of corn and soybeans, which provides for fast, efficient growth.

While the United States produces 250 million turkeys each year, most of which are produced in large production houses, many small-scale farmers have turned to raising broilers and turkeys on pasture. These birds are brooded inside for four weeks until they are old enough to fend for themselves outside. Once moved outside, the turkeys can utilize forage (mostly grasses) for up to 50% of their diet. The other 50% of their diet is made up of ground corn, soybeans, and oats. The turkeys' diet is supplemented with all-natural minerals and vitamins. It takes about 15 to 20 weeks to raise a 15 to 20-pound dressed turkey.

Pastured turkeys are confined to a small pasture area using a portable nylon mesh fence that can be connected to an electrical fencer. The electrical fencer provides an electrical shock to prevent outside predators from entering the turkey area. The turkeys are moved to a new pasture every couple of days by pulling up the mesh fence and relocating to a new area. Producers utilizing the broad-breasted white birds have no problem confining the birds with a 3-foot high fence, as the birds have a very limited ability to fly.

Garrett College has been conducting pastured poultry demonstrational projects this past year. Utilizing the farm facilities at 960 Mosser Road in McHenry, Richard McCrobie, coordinator of agricultural studies, has raised about 300 pasture broilers and 100 pasture turkeys.

"The demonstrational projects are designed to allow potential producers in the area to experience first-hand what raising pasture poultry is all about," he said.

How to keep detailed feed records, compare various feeds, and other production information can be made available to local producers. In addition to raising poultry, the Garrett College Agriculture Program has set up an on-farm poultry processing facility. The facility enables the college and other local producers to process their farm-raised poultry and sell it directly to consumers.

The pasture poultry and processing facility at Garrett College has assisted producers with learning more about pasture poultry, which is a fast-growing small farm enterprise. The ability to process the birds has also opened up marketing opportunities for many small producers.

Anyone who would like to visit the Garrett College facility or learn more information about the pasture poultry project may call McCrobie at 301-387-3329.

ronment, said Delegate J.B. Jennings, R-Baltimore and Harford counties.

"We know where the problem is – land is being bought up for housing," said Jennings, who serves on the Agricultural Stewardship Commission, an advisory board created by the General Assembly in April to recommend ways to protect the bay from harmful effects of farming without hurting the farmers themselves. "Other workers can be put anywhere; farmers need the land."

James Steele, Carroll County Farm Bureau president, said the land preservation issues are a natural point of alliance for the two groups. "Our goals have always been the same," whether they knew it or not, he said. "Farms hold water and nutrients better than asphalt."

"You never see a subdivision being leveled to be made into a horse farm," said Steele, who owns a 640-acre horse farm.

The Chesapeake Bay Foundation is not the only environmental organization that is hoping to improve its relationships with farmers. Andrew Fellows, Chesapeake program director for Clean Water Action, said his group is also working to be more supportive of agriculture.

Fellows said that in many cases the problem lies in how the requests of farmers are framed. "They're happy to do things," he said. "They just don't want to be told to do it."

Much of the work needed now is building bridges, Fellows said. "Farmers love to swim and fish, too."

But many farmers and their advocates say they are still put off by what they see as an unfair proportion of blame being delivered at their barn doors.

"It's a lot easier to get farmers to change than the general public," Hoot said. "If you put a cover crop on every acre, but everyone's still driving around in SUVs and putting fertilizer on their lawns, you're still in trouble."

"A lot of bad blood came from the pfisteria scare in the 90s," Jennings said. "A lot of parties contributed to the problem, but only one was held accountable."

Jeffrey Griffith, president of the Anne Arundel County Farm Bureau, said a lot of that bad publicity was based on misconceptions. "People didn't really stop to think" before blaming farmers, he said.

"It would have been nice if it could have happened 10 years ago," Hoot said. "Of course, that's still better than waiting 10 more."

DON'T EVEN TRY TO OUTSMART A BEAR when he or she is determined to have birdseed for lunch. Bob Bantz of nearby Allegany County, a retired engineer, thought he might have the answer to keeping bears out of his birdfeeder. Obviously the ingenious use of a clothesline wasn't all that effective, though, even if it did seem like a good idea. This bruin was ready to do whatever necessary to retrieve the goods, and did so. Bantz watched from his house, taking pictures every few minutes as the bear got closer to the prize, finally winning it. (Photos provided to The Republican by L.L. Buddy Duckworth, Long Stretch.)

Park, Loch Lynn Citizens Advised To Boil Water

After consulting with the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE), the Garrett County Department of Public Utilities has issued a boil-water advisory to the residents and businesses served by the Mtn. Lake Park water system. The advisory also extends to customers in Loch Lynn.

Because of a power outage, unchlorinated water has entered the Mtn. Lake Park water system, the advisory said. MDE recommends that residents served by the system boil the water used for cooking and drinking purposes until further notice.

Residents are advised to bring the water to a rolling boil for at least one minute, which is sufficient to ensure that the water is safe to use for cooking and drinking. Boiled or bottled water should be used for drinking, making ice, brushing teeth, making drinks, and food preparation. Water should be cooled before use to prevent burns or scalding. The water is safe to use for bathing and washing without boiling.

The advisory warns that some individuals may be more vulnerable than the general population to contaminants in drinking water. Immuno-compromised individuals such as those with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, and the elderly and infants may be particularly at risk from infections. These individuals are advised to seek advice from their health care provider.

Public Utilities, MDE, and the Garrett County Health Department are closely monitoring the wa-

Proposed DCL Zoning Amendment Would Allow Golf Course Amenities

The Garrett County commissioners held a public hearing this week on a proposed amendment to the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning Ordinance. As submitted by William Franklin of Thousand Acres Developers Inc. (TAD), the proposal would allow commercial amenities traditionally associated with golf courses to be constructed in any residential zone within the watershed.

The commissioners will announce their decision on the proposal on Nov. 29.

As currently written, 18-hole public golf courses are permitted under the ordinance in all zones, but the commercial aspects of clubhouses – such as restaurants, lounges, and retail pro shops – are not allowed in residential sections.

TAD wants to build an 18-hole golf course with a restaurant and other amenities along the Northern Shore of Green Glade Cove in the Thousand Acres area, which is zoned residential.

"We see this as an opportunity to give something back to the community," said Joe Franklin, William's father, about the project. He noted that both his family and his wife's family had a long association with Deep Creek Lake. Franklin said Garrett County residents would be offered reduced rates one day a week at the golf course.

He indicated that TAD's goal was to retain the private, residential atmosphere of Thousand Acres.

Director John Nelson, Garrett County Planning and Land Development Department, said the Planning Commission had reviewed the proposed amendment with respect to its impact on the district. It concluded that the [illegible], as written by TAD, would have some negative impact, he said. As a result, the commission suggested a few changes.

Commercial aspects could be allowed in residential zones, but only by special exception. The commission also suggested that the proposed amendment read "public golf course clubhouse associated with a public 9-hole golf course and above," instead of ".... a public 18-hole golf course."

Nelson said his office received a number of letters about the amendment. Thirteen pieces of correspondence from citizens, most of whom own property near the proposed golf course, were presented to the commissioners and submitted for the record.

Several residents attending the hearing also voiced their opinions. Former Deep Creek Lake restaurant owner Doug McClive approved of the TAD project, in particular the restaurant.

"I think what they're going to do is nice," he said.

Since McClive's closed a few years ago, all he hears is how much people miss it, he said. "To me, it seems the general public wants another restaurant," McClive said.

He noted that his restaurant was located near homes and that those residents seemed to enjoy having the establishment nearby.

"I think they're trying to do the right thing," he said about the Franklins' approach to the project.

Thousand Acres property owner Dr. Joseph Smith, however, disagreed. He was concerned about the negative impact of a commercial establishment being located in a residential setting. He and his wife Connie have owned a home at Deep Creek Lake since the 1960s and have seen the traffic steadily increase in their area over the years. A restaurant would only increase it more, he said.

Smith acknowledged that people would like more restaurants, but, he said, they probably were not talking about placing them in residential areas. They should be in commercial zones.

"People say there's nothing to do down there (Thousand Acres)," Smith said. "[But] that's why we moved down there, because there isn't anything to do."

Troy Ellington, Deep Creek Property Owners Association, voiced some of the POA's concerns and suggestions. They included limiting the clubhouse to 4,000 square feet, making sure there is adequate parking, notifying the POA about any special exception hearings, limiting the club's operating hours, insuring a physical separation between the course and residences, and allowing a lounge only by special exception.

Eugene Shreve, Swanton, noted that the construction of the proposed golf course and its amenities would affect surrounding properties, as road realignments and other types of changes would be involved.

"We would appreciate it if we could be informed of these changes, since our property borders [the proposed golf course]," he said.

Nelson said if the commissioners approved the amendment as suggested by the Planning Commission, adjacent property owners would be notified if TAD

Garrett County's New 9-1-1 System Has Numerous Benefical Features

Garrett County has a new, more efficient 9-1-1 system. The "cut-over" from the old push-button, hands-on system to the Windows-based, hands-free one took place yesterday (Nov. 16) at the Garrett County 9-1-1 Center at the courthouse.

"With the number of cellular calls and calls from persons unfamiliar to our area continuing to increase, this system will greatly enhance our call-takers' ability to locate the incident and send the appropriate assistance," said Brad Frantz, director of the Garrett County Emergency Management Office.

Call-takers and administrators at the center and the Garrett County Sheriff's Office have been training for the last two weeks in preparation for the cut-over.

Frantz said the most notable benefit of the new system is that the center and Sheriff's Office will be able to have both land line and cellular calls plotted on a detailed mapping system, which will show the location of a 9-1-1 call. Depending on the type of phone and other variables, the calls will be mapped within a 50-meter radius of the caller's exact location, according to Frantz.

Another mapping feature will be a valuable tool for first responders. It has the capability of adding numerous "layers," allowing for additions such as fire hydrant locations, hazardous materials sites, natural gas transmission lines, building layouts, and fire department pre-plans for large industrial and residential buildings.

Another new component of the system is the ability to track moving cellular calls as the location changes.

"For instance, if a call is on going as the caller moves down Interstate 68, that call can be "re-bid" and the new address and direction of the travel determined," Frantz said.

The Sheriff's Office will also get the same automatic number and location identification that the 9-1-1 Center receives, which will save time in determining the exact location of a caller needing police assistance, the director added. With the old system, calls had to be transferred to the office.

Other benefits of the system include:

- •Call-takers have quicker access to agencies' and businesses' contact information to help callers.
- •It is 100 percent compliant with FCC regulations concerning TTY lines, and call-takers are better able to handle calls from deaf persons.
- •It stores information such as the number of calls coming in and how those calls are handled for up to five years. That data will help in determining staffing needs and applying for grant funding.
- •Prank callers and abandoned calls can be identified more readily.
- •Callers hear a prerecorded greeting, ensuring that calls are answered in a consistent manner.

Alleged Assault Report Leads To Many Charges

An Oakland area man was charged with numerous charges, including false imprisonment, stemming from an incident Sunday at 11 a.m. on the Cranesville Road near the Yough Mtn. Resort, according to Garrett County Sheriff's Office.

According to the report, a vehicle carrying Lisa Beckman, Barclay Dixon, and a juvenile pulled to the side of the road to let a cat out of the car that was getting sick. Ray Griffin and his wife witnessed the cat being taken out of the car, and intervened because they allegedly thought a crime was being committed against the animal, police said. Griffin blocked the Beckman vehicle with his vehicle, then pulled a gun on the three occupants. Griffin then allegedly searched Dixon at gunpoint and took Beckman's driver's license and registration before leaving the area.

At about that same time, the Sheriff's Office received a call from Beckman report-

Oakland Bypass Skeptics Address Co. Commissioners

A standing-room-only crowd gathered in the meeting room of the Garrett County commissioners this past Thursday to discuss the proposal for a $41.2 million two-lane Rt. 219 bypass that would run north-south between the towns of Oakland and Mtn. Lake Park. Garrett Countians for Smart Growth, a citizens coalition of bypass skeptics, was represented at the session by Oakland surgeon Dr. Dona Alvarez, who encouraged the commissioners and other officials to re-think their support for the project, which could break ground as early as the year 2010.

"We want you to look at this again, because the research done by our group shows that we do not need a new highway six blocks from downtown Oakland that would split the residential areas of Oakland and Mtn. Lake Park," Alvarez said, noting that the group had consulted data spanning more than three decades up to the present day, using studies from Maryland's own Department of Transportation (MDOT) and other highway agencies from several nearby states.

At this point the bypass has drawn the stated support of county commissioners Dave Beard and Fred Holliday, Oakland mayor Asa McCain and the Oakland town council, state delegate George Edwards, and state senator John Hafer. Commissioner Ernie Gregg supports the concept but has reservations about its design and location.

Garrett Countians for Smart Growth has at last count accumulated over 600 petition signatures against the proposal. "Our research shows that we don't have to reinvent the wheel," said Alvarez. "Our desire is to make this thing better or to fix it – and that's not just being sentimental. We would like to know why we are spending all this money."

In a methodical point-counterpoint presentation, Alvarez laid out the Garrett Countians for Smart Growth findings.

In response to bypass proponents' claims that there are dangerous congestion problems in downtown Oakland involving drive-through trucks and, to a lesser degree, cars, she said: "The comprehensive MDOT-commissioned origin-destination study concluded that traffic, including trucks, is running smoothly in Oakland; of the 671

GBI Requests Information From Public

Information is being sought in a reported burglary at a residence on Mason School Road Wednesday afternoon, according to the Garrett Bureau of Investigation.

According to the report, two white males entered the home at approximately 1:30 p.m., and were confronted by the homeowner, who had been sleeping at the time. The suspects fled the residence in a small, bright yellow passenger car.

GBI requests that the residents in the Pleasant Valley and Red House area contact the Garrett County Sheriff's Office at 301-334-1911 if they have any information relating to the crime, the vehicle, or the suspects involved.

Closing Notice

The offices of The Republican will be closed Thursday, November 5, for the Thanksgiving holiday. News deadline is Tuesday at noon and advertising deadline is Monday at 5 p.m.

GETTING READY TO "CUT-OVER" TO THE NEW 9-1-1 SYSTEM at the Garrett County courthouse this week were Phil Rook, assistant director of the Garrett County Emergency Management Office, standing, and dispatcher Steve Smith. The change-over from the old push-button system to the new Windows-based one took place yesterday (Nov. 16). Director Brad Frantz, Emergency Management, noted numerous benefits of the system, including the ability to locate cell phone callers. See story for details. Photo by Beth L. Bowers.

LYNCH SHARES LESSONS WITH GCMH GALA AUDIENCE – Saturday evening's Starlight Ball, the signature fundraiser for the Garrett County Memorial Hospital Foundation, featured a guest speaker's appearance by U.S. Army veteran Jessica Lynch. The Palestine, W.Va., native drew international attention when she was rescued by fellow soldiers following her capture by enemy forces during the opening weeks of Operation Enduring Freedom. Lynch's modesty was evident in her downplaying of her individual story in favor of an emphasis on teamwork and perseverance, whether as a member of a team of soldiers, hospital staff, or the community at large. Pictured from the left are GCMH president and CEO Ben Battista, Lynch, commissioner Ernie Gregg, and GCMH Foundation chairman Wayne Johnson. Photo by Bill Schrider.

Tellabration Event Set For Saturday At Canoe On Run

The local Tellabration event, part of "a night of storytelling around the world," is slated for this Saturday, Nov. 19, at the Canoe on the Run restaurant in McHenry. The 7 p.m. storytelling session will be preceded by a social hour and dinner beginning at 5:30 p.m. Donations accepted at the local program will benefit the event sponsors, the Garrett County chapter of the American Association of University Women and the Mountain Maryland and West Virginia Storytelling Guild.

Created by the National Storytelling Network, the annual Tellabration is sponsored by local organizations and storytelling groups in states and countries world wide as a way to "celebrate the people's art of storytelling," explained local Tellabration coordinator and professional storyteller Dr. Gail Herman of Swanton. "Tellabrations are told in all manner of places around campfires, in living rooms, on stages in schools, colleges, and concert halls, and in restaurants and churches. This year's setting should be especially conducive to good storytelling because of the restaurant's fine food and cozy fireplace, and Otto Ross will set the tone for the evening with an opening program of easy listening guitar music."

RICH KNOBLICH

Saturday evening's session will feature Rich Knoblich of Wheeling, W.Va., an award-winning writer and storyteller "who likes to tackle outrageous topics in a humorous fashion," according to the National Storytelling Directory. Knoblich's honors include a first place award in the West Virginia Liar's Contest. His original stories have appeared in such magazines as Country Extra, Storytelling Magazine, and Appalachian Life.

Also on the bill is Jeanne Walton of Keyser, W.Va., Katie Ross of Ridgeley, W.Va., and Herman.

Walton is a retired special education teacher and professional storyteller. She won the 2005 Tall Tale Storytelling Festival and has been active in Tellabration for over 10 years.

Ross is a second-place winner in the nationwide storytelling contest sponsored by the Creative Arts Institute. Ross teaches world languages at Braddock Middle School in Cumberland, and says she enjoys telling world folktales, personal stories, and stories about women from the Bible. For this year's Tellabration she plans to tell a story about an artist's journey to find the most beautiful thing in the world, which he finally realized was his own family.

Herman, who authored a chapter in the recently published book Telling Stories to Children, teaches storytelling at four colleges, tells stories across the U.S., and recently traveled to the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania on a grant-funded story collection and dissemination junket. She uses a variety of techniques, including mime, percussion sound effects, and audience participation.

Also participating will be local student storytellers, including Kara Brack, Mandy Sweitzer, and Austin Skeweris.

Additional persons interested in telling a story at the Tellabration are encouraged to call Herman at 301-387-9199 to reserve a program slot on a "first-call" basis, but audience members will also be allowed to join in the night of the event if time allows.

International Women Share Stories At Garrett Coll. Event

by Jo Donaldson

More than 100 people received greetings in five different languages last week as Garrett College students participated in "Focus on International Women: Aspirations and Conditions." The students told about women's experience of life in their home countries.

"Each culture is different," said Marilyn Moors, president of American Association of University Women and a retired professor of women's studies and anthropologist, who facilitated the panel conversation. The seven women students discussed what gender roles are like in their countries and cultural constraints on them.

"Women have to be beautiful. You have to look 100 percent perfect," said Zumra Balihodzic of Bosnia-Herzegovina. "Men make the decisions and earn the money."

Balihodzic talked about the lack of young men in the country as a result of the war and the problems being faced by women, stemming from the widespread rape during the war and the loss of their husbands, fathers, and sons. Her goals still include getting married, but she also wants to make a difference in her country. She wants to see women appreciated more for what they do and hopes to get involved in the political field – "to be one of the women who makes a difference."

Women are very independent and successful in Estonia, according to Kristina Kask. "Many postpone having a family until they are sure they can support themselves," she said. "Families are very small. There is strong emphasis on education." Also, representing Estonia were Krista Joosep and Kerttu Siim. The years of Soviet occupation force men and women to work the same, they said. After their country gained its occupation, men and women continued to work together as equals.

Lasma Kanele noted that her home country of Latvia is one of the few countries in the world with a woman leader. "Females and males are basically the same, have equal rights and strive to develop high professional skills," she explained. "No doors are closed. Men and women have shown they can work together. There is a housing shortage and they also tend to have small families." Kanele added that she is proud of her nation's the first woman president, Vaira Vike-Freiberga, and hopes to be like her.

"Women always were stable and strong," when Lithuania was under Soviet domination, said fellow Lithuanian Vita Pagrizauskaite. "Under the Soviets, men and women were treated the same in the factories and fields, except that women still had to go home and do the housework and take care of the children. Women have to be superwomen. Unfortunately, mothers do not get the respect they deserve in our small country."

Sivapriya Parmanandhan commented that little has changed in her homeland of India, "except in the cities. Most young women plan to get married and have children. Dating is still basically unknown. Marriages are between families and the parents fix the marriage," she observed. Parmanandhan is studying early childhood education and would like to start her own a day care center.

Some of the challenges facing the young women include getting good jobs when they get home, and the balancing of being a good mother and pursuing a career. In India, since the parents pay for the education as well as for marriage of their daughters, many young women only get a basic education to save money. This is changing in the cities, she noted, but in rural areas women still get married young and may have 10 or more children.

Many of the women said they would like to improve the global environment, to show that working together, men and women can make this a better place. At a reception in the Art Gallery people were able to talk more with the women and other international students. "This was a chance to learn about the lives of women in other countries," said Judy Carbone, coordinator of Career Services and Global Education.

Other activities are being planned by the Worldview International Club to offer area residents opportunities to learn more about the cultures being represented at Garrett College, including home-country presentations in local schools and international movie nights at the college.

The Focus on International Women was co-sponsored by the American Association of University Women, Business and Professional Women of Garrett County, and Garrett College. The college currently has approximately 20 international students, with the male international students representing such countries as Canada, South Africa, Great Britain, Kenya, and Croatia.

M&T BANK PRESENTS ANNUAL CHECK – The Garrett County Memorial Hospital Foundation recently accepted a $10,000 check from M&T Bank, as part of its ongoing commitment to the hospital's Capital Campaign. The bank has pledged a total of $50,000 to help expand and renovate the hospital. "In Garrett County, we are extremely fortunate to be surrounded by businesses that are so generous and willing to support quality healthcare for our community," said Kathy Greaser, foundation director. Pictured, left to right, are Kelli Kasmier, M&T assistant vice president and Oakland branch manager, Greaser, and David Worthing, M&T vice president, Government Banking Division. "M&T strives to be the best company our employees ever work for, the best bank our customers ever do business with and the best investment our shareholders ever make," Kasmier said. "This is why we strongly believe in taking an active role in the communities we serve. We are proud of our long history of civic and charitable support, including the leadership and volunteer efforts of our employees." For more information about the hospital foundation, persons may call Greaser at 301-533-4178.

Swanton Couple Injured In Single-Vehicle Mishap

A Swanton couple sustained injuries Friday after a single vehicle accident in Bloomington, according to the Maryland State Police.

Shortly after 11 a.m., Robert Leon Wilson, 82, was attempting to back out of a private driveway onto Hamill Avenue, just off Bloomington Road. Wilson mistakenly placed the vehicle into drive, and the 2005 Mercury Montego traveled forward and struck a tree.

Wilson and his passenger, Gloria A. Wilson, 79, were both transported by the Tri-Towns Ambulance Service to Cumberland Memorial Hospital. The Bloomington Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the scene. No charges were filed by state police.

We Can't Afford It...

Today is the American Cancer Society's annual Great American Smokeout, on which the estimated 46 million Americans who smoke cigarettes are asked to stop smoking for the day, with the hope that it will provide a springboard for them to stop for good.

We have on several occasions written about the various health risks of smoking, which are certainly no longer news. Nearly everyone knows that, at the very least, smoking causes cancer, heart disease, and lung disease, certainly for the smoker, and even for some "adjacent" non-smokers who are subjected to their smoke. Something that is not touted as often is the extreme financial and personal costs of engaging in this habit.

The financial cost to the nation is estimated at $94 billion (yes, billion) just in lost productivity annually, plus another $89 billion annually in additional monies spent on public and private health care. This translates to $596 in additional federal and state tax dollars per household. Every one of us who is fortunate enough to have health insurance must pay considerably higher premiums because of smokers.

To the individual smoker, the costs are likewise staggering. A pack of cigarettes now costs an average of $4.32, meaning a pack-a-day smoker shells out over $30 per week, or $1,600 per year. A 40-year-old who quits and puts that $1,600 into a 401(k) plan would have an extra quarter of a million dollars by age 70.

Then there are numerous incidental costs that also mount up, because frankly, smokers – you stink. Not figuratively, but literally. You stink. Your breath stinks, your hair stinks, your clothing stinks, your furniture stinks, your house stinks, and your car stinks, all of which requires additional expense to clean and devalues your property. A used, smoke-free automobile, for example, is generally worth about $1,000 more in trade than one that is not smoke-free.

And how about those lovely yellow teeth?

So, smoking causes great suffering and kills people, but it also leads to financial hardship and, to some extent, isolation. It is hoped that the millions of Americans who are addicted to tobacco will take note of today's designation as the Great American Smokeout and will take steps to at least try to break the habit, as most of them would like to do. It is recognized that it is extremely difficult to quit, but we just can't afford it.

To the Editor:

It's a daily undertaking dealing with a child with diabetes and a constant struggle to maintain normalcy. It's something I try very hard to do for my son, who is 7 years old. I know there will also be things out of my control, but in this case I thought maybe if I spoke out I could change just one little thing: The availability of sugar-free candy.

Recently I took my son and nephew, who is not diabetic, to the movies. It is heartbreaking for me to get to the concession counter and start to place an order for the boys and realize my son cannot eat any of the candy available. My nephew can have his choice, but my son can't. You are not permitted to bring your own candy, so he gets left out. He says it's no big deal, but it is to me.

I'm not asking for them to offer every kind of candy in sugar free but maybe one or two. I don't think that is asking too much. I also think not just diabetics but other people may also appreciate this option.

But it's not just the movie theater. Banks should also offer sugar-free lollipops, in my opinion. If you have a diabetic child, there is no choice, he cannot have one. But maybe other parents would prefer if their child is offered a lollipop, it be sugar-free. This might also make the visit to the dentist a little bit easier, too.

Sincerely,
Teresa Lipscomb
Swanton

To the Editor:

Never before have I read such unmitigated balderdash as the letter (Nov. 10) from Emily Morgan against Michael Steele. I don't know what race Emily Morgan is, but I do wonder what [illegible] she lives on. Morgan's [illegible] amount to the assertion that it's perfectly all right for African-Americans to make racist remarks against other blacks. That is nefarious nonsense to the nth degree.

State Senator Lisa Gladden of Baltimore City (also African-American) is familiar to many Marylanders because she frequently appears on the PBS Friday-evening show "State Circle." She is wrong so often, on so many issues, that it's a good bet that if Gladden is for something, then thoughtful and coherent people will be against it. No way would a quality person like the late Rosa Parks (who understood that equality means all races) have been pleased with the abject poppycock that Gladden is spouting against Michael Steele.

It is a cornerstone teaching in every school in America that racism is wrong. That principle doesn't come with a "color" qualifier. Derogating Michael Steele's African-American heritage and credentials because he supports the free-enterprise system instead of the welfare system is racism. Period. For white liberals to smugly let black politicians get away with that is a good example of what President Bush termed "the soft bigotry of low expectations."

Cordially yours,
Tom Sheahen

To the Editor:

It does seem that we receive our news concerning the actions of our government by way of newspapers, TV, and radio – not directly from our elected legislators.

True democracy, of which our country proudly boasts, is based on a knowledgeable people speaking. The majority rules.

Current problems need the advice of people – Iraq, Afghanistan, national debt, same-sex marriages, social security, Medicaid, earth warning, traffic accidents, high cost of fuels, abortion, alcohol, drugs, to name a few. Especially the mounting national debt.

I am suggesting three steps aimed at restoring the real meaning of democracy. Let the people be heard.

1. One of our U.S. senators would speak to the people of his or her state once a month, explaining bills before the senate. He or she would also address other matters which are or should be considered.

The monthly discussions would include the results of research of the pros and cons of the various bills being considered. Communication would be by television, newspapers, and radio.

2. After three days of consideration by the people, a poll of their opinions would be taken by telephone. This poll would be a result of 10% sampling, carefully orchestrated by professional samplers.

Suggestions from the people would be requested by mail. [illegible] would then vote based on a majority opinion. Phone suggestions would be considered.

In summary: senatorial discussions once a month, consideration by the people, the poll, voting the majority opinion, and consider written suggestions.

To the Editor:

With the deficit increasing and the fear of terrorism, many Americans do not realize what the biggest threat to our security is – illegal immigration. Currently the United States has thousands of miles of border with Canada and, more importantly, Mexico, that is completely unguarded. This allows over a million illegal Mexican immigrants to cross our border every year. In the past few years, illegal immigration has increased by over 27%, or roughly 250,000 more per year at our southern border. It is high time we as Americans press for tighter border security and immigration control.

The economic impact of illegal immigration is staggering. Every year illegal immigrants cost taxpayers over a hundred billion dollars in social programs. They are allowed to enter our country and get housing assistance, welfare, Medicaid, free college tuition, and driver's licenses, all at our expense. That is billions of dollars that are not going to our children, elderly, and needy. The fact is, more illegal immigrants receive Medicaid, food stamps, medical benefits, and housing benefits than does all of our Native American population. Do you want your child to be denied financial aid because you make a few hundred dollars too much, while someone who was not even born here gets it all free? Do you know that 400,000 illegal immigrants collect SSI, while I know many disabled Americans who have been denied their benefits after they paid taxes and worked for decades? Illegal immigrants cost U.S.-born workers 133 billion dollars a year in job losses. It's all adding up, isn't it?

We do not know how many terrorists cross our unprotected borders each year. It would be very easy to smuggle weapons that could kill millions of Americans. Why spend billions on airport security if they can just walk in and do as they wish and get financial assistance from our government?

Have you called your credit card company, or tech support, or bought groceries or anything in the past few years? The instructions are always in Spanish first and the tech support person barely speaks English. We spend 28 billion dollars every year in bilingual education to accommodate illegal immigrants who do not speak English. It is high time we have a secure border, and a national language. The Constitution says "We the People," and that means American citizens, not illegal immigrants.

To the Editor:

Last week I had the opportunity to go to Annapolis to see my granddad, Junior "The Cookie Man" Ferguson, receive one of Maryland's Most Beautiful People awards. The ceremony was a wonderful way to recognize Maryland's volunteers for all the hard work that they do.

I just want to say that Garrett County picked the best person to represent them, and that I am so thankful to those of you who wrote letters on behalf of my granddad. He does so many things for so many people, and he loves doing it. He is such a role model to me and many other people, and I would like to thank him for all of his hard work and dedication to Garrett County and its many citizens. No one deserves the award more than he does. I am so proud of him and I love him very much.

applied to the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning Appeals Board for a special exception. The general public would also be notified through a public notice in The Republican that the developers planned to construct commercial amenities.

"Applying for a special exception is a public hearing process," Nelson explained after the meeting. He added that TAD would also have to apply to his office for the proper building permits.

Nelson noted that the commissioners could approve the amendment as proposed by the Franklins, approve the amendment with the Planning Commission's recommendations, or not approve the amendment at all.

If the commissioners approve the Franklins' version of the amendment, no special exception would be needed for them to build their clubhouse and no public hearing process would be necessary.

Garrett County commissioner Ernie Gregg said the board of commissioners would hold the record open on the amendment for two weeks. Persons may send written comments to the board via mail, 203 South 4th Street, Oakland, MD 21550; e-mail, countycommissioners@garrettcounty.org; or fax, 301-334-5000.

A Soldier's View From Iraq

EN ROUTE FROM IRAQ, Nov. 11

The following questions were submitted this week by a Friendsville resident for Sgt. Bryan Carlson:

I know these are tough questions, but I sure would appreciate an answer. God bless and may you return safely.

1) After almost three years have we been successful in securing the short road from the Green Zone to the Airport? Is it now safe?

I'm not sure, I am not stationed in Baghdad, but I do know that it is not the most dangerous road in Iraq now.

2) Is it true that we used napalm and white phosphorous bombs on urban areas like Fallujah and other communities?

Do not know, have not been there.

3) How is the electrical service going and the water service for the civilian population?

Most have electricity and water. They have generators that run the power, and workers on the lines everyday. Sometimes it is disrupted when insurgents set off a bomb. Water is also pretty good, unless they blow up a water line.

4) Do you ever resent the security contractors who make up to $4,000 a week?

No, they have a job to do as well as we do. They do stuff, so we can spend our time working missions.

5) If the majority of Iraqis want us to leave and view us as occupiers (as evidenced by recent polls in Iraq) how can we expect for them to stop helping the insurgents?

Most of the Iraqis want us here. I'm not sure how someone can take a poll here. Most Iraqis listen to their religious leaders to make up their minds. Also, they change their minds on a daily basis. In the area I am in, most Iraqis would rather have us here than the Iraqi army, since the population is Sunni and the Army is for the most part not.

6) If, in the end, the democracy we have enabled becomes a strict Muslim government like in Iran, will the thousands of US lives and $300 billion spent have been worth it?

I think that anything is better than Saddam being here. In speaking with a few Iraqis, life here is 1,000 times better than it was when Saddam was in power. They have water, food and electric now, and more than they need.

7) Do servicemen over in Iraq ever get angry that it now appears the war was sold to Americans based on forged documents and purported evidence that the Bush Administration knew was false?

We are here to do our job. Most of us are proud to be here, serving our country and promoting freedom. I would rather be fighting terrorists here than on American soil, away from my family and yours.

8) Does it ever depress servicemen that an ever increasing majority of Americans think the war was and is a bad idea?

I don't think America believes this to be a bad idea. Its a mess, yes, but this is war. I think some of America thought this would be a Desert Storm, over in a few days, with no bloodshed. That is not the case. This is a tough war, a war without front lines, or a uniformed enemy. The insurgents work and live in the towns, and at one point decide to try and kill us. After an attack, they blend into the population. America needs to stand behind its troops and support us. This is going to take a while to clean up, and if we leave before the mission is complete, every service member [illegible] was killed would have been for nothing. That can not happen. We have to finish this.

Prisoner Advocates Say Health Care Hasn't Improved For State's Inmates

by Chris Landers
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS — Despite a new provider, prisoner advocates say Maryland inmates are still receiving poor health care. Correctional Medical Services, based in St. Louis, is one of five companies that took over the contract to provide care to Maryland inmates in July. CMS was awarded the largest share of the contract — $125.6 million over two years — after the previous contractor came under heavy criticism from the American Civil Liberties Union and others over the quality of care given to inmates.

The ACLU and the Baltimore-based Public Justice Center say CMS isn't doing much better.

"We're basically seeing a lot of the same problems," said Wendy Hess, an attor-

THE TURKEYS DIDN'T STAND A CHANCE at the annual turkey shoot held recently by Grantsville Cub Scout Pack 49. The event, which involved rubber band guns, was held at the Emmanual United Methodist Church in Finzel. The church has agreed to be the pack's new charter partner. The boys also brought donations for their Feed the Hungry campaign. The next pack meeting will be held Sunday, Dec. 4, at the church. School System, Library Receive Internet Grant

Congressman Roscoe G. Bartlett (6th Dist.) announced a $194,313 grant to public school districts, private schools, and libraries from the Universal Service Administrative Company's Schools and Libraries Program. The program funds telecommunication services and Internet access in schools and libraries. Garrett County schools and the Ruth Enlow Library are among those to receive funds.

"Our founders recognized the importance and contributions of infrastructure to strengthening our country by including the creation and maintenance of roads as a shared responsibility between states and the federal government in our Constitution," said Bartlett. "In the 21st century Age of Information, the Internet is the road that connects Americans to the world. That is why this grant of $194,313 to our local schools and libraries for Internet access and telecommunications services is so important."

Garrett County schools will receive a total of $104,249.49. The Ruth Enlow Library will receive a total of $24,594.07.

Anne Arundel Co. Woman Injured In ATV Mishap

An Anne Arundel County woman was injured in a single-vehicle ATV accident Sunday on the Maryland side of Jennings Randolph Lake. Maryland State Police troopers investigated the 11:51 a.m. mishap.

Pasadena resident Kim Porter, age not reported, was traveling on private property off Vindex Road when the mishap occurred. She was located by Maryland State Police helicopter Trooper 5, which landed near the scene, and the crew provided initial medical treatment until other EMS personnel arrived by ATV. Porter was then airlifted from the site by the medevac chopper, which transported her to Cumberland Memorial Hospital.

Also responding to the crash were personnel from the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad, the Deer Park Volunteer Fire Department, and the Maryland Natural Resources Police. NRP provided two four-wheel drive vehicles to allow rescue personnel access to the site.

No charges were filed against Porter by state police.

Juvenile Charged After Passenger Goes To Hospital

A juvenile was charged after police were called to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for a vehicle accident victim Wednesday night, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Anthony Filsinger, 19, Oakland, was a passenger of a vehicle operated by a 16-year-old Oakland resident. He told police that the driver lost control on mud on Oakland Avenue and the vehicle slid into a ditch. The driver was charged with failure to report a bodily injury accident to police.

In other police news, Karen Bittinger, 46, Oakland, was injured when she pulled her vehicle from the intersection of Wal-Mart and failed to yield the right of way to Michael Chaney, 23, McHenry.

Bittinger was charged in the 3:17 p.m. accident. Also responding were Oakland firefighters and Southern Rescue Squad.

Deputies Charge Local Man With Alleged Assault

A Friendsville man was arrested after police responded to a residence on Oak Street in Friendsville for a reported assault, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

William Rager, 43, was arrested for the reported assault Friday afternoon. Deputies were assisted by Maryland State Police and Northern Garrett Rescue Squad.

In other police news, two vehicle were involved in an accident at the intersection of Maryland Highway and B Street in Mtn. Lake Park Saturday evening.

The vehicles were operated by Krystle Towne of Oakland and James Tusing, also of Oakland. Tusing was cited for the accident. Tracy Brock of Oakland, a passenger in the Tusing vehicle, was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries.

Oakland firefighters, along with Southern Garrett Rescue Squad, assisted at the accident scene.

ARC Holiday Tour To Include Weiland Home

The 14th annual Home for the Holidays House Tours, hosted every year by the Western Potomac Chapter of the American Red Cross, will take place the on the first weekend in December. The home of Chuck and Linda Wieland is one of five homes featured this year.

Located along Cherry Heights Lane in the Rock Lodge Heights development in McHenry, the Weiland house is one year old, constructed by Wesmar Builders. The contemporary chalet style home has three bedrooms, a sewing room, and a loft. There is a large "eat-in" kitchen, as well as a formal living room and dining room, which are warmed by a wood-burning stove.

WIELAND HOUSE ON RED CROSS HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS TOURS

The sun room is also on the main floor, where the family gathers to watch television. Visitors will see a specially decorated Christmas tree in this room, which Linda said she calls her "Deep Creek mountain tree." The family has collected snowmen for several years, and that motif will be seen throughout the house.

In the loft, guests will see an "ice crystal" tree, as well as miniature villages. While the décor of the home is mainly mission style or retro, the two guest bedrooms will be decorated with an old-fashioned holiday theme with children and grandchildren in mind, Mrs. Weiland said. Guests may also visit the finished basement, where a woodworking shop is located.

Tickets for the tours, including all ages, are $8 in advance and $10 on the days of the event. They are on sale at the following pharmacies: Proudfoot's, Gregg's, and Deep Creek, as well as Arrowhead Market. All proceeds from the ticket sales will go to the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The directions to the various homes will be printed on the back of the ticket, and directional signs will be placed at intersections to help guests find the locales. Local businesses have donated a variety of items that will be raffled off at each location. Guests will be asked to remove their shoes before going into the homes, and no photographing or videotaping will be allowed.

The other homes on this year's tour are those of Rhoda and Ralph Keefer, Ruth and Robert Hinebaugh, Dan and Bobbi Fornear, and Kevin and Cindy Heselbach. Feature stories on the Heselbach and Keefer homes have been published. The stories about the remaining two homes will appear in The Republican before the event takes place in December.

Lessons From Katrina Helping Maryland Prepare

by Elisabeth Coe
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS — The failure of emergency management during Hurricane Katrina has been a lesson for government agencies in Maryland, which are now updating their plans in order to better prepare for such a disaster, officials told a legislative committee Wednesday.

"It dawned on all of us during Hurricane Katrina that if we had a situation in Maryland, we'd have to depend on emergency services and coordination between governments," said Delegate Maggie McIntosh, D-Baltimore, chair of the Environmental Matters Committee. "So the question becomes, what are we doing and what can we be doing to make sure we're not making bad decisions that could result in devastation for our citizens?"

John W. Droneburg, director of the Maryland Emergency Management Agency, said Maryland has already drawn lessons from Hurricane Katrina: Planning needs to be coordinated between levels of government; evacuation orders must be clear and given in enough time to react; and no matter how much planning is done, there will always be a certain percentage of people who will refuse to leave, he said.

If a hurricane were headed for Ocean City, for example, emergency workers would need 30 to 50 hours of notice in order to effectively evacuate a large number of people, he said.

John M. Contestabile, director of the Office of Engineering for the Department of Transportation, said Maryland has advantages in preparing for a hurricane.

All levels of government have been cooperating on emergency plans, he said, and because Maryland borders on Washington, D.C.,

AMERICAN LEGION POST 208, ACCIDENT, recently presented a $600 donation to Louis Nasser of the Maryland Department of the American Legion for the America Legion National Emergency Fund. This fund has nearly depleted its $1.6 million following the hurricanes of 2005, said a spokesperson. This fund is supported by Legionnaires for Legionnaires and their families. Pictured above, on the left, is Ed Deal, post commander, presenting the check to Nasser.

LEGION RECOGNIZES ZIMMERMAN – American Legion Post #071, Oakland, recently cited Detective Robbie Zimmerman for his outstanding service to the community and presented him with a certificate. Zimmerman joined the Garrett County Sheriff's Office in 1997 and was later promoted and assigned to the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force. According to the American Legion, Zimmerman had the second highest number of narcotics arrests in the state last year. He has seized or confiscated marijuana, cocaine, crack cocaine, heroin, LSD, oxycodone, and various other controlled dangerous substances, and more than $2,200 cash. "While working to remove drugs from the streets, he also counsels youngsters about the consequences and effects of drug use on personal lives," said a Legion spokesperson about Zimmerman. "He is considered to be an honorable and courteous deputy whose personal integrity reflects well on police officers everywhere." Pictured is Marvin Guthrie of the American Legion presenting the certificate to Zimmerman.

Business Leaders, Advocacy Group Clash Over Corp. Tax Legislation

by Katrina Altersitz
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – Maryland business leaders on Tuesday blasted legislation meant to tighten corporate income tax laws and bring in millions of dollars in extra revenue as "universally hated" and "one of the worst tax decisions the Maryland General Assembly could make."

But an advocacy group for working families said that Maryland residents pay taxes every year and so should the 60 percent of Maryland corporations that did not last year, according to information from the comptroller's office.

"People – flesh and blood human beings – pay a variety of taxes," Sean Dobson of the liberal lobbying group Progressive Maryland told a joint hearing of two legislative committees. "They can't resort to creative bookkeeping ... [but companies] are positively encouraged to get creative and loosey goosey."

Laws to tighten the corporate tax structure were proposed in the General Assembly last session, but did not pass. On Tuesday, the proposals again came before legislators for discussion prior to the opening of the legislative session in January.

The first, known as combined reporting, would require businesses to report all of their subsidiaries as one entity. The second, alternative minimum assessment, would set a minimum tax to be paid by corporations depending on gross receipts.

The proposed laws are "unfair to entire industries" said Maryland Chamber of Commerce representative Karen T. Syrylo. Businesses would be "forced to increase their prices and pass those prices on to the consumers," she warned.

"Combined reporting is almost universally considered to be anti-business," she said, because it is complex, time consuming, and expensive. And of alternative minimum assessment she said, "To me, this is one of the worst tax decisions that the Maryland General Assembly could make" because it could be imposed on businesses that aren't necessarily profitable.

Dobson said Tuesday's dire predictions by business lobbyists are the "exact same language" that business used to fight laws that made it impossible for corporations to dodge Maryland taxes by transferring profits to Delaware, where there is no corporate income tax. Closing that loophole has generated $247 million in revenues to date.

A further tightening of the corporate tax laws, according to the Office of Policy Analysis, could bring in $25 to $50 million, while the alternative minimum assessment could increase state revenues by $169 million.

But Joseph R. Crosby of the Council of State Taxation, a nonprofit trade organization, pointed out that corporate income tax was becoming "over the years less important," making up only 3.6 percent of Maryland's total taxes in 2004 and that the "elimination of corporate income tax all together...[is] going to get more jobs and employment."

Dobson, however, presented polls to the legislators, telling them the issue of finding higher revenues for the state will be the "biggest problem you're going to face over the next couple years."

"It's hard to imagine that asking companies to pay a little bit more is going to make the sky fall in," he said. "I don't understand why corporations get treated better than regular people."

trucks entering Oakland, 32 percent were tractor-trailers, and 58 percent of all trucks are making in-town deliveries – therefore over half the trucks wouldn't even use a bypass; furthermore, the study's capacity analysis assigned a top grade for Oakland, and the accident analysis showed no tractor-trailer involvement in any of the six minor accidents in the study. The state's traffic counts for Oakland from 1996 to 2005 confirm only a 9 percent overall increase, for an average of 1 percent per year.

"Based on the state's own studies, do we really need this bypass?" she asked.

The doctor went on to examine the potential impacts of the roadway, stating, "This 2-mile road exits existing Rt. 219 north of Wal-Mart, traverses through prime agricultural and residential property, and terminates at the intersection of Rts. 135 and 219 adjacent to grocery stores and schools. It will be 0.2 to 0.3 mile from three public schools, and will also dictate that three local-use roads become dead-ends.

"This bypass is also being designed with a 'roundabout' at Dennett Road; the size of a roundabout is determined by capacity needs, largest vehicles, and other factors. To handle typical trucks with a wheelbase of 50 feet or more navigating the turn of a roundabout would require a width of 120 to 140 feet, and if some-

Adorable Adoptables

THIS LAB NEEDS RECLAIMED at the Garrett County Animal Shelter. He was picked up as a stray more than a week ago. "He is a very happy boy and would make a great pet for someone who would love him and take care of him," said a Humane Society spokesperson. The two young long-haired siblings pictured above right are described as lovable and playful. The pure white one is a male, and the other with the black spot is a female. Below is Mindy, who was given up by her owner, and is said to be a "sweetheart." Also looking for a new home, but not pictured, are two young tabbies and a large Chesapeake Bay retriever, who was a house dog and will need his vaccinations updated. His owner moved and could not take him along. "We have about 18 cats to chose from, one of every color and kind; come and see," said the spokesperson. "Also, remember with cold weather on board, please provide adequate shelter for all your outdoor pets." Last week's border collie siblings were taken to a rescue downstate, and Casey was adopted. Advocates Say ney for the justice center. Hess spoke at a briefing for state legislators Tuesday.

Hess, who gathers information by interviewing prisoners at area jails, said she has heard recent complaints of AIDS patients without access to medication, diabetics denied insulin, and a woman who waited a month for anti-psychotic medication. Hess told legislators that although her evidence was largely anecdotal, it was "representative of larger systemic problems."

Bruce C. Bereano, a lobbyist for CMS who attended the briefing, said the accusations took him by surprise.

"I'm not trying to be nasty, but she doesn't know what she's talking about," Bereano said. "CMS has an exemplary track record in the state of Maryland." Bereano said the contract had only been in effect for a few months, and it was too soon to draw conclusions.

Outside the briefing, Hess said that she had heard that argument before, and believes there has been plenty of time for improvement, especially where patient safety is concerned.

Walter Wirsching, director of Inmate Health Services for the state, told legislators that, under CMS, the number of physicians serving inmates had almost doubled, and backlogs at Baltimore's Central Booking facility decreased from 14 days to 2 days. Wirsching said all prison facilities in Maryland would have electronic health records for inmates by mid-December, a system implemented last week.

CMS spokesman Ken Fields said his company's contract included significant staffing increases, and the management has recruited heavily to fill them.

"We're using overtime and additional healthcare professionals from the community to meet patients' healthcare needs," Fields said. "Each patient is treated by qualified healthcare professionals who make decisions about the course of treatment, and CMS is supporting those healthcare professionals every day."

The ACLU and Public Justice Center lobbied against the contract's award to CMS by the Board of Public Works in June, and both groups are involved in a class action lawsuit against the state over what they say are health and safety concerns in the state-run Baltimore City Detention Center.

"We continue to have concerns about the quality of care that's being provided," Hess said.

Moe Turrentine To Chair GLAF Directors Board

The Garrett Lakes Arts Festival (GLAF) has elected Moe Turrentine as the chairman of the organization's board of directors. He assumed the post on Oct. 31.

The selection of Turrentine was made at GLAF's annual meeting, which took place on Oct. 24. He is replacing Wayne Johnson, who has stepped down from the position but will continue his affiliation with GLAF as chairman of the fundraising committee. Two new board members were also named at the annual meeting.

Originally from Miami, Fla., Turrentine holds a bachelor of music education degree from the University of Miami and a master of arts degree with a major in music education from the University of Alabama. He has taught music in the Dade County, Fla., Dekalb County, Ga., and Fairfax County, Va., school systems. He was named a music specialist in the Fairfax County Public Schools in 1984 and then became the coordinator of fine arts, a position he held for 11 years. He retired from the Fairfax County school system in 1998.

Presently, Turrentine is the state manager of the Virginia Music Educators Association. He also serves on the boards of the Garrett County Arts Council and Garrett Performing Arts Center. He is a member of the Garrett Community Concert Band and the Mountaintop Dixieland Band.

He and his wife Julie have been property owners in Garrett County since 1990 and moved to the local area to be full-time residents in 2001.

Oakland residents Libby Riley and Lynn Grimm were also elected to serve as directors at the annual meeting. They replace retiring directors David Eyer and Pat Mullinix.

Riley is a substitute teacher in Garrett County and is a member of the Oakland Fire Department Oktoberfest Band and the Garrett Community Concert Band. She is the treasurer for the Southern Garrett Band Boosters.

Grimm sings in the choir at St. Mark's Lutheran church and the Garrett Choral Society. She also plays the hammered dulcimer, performing with a trio, the Fine Companions.

Garrett Lakes Arts Festival is a 501 (c) 3 non-profit organization in the state of Maryland and is the largest presenter of performing arts and arts education in western Maryland. Its performance season runs from March through September. GLAF is supported in part by grants from the Garrett County Arts Council and the Maryland State Arts Council, an agency funded by the state of Maryland and the National Endowment for the Arts. Further information about GLAF is available on its web site www.artsandentertainment.org or by calling the office at 301-387-3082.

Gail Herman To Lecture On Telling Stories

Dr. Gail N. Herman, an local professional storyteller, will talk about how to tell stories to children and how to unearth the tales that children need to hear about themselves and their relatives at the Ruth Enlow Library in Oakland on Thursday, Dec. 1, at 1:30 p.m. and again on Monday, Dec. 5, at 6:30 p.m.

Dr. Herman has written a chapter about this topic titled "Family Story Land: History and Identity," for a recently published book, Telling Stories to Children. She will demonstrate the techniques with her mother-in-law's stories and her own family stories.

Telling Stories to Children was published in 2005 by the National Storytelling Press, a division of the National Storytelling Network. Dr. Herman teaches at Garrett College, Lesley University, University of Connecticut at Confratute, and the University of Louisiana at Lafayette. She gives talks across the United States and has performed in six other countries – Estonia, Lithuania, Germany, Latvia, Canada, and Jamaica – and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

The event is free and open to all interested adults. "With the holidays approaching and family gatherings in the offing, this discussion may provide a timely opportunity for learning how to collect and preserve those precious family stories," said a library spokesperson.

For more information, interested persons may contact the Oakland Library at 301-334-3996, ext. 104.

"Tis The Season" Slated By Local Concert Band

The Garrett Community Concert Band will open the holiday season with a concert titled "Tis the Season" on Sunday, Dec. 4, at 2:30 p.m. in the Garrett College auditorium.

"In selecting a Sunday afternoon for its program, the band hopes that children and others who find an afternoon program more suitable will be able to enjoy this concert," said Dr. Jerry McGee, conductor.

The performance will include medleys of holiday songs popular with both adults and children and a special arrangement called "A Canadian Brass Christmas." Also among the selections will be a medley of popular Chanukah songs.

In addition to familiar holiday music, the program will include a tarantella, an Italian dance style associated with the bite of the tarantula spider, featuring Gino Mauricci playing clarinet. Tom Simpson will also be featured in Leroy Anderson's "Trumpeter's Lullaby," and the Mountain Top Dixieland Jazz, composed mainly of Garrett Community Concert Band members, will open the second half of the holiday program.

Admission is $8 for adults, $2 for students, and free for children under 6 years. Tickets will be available at the Arts Council Gallery, located along Alder Street in Oakland, and at the door.

"our interaction with the federal government is better. We have a great day-to-day working relationship with all the groups we would need in an emergency situation."

And Droneburg said that only a small percentage of Marylanders live below sea level, so not as much flooding would occur as in states with more low-lying areas.

People who live along the Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean shorelines would be at some risk if there were a large hurricane, and may need to be evacuated, he said.

"In Maryland, we're lucky that a safe place wouldn't be as far away from their homes, and there wouldn't be as many people who would need to move" as compared to Hurricane Katrina, he said.

In a densely populated area such as Ocean City, though, up to 300,000 people could need to be evacuated.

McIntosh said she believed the disastrous results of Hurricane Katrina in New Orleans "could happen in any almost any urban area in the country because of the number of people who are transit-dependent and don't have cars."

In Baltimore, for example, she said, one out of every three people does not own a car, which means more than 200,000 people would need to rely on mass transit to evacuate.

Droneburg said the Emergency Management Agency has considered special needs populations, such as those without a vehicle, and local plans do include public transportation.

As recently as this week, Contestabile said, the Department of Transportation held meetings with operators of buses, school buses, and motor coaches to discuss how they could be used during a disaster.

"We've been looking at evacuation plans for years," he said. "Two-thirds of the state is covered by a plan."

The most sophisticated plan is the Hurricane Evacuation Plan for the Eastern Shore, he said, but many other locations around the state also have completed or nearly completed plans.

Contestabile said initial plans for the Baltimore region have been completed but are being updated. Planning is underway in the Washington area, but has just been started in Calvert County, which includes Calvert Cliffs nuclear power plant.

Droneburg said evacuation plans have been in place in Maryland since long before the events of Sept. 11, 2001, and Hurricane Katrina.

"What they have caused us to do is take a closer look at things that have occurred to help us make changes," he said. "Technology changes as time goes on, highways change . . . . We're in the process of updating our plans."

Robert S. Summers, director of Water Management for the Maryland Department of the Environment, said in terms of resource management, the state needs to be sure that the infrastructure is properly constructed, maintained, and is ready for a disaster event.

Prevention is the key, he said, and that is why the state has such a rigorous dam inspection program and has one of "the best storm water programs in the country."

"The basic idea is to maintain the natural environment so that there are many places for the runoff to go," he said. Also using things such as storm water ponds or green roofs can help reduce water runoff, he said.

"The time to worry about safety is now," he said. "Once it's raining, it is too late."

SHS Girls Third In State Meet; Cosner, Upperman All-Staters

Led by Jennifer and Sarah Cosner, the Southern High School girls' cross country team captured third place in the Class 1A Maryland State Championships, hosted by Hereford High School on Saturday.

The Rams fmished with 103 team points, second only to state champion Williamsport with 30 points, and runner-up Digital Harbor with 91 points.

Jennifer Cosner led the Southern girls with a 14th place individual finish, completing the rigorous course in 22 minutes, 49.92 seconds. Sarah Cosner was 17th with a time of 23:33.72.

Courtney DiSimone finished 28th in 24:13.57, followed by teammates Melinda Smith, 35th, 24:33.73; Kelly Taylor, 50th, 24:42.48; Katy Lucas, 54th, 25:57.51; and Leah Warnick, 64th, 26:47.89.

Jennifer Cosner was named to the All-State team for her finish.

Placing fourth as a team was Catoctin with 158 points, followed by: Smithsburg, 166; Clear Spring, 169; Marriotts Ridge, 171; Carver, 198; Pikesville, 209; Cambridge South Dorchester, 224; Rising Sun, 227; and North Point, 246.

Numerous other high schools were represented by individual runners who qualified at their respective regional events.

The Southern boys did not qualify as a team, but two members of the squad did, and Derek Upperman also earned All-State honors by finishing 14th with a time of 18:20.6. Southern's Mike McConnell also had a strong finish, placing 24th in 18:55.97.

Western Maryland schools fared well in the boys' race, as Clear Spring won the team championship, and Beall finished second.

The Runnin' Rams, who have several state championships to their credit over the years, are currently coached by Steve Cosner (girls) and Jamie Beeman (boys).

Winning the individual titles in the Class 1A race were Lauryn MacFawn of Allegany and Mohamed Khelelfa of Fort Hill.

MacFawn cruised to victory, completing the course in 20:15.76, which was 90 seconds ahead of Brunswick's Laura Rupprecht. Khelelfa recorded a time of 17:22 in winning the boys' race, while Beall's James Carney finished second in 17:27.

FINISHING THIRD IN THE STATE 1A Cross County Championships as a team on Saturday were the members of the Southern High School girls' squad, coached by Steve Cosner. Among dozens of schools represented in the event, hosted by Hereford High School, the only two teams that finished higher than the Runnin' Rams were state champion Williamsport and runner-up Digital Harbor. Pictured from left above, front, are: Katie Lucas, Kelly Taylor, and Courtney DiSimone. Standing are: Jennifer Cosner, Leah Warnick, Sarah Cosner, Melinda Smith, and Coach Cosner. Jennifer Cosner and Southern's Derek Upperman, pictured below, both earned All-State status with their outstanding finishes. Upperman and teammate Mike McConnell qualified for the state meet as individuals. See story for details.

Many Former Southern Rams Now Shooting Collegiate Hoops

A number of former standouts on the basketball court at Southern High School are now playing collegiate ball, whose teams will open their respective seasons over the next week or so. Following is a summary on those local student athletes.

Ashley Liller is entering her junior year at Div. I Mount St. Mary's University in Emmitsburg.

As a sophomore, Ashley suffered an early season ankle sprain that plagued her the entire 2004-05 season. She ended up averaging 2.9 points and 2.5 rebounds per game in the 21 games in which she appeared.

Mount St. Mary's, which finished 9-19 last year, competes in the Northeast Conference and will open its current season at George Mason University this Saturday. The Mount will play Maryland and Georgetown in its non-conference schedule, as well as participate in a holiday tournament in Cancun, Mexico.

Liller, who is a 2002 graduate of Southern, scored the second greatest number of career points in the school's history under Coach Don Stemple. She is a business administration major.

Becca Flanagan is expected to see plenty of playing time in her sophomore season at Div. II Concord University in Athens, W. Va.

As a freshman, she started in seven games and played in all 28 for the 15-13 Lions. She averaged 8.2 ppg while shooting 50% from the field, and averaged almost just under five rebounds per outing.

Concord, which plays in the West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, will open this Saturday by hosting its own Lady Lion Classic. Concord will play Anderson on Friday, and meet St. Paul's University on Saturday.

Flanagan, a 2004 Ram graduate, played on Coach Don Stemple's 2004 state championship team. She is currently undecided on a major.

Dennis Tressler, who is beginning his junior season at Div. III Hood College in Frederick, started 16 of 24 games as a freshman, shot over 50% from the floor, pulled down 135 rebounds, and was the second leading scorer on the team with 14 ppg.

As a sophomore, he played in all 25 games and averaged just over seven ppg, led the team in three-point field goal percentage, and tied for the lead in most three-point shots made, with 38.

Corey Tressler, younger brother of Dennis, made the Hood team as a freshman this year after graduating from Southern this past June. He is hoping to break into the line-up as a shooting guard.

The Blazers, who will try to improve upon their 12-13 mark last season, will open their season this Friday in Baltimore at the Pride in Maryland Tournament vs. Washington College. The tourney is a Div. III tip-off event that features nothing but teams from Maryland colleges. Frostburg State, Goucher, Villa Julie, Johns Hopkins, McDaniel, Salisbury, Washington, and Hood will compete in the three-day tournament.

The Tressler brothers will be matched up against former Southern teammate A.J. Bender when Hood travels to Mt. Aloysius College next Tuesday, Nov. 22.

Dennis and Corey both played on region finalist teams for Coach Tom Bosley while at Southern. Dennis is majoring in math, and Corey plans to major in accounting.

Bender is playing in his junior season at Div. III Mt. Aloysius College in Cresson, Pa. He played in 12 games his freshman year after transferring from Frostburg State University. In his sophomore season, he started in 15 and played in all 25 games for the 7-18 Mounties, averaging 2.7 ppg, dishing out 57 assists, and finishing second on the team in steals with 41.

Mount Aloysius, which competes in the Allegheny Mountain Collegiate Conference, will open by hosting its own Hampton Inn Coaches Vs. Cancer Tournament. The team will play Franciscan University of Ohio on Friday.

Bender, a 2003 graduate of Southern, played on two region finalist teams for Coach Tom Boaley. He is majoring in business administration.

Robbin Gregg is beginning her sophomore season at McDaniel College in Westminster, where the Green Terror is ranked 23rd in the pre-season top 25 poll for women's Div. III basketball.

As a freshman, Gregg played in all 29 games. She averaged 3.1 ppg, and had 29 assists and 22 steals for her team, which won the conference championship and finished with a 25-4 record. The Green Terror was ranked as high as ninth in the nation among women's Div. III teams.

Gregg's team spent 12 days in France this past summer playing international basketball, and she was recently honored for having the third highest grade point average among Division I, II, and III women basketball players in the country.

McDaniel will open its campaign this Friday against Baruch College in the Catholic University Tip-Off Tournament in Washington, D.C.

Gregg, a 2004 Southern grad, played on Coach Don Stemple's 2004 state championship team. She is majoring in chemistry.

Justine Pagenhardt came on strong in her freshman year at Div. III Marietta College in Ohio by scoring 95 points in the last five games of the season. She ended up second on the team in scoring with 10 ppg, and shot 71% from the free throw line. She started in 15 games and appeared in all 25 games.

The Lady Pioneers, who participate in the Ohio Athletic Conference, finished 10-15 last year. The team will open this season in Michigan against Kalamazoo University in the Kalamazoo Opening Tournament, set for this Friday and Saturday.

Pagenhardt, a 2004 graduate of Southern, is well known for the "shot heard 'round Maryland" during the Lady Rams' trek to a state championship in 2004. She is a biology/premedicine major.

Jasmine Scheffel has worked her way into the rotation as a freshman at Div. III SUNY New Paltz in New York. She was last year's MVP for Coach Roger Bowman's 18-0 Rams, for whom she averaged 10.2 ppg and had 110 rebounds. She was name second team All-Area by the Cumberland Times-News.

The New York school opens this year's schedule this Saturday with a game at Drew University.

Kayla Nazelrod has begun her freshman year at Garrett College. Last season she averaged 7 ppg for the Rams, was second on the team in rebounds, and recorded a team-high 62 steals. She was best known for her defensive prowess while at Southern.

Garrett is already 1-1 on the season, having rolled over Allegany College of Maryland last night, 97-46. Kayla scored 4 points for the Lakers, who will play again this Sunday at CCBC Dundulk.

NHS Edges Rams By One, But Edged Out Of Playoffs By 0.08

The sweet taste of a hard-fought victory soured within 48 hours when the Northern High varsity football squad, fresh off a thrilling 21-20 win over a tough Southern team Friday night, learned by Sunday night that a technicality had ousted them from an anticipated berth in the state playoffs. Despite Fort Hill's Saturday loss to Allegany which had apparently ended the Sentinels' season at 6-4 and cinched a playoff spot for the 7-2 Huskies, the Maryland Public Secondary Schools Athletic Association (MPSSAA) ended up awarding the post-season berth to Fort Hill in a rather convoluted, and in some aspects still questionable, decision.

The crux of the matter was the MPSSAA's finding that a player for Baltimore's Douglass High had played the full season while ineligible; therefore, that school was forced to forfeit its nine wins. One of those wins was awarded to Southside Academy, which had lost to FH during the season, and therefore the Sentinels' win in that meeting took on the extra weight of one point in the point system breakdown. When the dust settled and the calculators cooled, MPSSAA officials had decided that the extra bonus point gave Fort Hill a 5.50 rating, 0.08 points ahead of NHS's 5.42 – so the Sentinels were in, and the Huskies were out.

Fumbles-Lost	3-0	2-2
Punts-Average	1-24	1-43
Penalties-Yards	9-50	4-25
Total Offense	327	296

That ruling still stands, despite several ensuing appeals from athletic, administrative, and even elected officials. The association has said that it will continue investigating the matter, as Douglass High has filed a formal appeal to try to get back its nine wins, but by the time a final decision is reached on that matter it will be too late for Northern's hopes to make the playoffs, which open tonight when Fort Hill meets Allegany in Cumberland.

"It was a big disappointment for our team, school, and community," NHS head coach Phil Carr commented yesterday, the disappointment still evident in his voice. "I feel bad for our players and coaches who all had worked so hard to get us to a spot where we could go to the playoffs. We know the state is going by the book, but the fact that it still could change after they re-examine the Douglass High situation doesn't make it any easier.

"It's been an emotional rollercoaster for everyone at the school. A lot of our players and other students went with us to the Fort Hill - Allegany game, so we were all pretty pumped after the Sentinels lost; then when the word came down from the state, and we held a team meeting to discuss it, there were a lot of sad faces."

The Huskies were all smiles after Friday night's one-point win over visiting Southern however, after prevailing in the type of contest that has come to be expected when the cross-county rivals meet for the annual season finale. Both teams pummeled each other like heavyweight boxers for 48 minutes, and the outcome was still in doubt with less than a minute to play when Northern mounted a defensive stand on their own five-yard line to seal the victory.

"It was an exciting game for the fans to watch, but it was gut-wrenching for Coach Gregg and me," Carr stated. "We didn't expect anything but a dogfight, because Southern had played three straight great games before meeting us. We sure got the dogfight we were expecting from them."

Gregg concurred, noting "I thought both teams played well in the see-saw affair. It was a very clean, hard-hitting game, with no surprises, as Coach Carr and I knew going in that we'd both be trying to capitalize on our respective strengths by running the ball. Both teams were fairly successful at doing that."

The scoring opened when SHS senior running back Andrew VanBogelen carried the ball in from seven yards out with 5:38 left in the first quarter. The Rams called for a run on the conversion play, but the Husky defense turned the ball carrier away short of the end zone in one of two conversion stops that would loom large at the end of the contest.

Northern took the lead with 10:40 to play in the second quarter when senior quarterback Casey Kamp streaked 25 yards on an option keeper. Junior fullback Corey Carr then barreled into the end zone on the conversion run, putting NHS up 8-6.

Only 101 seconds elapsed before the Rams answered with their second touchdown as junior split end Ryan DeWitt grabbed a pass from classmate Adam VanBogelen and scampered through the NHS secondary for a 67 yard touchdown. The long scoring play, which was the lone SHS pass completion in five attempts on the night, gave Southern a 12-8 advantage with 9:01 to play in the second quarter after another Ram conversion run failed to find the end zone.

Late in the stanza the Huskies' offense miscued by fumbling the ball away on its own 45-yard line. After driving downfield to perch

DeWitt went over the 1,000 yard mark for the 2005 campaign during the final game of his career to break the previous season mark held by Aaron Newcomb. Northern field general Casey Kamp (#10), also playing in what turned out to be his last game, is shown above right taking his marching orders from NHS skipper Phil Carr. The Huskies took the contest by a narrow 21-20 margin, but a hoped-for playoff bid failed to materialize due to a technicality involving arch-rival Fort Hill. Photos by John McEwen.

THE NHS GRIDIRON PROGRAM has its roots in the first Northern High football squad, which was honored at Friday night's Northern-Southern game. Six members of that inaugural Husky unit were on hand to help cheer their alma mater to victory, a half-century after their team posted a 2-1-1 mark in a 1955 season that included a 38-0 win over Southern's B team. Pictured in the orginal team photo are, from the left in Row 1: Kenneth Glotfelty, Billy Miller, Dean Durst, Warren Miller, Edgar Mickey, Delmos Wright, Donald Jenkins, Roy Stanton, and Billy Jones. Row 2: Gary Hetrick, Grady Gilpin, quarterback and co-captain Carl Maser, Dale Schroyer, Eddie Rush, Wayne McKenzie, and Gary Fratz. Row 3: Joe Bender, Charles Strauss Jr., Ward Humberson, flanker and co-captain Ross Selby Jr., Alten Edger, Dick Miller, Ronald Beachy, Dick Spear, Ronald Glass, and Roy Rexrode. Row 4: athletic director and assistant coach Lilburn Brown, head coach Denver Mitchell, and assistant coaches Charlie Strauss and Russell Davis.

on the 12 with a first down, Southern appeared poised to capitalize on the opportunity; however, a holding penalty and a tough NHS prevented the Rams from padding their four-point lead going into the half.

Another Northern lapse nearly spelled disaster at the opening of the third quarter, when SHS's kickoff hit a Husky up-man in the chest and bounced to the ground, where the Rams recovered the ball on the NHS 40. Southern pushed downfield to get into the red zone, but Northern's defense held at the 18-yard line to take the ball back on downs.

The Huskies then embarked on a methodical, nine-play drive that chewed up 82 yards en route to a touchdown. "We used a lot of isolation running plays," said Coach Carr, "with halfback Tyler Warn following Corey Carr into the line. Corey did some fine blocking, Tyler had some nice runs, and our offense line – which had a great night in only making us punt once – did a great job." The pounding paid off at the 4:33 mark when Warn scored on a six-yard carry. The two-point run by Carr gave the Huskies a 15-12 lead.

Six minutes later, with 10:40 to play in the fourth quarter, senior Southern halfback Bret DeWitt reeled off a 55-yard touchdown run to grab the lead back for the Rams. DeWitt followed up on his TD by carrying in the conversion, and SHS was back on top by five, 20-15. With 207 yards on the night on 34 carries, DeWitt was the workhorse of the game as he passed over 1,000 yards for the campaign to claim a new single-season mark for the Southern program.

Northern's offense went to work from there, embarking on a 10-play, 4½ minute march to pay dirt. Kamp capped the drive with a clutch play when, on fourth-and-goal from the three-yard line, he patiently waited for receiver Mitch Fost to get open in the front corner of the end zone and rifled in a scoring pass. The conversion pass attempt failed, and NHS came away with a 21-20 advantage with just under five minutes to play.

The Huskies intended to keep the ensuing kickoff away from the ever-dangerous DeWitt, who was lined up deep to receive the ball, by kicking the ball on the ground; however, the kick bounced short and Southern recovered it at its own 45-yard line. With 3:20 showing on the clock and all their timeouts, Coach Gregg and his squad had an opportunity to snatch the game away from the Huskies.

The Rams put together a nice drive in the pressure situation, highlighted by a 28-yard run by DeWitt that gave them a first-and-10 from the Huskies' 14-yard line. Three bruising plays later, and just 57 seconds remaining, SHS was perched at the end of the chains with a fourth-and-two-feet from inside the five.

Southern called a timeout to formulate its plan of attack, and Northern's defensive staff used the opportunity to strategize as well. "Coach Ewing guessed the Rams to run an off-tackle play with DeWitt getting the call, because that's what they had been killing us with all night," explained Carr. "It's part of the chess match between coaching staffs, which makes the game all that much more fun – if you're right."

The Huskies' hunch paid off, and DeWitt was met at the line by defensive end Eric Diehl, who had slipped off his blocker. Nose guard Matt Mason got a second hit in on the Ram ball carrier, right before defensive end Jason Doerr jumped into the fray. The big pile-up ended up stopping DeWitt less than six inches short of the first down.

With 45 seconds remaining, NHS took over, conscious that a punting situation would put them in jeopardy of giving up a safety. Coach Gregg used his last two timeouts to try to force the Huskies' hand, but the clock expired before the Rams could get the ball back, and another classic took its rightful place in the Northern-Southern record book.

"It was the kind of game we were expecting. We knew it wasn't going to be a cake walk, and even with their record the way it was Southern came to play," Carr said.

"It was obviously a tough loss for our guys, who played their hearts out" Gregg commented. "We had a great group of 14 seniors who played together superbly as a team all year; they were very cohesive, and there were no egos, no selfishness. In our last practice we talked about how the year had flown by, and how great it had been to spend the season together. I think their senior leadership this year will help put next year's seniors on the path to success."

DeWitt's game-leading 207-yard rushing performance likely cemented him second place in the area rushing leaders column, behind only NHS's Warn, who had 183 yards on 19 carries for the night. (Full season-end statistics will appear in a coming issue.)

On Friday night Northern was led on defense by Corey Carr's 21 tackles, while Brock Glotfelty recorded 12 tackles and Bryce Manges contributed an interception.

Anthony Schuock and Brandon Manko had fumble recoveries for Southern. Andrew VanBogelen also stood out for the Rams, according to the SHS coaches.

The hard-earned win will have to give the Huskies some measure of solace, despite their being the 12th-ranked 1A squad in the state but still excluded from the 16-team playoff field. The geographical breakdown doesn't make things any easier, as Cambridge-South Dorchester enters the post-season with a 3-7 record, and there are four 5-5 teams that gained playoff berths.

"Despite our disappointment at having the playoff bid taken away, we had a great run all year and a great season," Coach Carr concluded. "No one can take that away from us."

NHS Junior Varsity Downs Southern Gridders, 19-13

In what could be a sign of things to come, the junior varsity battle between the Northern and Southern High football squads Thursday night ended with just a touchdown separating the two squads. NHS came away with a 19-13 win, paced by a 142-yard rushing tally turned in by Zach Fratz, who scored two touchdowns, one on a rushing [illegible] and the other on a kickoff return.

Josh Duckworth had a three-yard score for the Huskies, while Vince Harman had both touchdowns for Southern.

"New-Look" Lakers Open Up With Loss To Cecil, Big Win Over ACM

The Garrett College women's basketball squad is full of fresh faces this year, as the roster – already riddled by injuries – is populated with just two returning upperclassman, two transfer sophomores, and 10 freshmen. Laker coach Thea Garland, last year's Maryland JUCO Coach of the Year, admitted this week that finding the right combination of starters and reservists will be a challenge; however, the second-year head coach said so far the team was gelling quite nicely, and she was pleased with her athletes' talent and enthusiasm.

"We really don't know what to expect, which is half the fun of it," Coach Garland said of her 2005-06 unit, which opened the season with a narrow 79-75 loss to Cecil on Saturday, but rebounded to crush the Allegany College of Maryland last night 97-46.

The Lakers jumped out of the box early against Cecil, and rolled up a 14-point lead in the second half; however, the Hawks swooped back midway through the second stanza to take the see-saw contest by four points in the end.

Sophomore Jamie Anderson, the squad's lone returning starter, paced Garrett with a 20-point performance, while freshman Flodysha Peterson had a fine all-around effort with 15 points, six rebounds and five blocks. Classmate Christina Barnes also had six rebounds.

Last night's 51-point blowout over visiting Allegany kept the scorekeeper busy as six Lakers hit for double figures. The Lakers dominated from the outset, grabbing a 14-2 advantage in the early minutes en route to a 46-19 halftime lead.

Returning sophomore Eugenna Carson put up 16 points, transfer sophomore Kierra Wilkens contributed 13 points, 12 assists, and six steals, and Peterson recorded a double-double of 12 points and 10 rebounds. Anderson also accounted for a dozen points, and freshmen Jeseca Gibson and Ashley Hill netted 10 points each. Allegany's top performer was Jawanna Henderson, who had 11 points, 15 rebounds, and two blocked shots.

The Lakers will visit Dundalk Sunday before their Thanksgiving hiatus. The next outing to follow is set for Wednesday, Nov. 30, when Takoma Park pays a visit to McHenry.

SEASON PROGNOSIS

Last year's Lakers went 22-4, and that team's sparkplug Denae Kennedy has been lost to graduation. Kennedy was a Region XX All-Star honorable mention selection and a Second Team All-JUCO honoree.

Returning is forward/guard Anderson, who has been dealing with a nagging hip injury of late. The Second Team All-JUCO and Region Honorable Mention recipient appears fully recovered, and her showing against Cecil proved she is ready to be an anchor for this year's squad.

The Lakers also expect big things from transfer forward/guard Kierra Wilkens, although she is likely to be rusty after sitting out a season since transferring from Howard. The 2004 First Team All-Region and All-JUCO squad member averaged nearly 20 points a game during her one-year run with the Dragons.

Nytearia Burrell, a sophomore guard, helped pace her St. Francis Academy high school squad to the 2003 state championship. The transfer student comes with a reputation as an outstanding defensive player, although continuing recovery from an ACL tear will keep her sidelined until January.

The Lakers appear to be loaded with rebounding specialists, as forward/guard Carson, a former Baltimore County All-Star at Milford Mill Academy, has shown strength on the boards, and forward/guard Hill was named MVP and Best Rebounder of her T.C. Williams High team last season. Freshman forward/guard Ancetha Dudley, who is coming off a badly sprained ankle, was a two-year MVP honoree at Southwest High, and forward/center/guard Peterson was also a two-year MVP for her Dorchester County High team.

Three Garrett County products, guards Gibson and Tiffany Yoder, and forward/guard Kayla Nazelrod, are freshmen roster members. Gibson was a red-hot outside shooter for the Northern Huskies, where she broke the school record for three-point baskets while playing alongside Yoder. Nazelrod was voted Most Improved of her Southern High squad last season.

Freshman guards Tiffany Torres and Cornelia Hilton are both coming off knee injuries, but showed great talent in high school. Torres won numerous honors at Westfield High, and Hilton was voted team MVP at Patterson High. Barnes, a forward/center, was named Most Improved Player at state champion Milford Mill Academy, and Brittney Jackson, a freshman forward/guard, was named MVP of her Forestville High squad.

"The amount of injuries we've sustained has hurt us by making it hard to practice with our full line-up, but as the girls all come back and get settled in, things should turn around fairly quickly," Garland commented. "We have a great group of players, and I can't wait to see what they can do when they're all healthy."

Lakers Fall To Indians Hills, Sheridan In Iowa Tournament

The Indian Hills Rotary Classic in Ottumwa, Iowa, proved to be a tough challenge for the Garrett College men's basketball team, as the Lakers were whipped 80-51 Friday evening by nationally ranked Indian Hills, and then dropped a 73-69 decision to Sheridan (Wyo.) College on Saturday.

Sheridan lost by only five points earlier in the week to Indian Hills.

Details of the Garrett-Indian Hills contest were not received.

In Saturday's game with Sheridan, sophomore Tyrice Watkins paced the Lakers in scoring, finishing with 21 points, a dozen of which were recorded from three-point range. He also grabbed seven rebounds and had a pair of blocked shots.

Also reaching double figures for the Lakers were Jerome Jack with 15 points and Barry Cornish with 14 points.

The Lakers trailed Sheridan by as many as 19 points in the first half before closing that gap to 10 – 39-29 – by halftime.

Garrett stepped up its defensive effort in the second half, limiting Sheridan to just seven field goals for the half and ultimately cutting the lead to a single point, 62-61, following a free throw by Cornish.

But the Lakers could get no closer.

Gordon Brown was the star for Sheridan, leading all scorers with 25 points and pulling down eight rebounds. Brian Duckworth finished with 12 points, and Jake Schnudt netted 10.

The Lakers will open their home campaign this weekend with their own annual McDonald's Preseason Classic. They will face Jamestown (N.Y.) at 7 p.m. on Friday, after a 5 p.m. clash between Germantown and Mercyhurst (Pa.) Northeast. The consolation game will be played Saturday at noon, and the title contest will tip off at 2 p.m.

Garrett will travel to Frostburg State University to face the jayvee Bobcats next Tuesday in a 5:30 game.

New Athletic Trainer Joins Garrett Staff

ELIZABETH KOHLMEYER

Elizabeth Kohlmeyer recently began her duties as the new athletic trainer at Garrett College. The Markleysburg, Pa., resident holds a bachelor's degree in athletic training from Waynesburg College, and a master of science degree in sports medicine degree from the University of Pittsburgh. Her teaching experience at Pitt included courses in Basic Athletic Training and Care and Prevention.

"The idea of working in a rural area was a breath of fresh air," Kohlmeyer said. "I look forward to being able to promote athletic training. As Garrett College grows, I would like to see an undergraduate athletic training program developed."

Garrett dean Virginia Broaddus commented, "Liz brings energy and professionalism to her position, and our students and athletic department are responding well to her role. We look forward to gleaning her insights as we continue building on the college's strong academic and athletic traditions."

Kohlmeyer is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association, Eastern Athletic Trainers Association, and Pennsylvania Athletic Trainers Society. She possesses athletic trainer certifications from the National Athletic Trainers' Association Board and the state of Pennsylvania. She is also certified in community first aid and safety, and the use of the automated external defibrillator, both through the American Red Cross.

Kohlmeyer was president of the Waynesburg College Athletic Training Association and captain of the women's varsity softball squad.

Morgantown, WV, —

Good news! Major media sources proclaim gas prices are on their way back down to $2.00 and SUV and van buyers are in for quite a shock. SUV buyers typically purchased their vehicles because they wanted safety for their family as well as room and comfort, but the media's incessant harping on gas prices, and other negative news has scared buyers out of the market, and according to one auto insider this story has a huge silver lining. Mike Wood of the New Bortz KIA had this to say, " Due to serious slacking demand for the SUV and van, manufacturers are scrambling to move inventories and they're doing it with phenomenal offers like I've never seen before. Imagine, a couple new vehicles I have in mind is the KIA Sorento and KIA Sedona that has over $7,000 in factory rebates and other incentives. These savings are so dramatic they swallow up years of high fuel prices which are already on their way back down to below $2.00 a gallon. I think the manufacturer has over reacted, and that's a huge silver lining. You don't have to sacrifice your family's safety for gas prices."

It was quite a surprise to know that the New Bortz KIA is selling safe vehicles with some models turning up to 40 M.P.G. And better. Wow! And the good news doesn't end there. Again Mr. Wood added, "Price is obviously a major issue to the auto buyer... A concern we're keenly aware of at the New Bortz KIA. We decided long ago that we would be fiercely competitive when it comes to price. If you have seen any of Bortz KIA TV ads you know we are serious. We call it a low price guarantee, our customers call it peace-of-mind knowing that they are getting the right price and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty. This month we are sweetening the deal even more by offering a minimum 110% of Kelley Blue Book value for trade-ins."

The New Bortz KIA is located at 696 Fairmont road in Westover. Phone: 304-291-5090 or toll free at 866-313-5998.

The New Bortz KIA also has a quantity of previously titled 2005 KIA Sedona's priced from $14,995, that's more than $10,000 off the original M.S.R.P.

With prices this low and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty you don't have to sacrifice your family's safety, room and comfort because of high gas prices.

day traffic requires that the bypass be upgraded to a four-lane highway, which is MDOT's stated intent, it would require a two-lane roundabout the size of a football field.

"Are these the kinds of impacts we want smack dab in between Oakland and Mtn. Lake Park?" she asked.

"Our research shows that we need not 'reinvent the wheel,' and some solutions that would be better and much cheaper than a bypass include the addition of turning lanes or a center lane, especially on Third Street; redesigning and changing our existing one-way and two-way traffic patterns; installing more sophisticated traffic-light systems to better control traffic fluctuations; use of 'Metro Count Systems' to monitor rates of speed and types of vehicles to pinpoint areas which require additional traffic patrols and management; use of speed trailers throughout the community to prevent and discourage speeding and aggressive driving; use of a 'Fix A Gram' that citizens can fill out to report road problems and traffic concerns; distribution of informational and educational brochures to help involve individuals in the community concerning overall traffic safety; and institute a 'no warning' citation policy when it pertaining to any violations of safety belts, child restraints, and speed limits."

Those suggestions were more in line with state smart-growth plans and local growth management plans, including the Town of Oakland Comprehensive Plan which, as Alvarez pointed out, provides guidance for officials to "ensure permanent open space is established in conjunction with future land development [and] facilitate residential and non-residential development that will help maintain the viability of the existing central business area."

"The problems this project is supposed to solve would only be execrated by a bypass; it seems that every argument put forth for a bypass in town logically leads to an argument to either push it farther out or not build it at all.

"For instance, proponents say that Corridor H in West Virginia will bring a lot of new traffic here, especially trucks, therefore, we need a bypass in place; but if that's true, that is in fact an argument against the bypass. Do we really want to promote more trucks and traffic right here in town with this bypass? That's all the more reason not to build it between two little towns."

State Highway Administration officials reiterated this week that their progression on the project is fueled by the expressed support of the area's elected officials. "Your elected officials need to give us direction on changes they want or if they want to drop the project altogether," SHA Oakland Bypass project manager Sean Johnson said. "They are the ones driving this."

Volunteers Sought To Deliver Meals To Senior Citizens

The Garrett County Area Agency on Aging is looking for volunteers willing to share a Thanksgiving dinner meal with home-bound elderly persons in Garrett County.

"When preparing that scrumptious feast, could you share a small part of that turkey feast with a home-bound elderly person in your community?" a spokesperson said. "It is as simple as making a turkey dinner plate and delivering the meal from your table to theirs. Why not make it a family affair by including your children in this community service?"

Persons interested in volunteering for the program can contact the Area Agency on Aging at 301-334-9431, ext. 137, or 301-895-5818.

Open Air Burn Regs. Noted By Forest Service

With the arrival of autumn, traditionally a time of high forest fire danger in Maryland, the Department of Natural Resources Forest Service has issued a reminder on the state's regulations for open air burning. These regulations apply to all burning in woodlands and within 200 ft. of woodlands, and burn activities adjacent to or within an area where flammable materials could ignite and carry fire to woodlands.

These regulations are:

- A natural or constructed fire break at least ten feet wide must completely surround the material to be burned;
- Adequate personnel and equipment must be present to prevent the fire from escaping;
- At least one responsible person must remain at the burning location until the last spark is out.
- Burning that takes place between 4 p.m. and midnight does not require a permit;
- Open air burning prior to 4 p.m. requires a burning permit from DNR and from the Health Department. Information on open air burning can be obtained by contacting the Garrett County Health Department, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday at 301-334-7760, or the DNR Forest Service at 301-334-3296.

Open air burning of any type not in accordance with these regulations is subject to citations and fines ranging from $50 to $250.

"Typically, fall is the time of the year when many property owners are conducting outdoor burning of leaves and other debris. Unfortunately, many people do not burn safely, resulting in wildfires," said state forester Ernie Metz of the Mt. Nebo Forest Service office.

Over 253 wildfires burned 3,149 acres in Maryland last year, and 25 of these fires were in western Maryland, with six of those occurring in Garrett County.

Debris burners caused 14 wildfires in western Maryland in 2004, which was 56 percent of the wildfires for the region. Debris burning in Garrett County accounted for three fires, or 50 percent of the wildfires in the county last year.

"If you are burning, be extremely cautious and be certain that the fire does not get out of control and spread into nearby grass and woods," Metz stated. "The protection of our forest resource is vital to the continuation of forests for water quality protection, timber, wildlife habitat, and recreation."

HELPING THE GC ANIMAL SHELTER – First grade students at Dennett Road Elementary School collected items for the Garrett County Animal Shelter. The students donated towels, cat and dog treats, leashes, and money. Along with collecting items for the shelter, the students learned about pet shelters, stray pets, and pet care. The students were given a pet rock to care for during the weeklong activities. The students held a stuffed animal pet show. Bonnie Zimmerman, officer with the Garrett County Animal Shelter, her dog Moca, and Lisa Baker from the Garratt County Humane Society came into the classroom to talk about the animal shelter, what they do for animals, and how to care for animals.

Home Care Month Noted By GCHD

The Garrett County Health Department Home Health Agency (GCHD/HHA) is encouraging local residents to take part in this month's observance of National Home Care Month by learning about the benefits of home health care and advanced technologies available to make the task easier.

"With increasing costs of health care and shorter hospital stays, in-home care has been proven nationally to be more cost-effective and improve outcomes for individuals," said Health Department spokesperson Diane Lee. "Home care allows • homebound individuals of all ages to remain in their homes with support of family, friends, community resources and services provided by the Home Health Agency."

Home care provides a wide range of skilled services including skilled nursing, physical, speech, and occupational therapy, home health aides, and medical social workers. In order to receive home care, the patient must be essentially homebound and in need of skilled care. Regulations require that the care required be medically reasonable, necessary and ordered by a physician.

GCHD/HHA continues to provide additional supportive services through the Telehealth Program. Telehealth is the process of using remote computer equipment to monitor the condition of a patient and relay information over a telephone line or wireless connection back to a central nursing station.

The system is much like an ATM machine, where a touch screen is activated and the patient is able to perform functions such as blood pressure, blood sugar, oxygen levels and weight, which then are transmitted to a computer in the offies of Telehealth. The nurse reviews the information and coordinates the findings with the patient's physician and the patient.

"Through Telehealth, better patient outcomes are achieved by improving access to care and educating patients for long-term self-management," said Lee. "The service can help stimulate important behavioral changes and helps patients and their families to participate in and make decisions regarding their care. Telehealth can decrease health care costs while continuing to improve patient outcomes and enhance quality of life," she stated.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for residents of Garrett County to take advantage of advanced technology and the changing trends of health care," observed Beverly Bowser, RN and Telehealth nurse. "Physicians like the accuracy and reliability of their patients being monitored, and patients like the security and dependability of knowing what to do and feeling well."

The service is provided by a grant through the University of Maryland, and Garrett Telehealthcare makes the equipment available at no extra cost to the patient.

The Garrett County Health Department Home Health Agency has a professionally trained, licensed, and certified staff. The Home Health Agency is Medicare certified and licensed by the state of Maryland. For more information regarding Home Health services or Telehealth, persons may call 301-334-7750, 301-895-3111 or fax 301-334-7751.

CARING FOR HEALTH AT HOME – The Garrett County Health Department Home Health Agency is promoting National Home Health Care Month by highlighting its professionally trained, licensed, and certified staff with years of home health experience. Shown above is Telehealth patient Beverly Rook as she is being assisted by Beverly Bowser, RN, a Telehealth nurse for the agency. "This program has been a real asset to me," Rook said. See story.

CRELLIN WATER SYSTEM
NOTICE OF VIOLATION
Surface Water Treatment Technique

The Garrett County Department of Public Utilities is providing the following notice regarding the Crellin Water System. The springs for the water system have been evaluated for protection against surface water influence as required by the Surface Water Treatment Rule (SWTR), as adopted in the Code of Maryland, COMAR 26.04.01, Quality of Drinking Water in Maryland. The spring was determined to be under the direct influence of surface water by the Maryland Department of the Environment. As a result, this source requires additional treatment, such as filtration, or replacement with a protected water source. Federal and state regulations require that the Crellin water System install filtration.

What is the Garrett County Department of Public Utilities doing?

The Crellin Water System disinfects the drinking water that is produced from the spring. The drinking water is tested monthly for coliform bacteria, and results have met state and federal standards.

The Department of Public Utilities is in the process of testing the design for a new water treatment facility. After the pilot test is completed, design for the project will proceed.

What should I do?

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These individuals should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA's Safe Drinking Water Act Hotline (800-426-4791). If you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

What does this mean?

This is not an emergency. This notification is provided to advise Crellin Water customers of the treatment requirements for their water system. Any questions or concerns should be directed to Allen Festerman at 301-387-9141. Please share this information with others that may find it useful.

CHECKER AUTO PARTS 500 REVIEW

Oh, brother!

Kyle Busch wins race, speeds to defense of Kurt

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Avondale, Ariz.

What a bittersweet Sunday it was for the Busch brothers at Phoenix International Raceway.

Just hours after older brother Kurt, the defending Nextel Cup champion, was suspended by his team after an alleged alcohol-related altercation with Arizona police, Kyle Busch won the Checker Auto Parts 500 only to storm out of his winner's interview after challenging the accuracy of the media reports of his brother's predicament.

"I'm behind my brother 100 percent," Kyle Busch said. "Usually things in the media are false."

Asked to elaborate, he walked out only to return later but he still refused to answer questions about his brother's situation and how it affected him other than to label the media reports as "speculation."

"The only things that are there for us to comment on are whatever Kurt Busch releases at a later time," he said.

It was yet another instance this season in which NASCAR's Chase for the Nextel Cup has been overshadowed by issues not involving the title race, which now has boiled down to a two-driver contest between leader Tony Stewart and Jimmie Johnson.

Stewart finished fourth in Sunday's race while Johnson was seventh, which puts him 52 points back going into the season finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway. If Stewart finishes ninth or better, he's the champion regardless of how anyone else finishes.

He reiterated his strategy for next week's season finale and the Chase in general, which is to run each race as if there were no championship at stake.

"We will stick to our game plan the way we have done for 35 races now," he said.

Carl Edwards, third in points, finished sixth in the race but is an almost insurmountable 87 points behind Stewart, while race runner-up Greg Biffle is fourth, 102 points back. The other six championship contenders have been eliminated.

Biffle said he considers himself out of the title race, too.

"We needed to do what we did today — lead the most laps and finish second or win — but those other guys (Stewart, Johnson and Edwards) would have had to have bad days in order to put us in the hunt," he said. "We're certainly not in it anymore."

Edwards, who won back-to-back races at Atlanta and Texas, said his hot streak was a little late getting its spark.

"It's just too bad we have a points deficit we're trying to make up," he said. "We didn't cut into it."

Kyle Busch eventually returned to the press room to discuss his second victory of the season, saying that he tried to block out his emotions over his brother's situation and focus on the task before him.

Having to refocus on races and Chases has been a common thread throughout the Chase, which has seen the points race take a back seat to temper tantrums at New Hampshire, tricky streaks at Dover, multi-car melees at Talladega, tire and track problems at Charlotte and a blockbuster announcement at Kansas about team-ownership limits.

In Busch's case, he not only overcame his emotions associated with his brother's situation, but also recovered from an unscheduled pit stop at mid-race for possible tire problems that put him a lap behind.

He raced his way back onto the lead lap, then took the top spot from Scott Wimmer on Lap 272 thanks in large part to being the first driver in line with four fresh tires after the race's last round of pit stops. He quickly passed Wimmer, who was on worn tires, then saw Biffle, who led a race-high 189 laps, pass him eight laps later.

But Busch charged back, passing Biffle for good with 28 laps remaining.

Earnhardt upbeat despite poor finish

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Avondale, Ariz.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. was among at least four drivers, including his teammate Michael Waltrip, who blew right front tires during Sunday's Checker Auto Parts 500 at Phoenix International Raceway.

Earnhardt's tire let go entering Turn 3 on Lap 118, about 20 laps after he'd put on a fresh set.

"Looking at the tire, it ain't worn out," said Earnhardt, who crashed and finished 40th. "I don't know where the hole came from, or if we ran over something. It's frustrating."

EARNHARDT

Speaking with reporters after the crash, he said he hates to see the season come to an end because he's so upbeat about his team now that he's been reunited with his cousin and former car chief Tony Eury Jr., who now is his crew chief.

"I've just gotten a rhythm where we're going to the track and being fast," he said. "We got a little bad luck, but we've got good cars."

He also commented on the Kurt Busch situation, speaking as someone who, like Busch, drives a car sponsored by an alcohol company (Budweiser). "Hopefully Kurt learns something through this," he said. "And I'm sure that some way or another, somebody will be able to put a positive spin on it."

After missing the cut for the Chase for the Nextel Cup, Jeff Gordon is enjoying a productive rebuilding stretch.

GORDON

His third-place finish at Phoenix comes on the heels of a win at Martinsville on Oct. 23 and a runner-up run at Atlanta the following week. He said success has come in part because he's not in a points race and is free to experiment with his car.

"We did a bunch of restructuring and changed how we set up race cars," he said. "We did drastic things that you can't do when you're in the middle of the season trying to make the Chase or in the Chase.

"It's so easy to do it when you basically have nothing to lose."

Riggs takes blame for mishap

It looked as if Bobby Labonte, who finished a strong fifth in Sunday's race, was to blame for Scott Riggs' spin on Lap 206, but Riggs said appearances were deceiving.

Riggs said he was trying to stay on the track on old tires and wait for a caution period, but he found himself running too slow and in Labonte's way.

"We tried to stay out and be a hero and make something out of it," said Riggs, who finished 38th. "It was not a smart call."

Roush bans Busch from final races

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Avondale, Ariz.

Kurt Busch's reign as Nextel Cup champion has ended. Geoff Smith, Busch's boss at Roush Racing, said Sunday morning at Phoenix International Raceway that the team and sponsors Newell-Rubbermaid and Diageo — the maker of Crown Royal — had decided to suspend Busch for the final two races of the season after his run-in with Arizona police Friday night.

Kenny Wallace drove the No. 97 Ford in Sunday's Checker Auto Parts 500. He finished 18th.

Either Wallace or Roush newcomer Todd Kluever will drive in the season finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway on Sunday. Smith said he's not inclined to let Busch drive for another team at Homestead.

Busch, who already had signed an agreement to drive for Penske Racing South next season, apparently used up any remaining goodwill with Roush Racing, which has stood by him through several public-relations nightmares in the past five years.

BUSCH

"It's the last straw for Roush Racing," Smith said. "We're officially retiring as Kurt Busch's apologists, effective today."

Officials from Roush Racing and NASCAR expressed concern over Busch's behavior during the incident with Maricopa County Sheriff's deputies who stopped him after noticing that he was driving erratically a few miles from the track.

A sheriff's spokesman said Busch initially submitted to a preliminary breath test that confirmed the presence of alcohol, but refused the officer's attempt to administer a standardized sobriety test.

He was taken to a sheriff's facility at the race track, but when a breath-alcohol machine malfunctioned, Busch was given a traffic citation for reckless driving. Lt. Paul Chagolla, a spokesman for the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office, said Busch's behavior during the incident was "inflammatory and uncooperative."

While Busch avoided a serious alcohol violation, his actions were enough to draw a strong response from his team.

"It was the vituperative abusiveness to the officer, coupled with the circumstances of our alcohol sponsorship," Smith said. "Regardless of whatever level of presence (of alcohol) was there while driving, we have some very strict sponsorship rules in place, particularly when we inherited Diageo. We feel very strongly that those rules have been significantly breached."

Roush Racing issued a statement which included an apology to the sheriff's department.

HOW THEY FARED

A brief review of how Chase competitors performed Sunday

1.) Tony Stewart. Finished fourth. He has led for seven weeks since Talladega on Oct. 2 and needs to finish just ninth or better in the season finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway for his second title.

2.) Jimmie Johnson. Finished seventh. He said before the race that he needed to finish several positions ahead of Stewart, but instead he finished seventh, three spots behind the leader, and saw his points deficit grow by 14.

3.) Carl Edwards. Finished sixth. After winning two races in a row, he finished sixth and lost ground to Stewart. His dimming title hopes now rest on both Stewart and Johnson having misfortunes at Homestead.

4.) Greg Biffle. Finished second. He finished a strong second at Phoenix and led the most laps, but he was relying on Stewart and Johnson to stumble. He says he has no realistic chance to overtake the leaders.

5.) Mark Martin. Finished 14th. He's effectively out of the Chase after a 14th at Phoenix. For all practical purposes, his title hopes were crushed in a crash in the third race of the Chase at Talladega, where he wound up 41st.

6.) Ryan Newman. Finished 12th. He took only two tires a third through the race and held his position until the next stop, which put him back among the leaders. He considered 12th an accomplishment in a backup car.

NASCAR

Tony Stewart (20) finished three spots ahead of Jimmie Johnson on Sunday.

7.) Matt Kenseth. Finished 32nd. He ran in the top 10 for most of the first 100 laps, but pit problems put him at the back of the lead lap. He slowed on Lap 182 with ignition problems, losing two laps and dropping to 32nd.

8.) Rusty Wallace. Finished 29th. A stop on Lap 283 for a vibration pushed him to 29th in his next-to-last Cup race. "I'm sure I'll have mixed emotions next week, but we'll try as hard as we can to go out a winner," he said.

9.) Kurt Busch. Did not race. Kenny Wallace was doing a TV spot when he got a call asking him to drive the No. 97 Ford left vacant by Busch's suspension. He finished 18th, but Busch got no points and dropped one spot.

IT'S TIME AGAIN TO HELP...

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing New Winter Clothing For Needy Children

For the ninth year, The Republican newspaper and the Civic Club of Oakland are asking for your help. Without it, many Garrett County children will go cold this winter.

Just what is the WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM?

The Republican's WARM THE CHILDREN PROGRAM is basically neighbors helping neighbors. We here at the paper are asking for monetary donations (tax deductible) from you, the readers. The collected funds are being used to purchase new winter clothing for Garrett County children in need. Because the newspaper administers the program, there are no added fees or overhead costs. Every penny donated is used to buy the winter items.

How are needy children being identified?

A special corps of volunteers is working right now to identify those in need this year. (Please do not call for the service. If you have been selected, you will be notified.)

How will the children's clothing be purchased?

Members of the Civic Club of Oakland are taking the families shopping at Wal-Mart. The children, with the help of their parents, may select their own new coats, hats, sweaters, long johns, jeans, boots, pajamas, or other needed winter items, spending up to $100 per child.

The Civic Club of Oakland is again heading up the volunteer/shopping coordination in the southern part of the county. Betty Ellington is the head coordinator, assisted by several other club members. For the northern part of the county, Lisa Broadwater will continue in her role as the coordinator of shopping at the LaVale Wal-Mart. Many other functions of the program are being handled by Civic Club members, for which the newspaper staff is very grateful. Dora Hanlin has again volunteered to help handle the applications, as she has from the beginning of the program. Her help is invaluable.

THE REPUBLICAN with the GWFC Civic Club of Oakland

To make a donation, please complete the coupon below, cut it out, and mail it along with your tax-deductible contribution to the address noted. All checks should be made out to Warm the Children.

Donations should be postmarked by December 3, 2005. Those collected after December 3 will be saved for next year's campaign.

TV–PIPELINE

'Just Legal' is just over, after a brief run

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Don Johnson

Q: We were so pleased to see Don Johnson in a new series. What happened? We can no longer find it listed. –Jeannie LaCamera, Seattle.

A: Based on the amount of mail we've received on that show, which was titled "Just Legal," one would think the audience for it was pretty big. The WB Network didn't see it that way and canceled the program after just a few weeks. The network has been pouring loads of promotion into one of its other new series, "Related," which now occupies the slot "Just Legal" had been in.

Q: Why was one of the regular actresses dropped from "CSI: NY"? –Brenda Watson, Tampa, Fla.

A: The way Vanessa Ferlito explains it, she simply wanted to be back on the East Coast, closer to her family and friends. Although the CBS show uses the Big Apple as its setting, it's principally filmed in California. The producers accommodated Ferlito and had her character, Aiden, fired from the forensics unit. Anne Belknap ("Medical Investigation") has replaced her as a cast regular.

Q: Why didn't Clarence Gilyard continue his role in the recent "Walker, Texas Ranger" TV movie? And will there be more "Walker" movies? –Bruce Blanco, Baltimore.

A: He actually was in it, albeit briefly. As producer and star Chuck Norris explains it, Gilyard had a personal commitment at the time the movie was being filmed, so Norris was willing to have Gilyard back on board for as long as it could be managed, which turned out to be one day of filming. That's why the movie indicated that the character Trivette was assisting the FBI, thus explaining why he didn't play a bigger part in the story.

As for whether more "Walker" adventures are on the horizon, the jury was still out at this writing. Norris says he wouldn't want to revive his role in a weekly series, but he added that one or two movies per season isn't out of the question if those are wanted.

Q: Are Fred Astaire/Ginger Rogers movies available on DVD, and if so, where might I find them? –Mel Grier, Annapolis, Md.

A: Several of them aren't hard to find at all these days, since Warner Home Video released a boxed set of the legendary dancing duo's titles during the summer. Called "Astaire & Rogers Collection, Volume 1," it includes "Top Hat" (with an audio commentary by Astaire's daughter), "The Berkleys of Broadway," "Shall We Dance," "Follow the Fleet" and "Swing Time."

Loch Lynn Church To Host Project Touched By Love

The Loch Lynn Church of God will host Project Touched by Love, a complimentary Thanksgiving dinner with turkey and all the "trimmings," on Thursday, Nov. 24, from 11:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Guests may dine in or carry out meals.

"The church extends a warm welcome to those who may be spending Thanksgiving alone or due to circumstances may not have the funds to purchase a full-fledged meal," said a church spokesperson.

"Thanksgiving is a time for family, friends, and food," she continued. "Thousands will have traveled many miles to celebrate the holiday with family and friends. On the other hand, for some this is a day just like many others, spent all alone. Others will sit down at their tables, but the turkey and all the trimmings will be missing. Come and be blessed by Project Touched by Love."

The church is located at 121 E. First Avenue in Loch Lynn. For more information, one may call the church office at 301-334-3221 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, or Friday.

Blood Fat Levels May Be Controlled By Medication

Hyperlipidemia is a medical term which refers to abnormally high levels of fast such as cholesterol and triglycerides in the bloodstream. If these levels remain high they can lead to health problems such as coronary artery disease, heart attack, and stroke. Cholesterol combines with blood proteins to form complexes called lipoproteins. Cholesterol carried by low-density lipoprotein (LDL) increases the risk of health problems and often is referred to as "bad cholesterol." Cholesterol carried by high-density lipro-protein (HDL) lowers this risk. HDL is referred to as "good cholesterol.

Medicines that change the levels fo blood fat fall into several categories. Statins including simvastatin, atorvastatin, and others reduce LDL-type cholesterol. Bile acid sequestrants, such as cholestyramine, can be used alone or in combination with the "statins" to lower resistant LDL cholesterol. Nicotinic acid can lower LDL, but it is mainly used to moderate other blood fats such as triglycerides. Ezetimibe helps block dietary cholesterol in the intestine from getting into the bloodstream.

MTN. LAKE PARK WATER SYSTEM NOTICE OF VIOLATION

Surface Water Treatment Technique

The Garrett County Department of Public Utilities is providing the following notice regarding the Mtn. Lake Park Water System. The springs for the water system have been evaluated for protection against surface water influence as required by the Surface Water Treatment Rule (SWTR), as adopted in the Code of Maryland, COMAR 26.04.01, Quality of Drinking Water in Maryland. The spring was determined to be under the direct influence of surface water by the Maryland Department of the Environment. As a result, this source requires additional treatment, such as filtration, or replacement with a protected water source. Federal and state regulations require that the Mtn. Lake Park Water System install filtration.

What is the Department of Public Utilities doing?

The Mtn. Lake Park Water System disinfects the drinking water that is produced from the spring. The drinking water is tested monthly for coliform bacteria and results have met state and federal standards.

The Department of Public Utilities is in the process of testing the design for a new water treatment facility. After the pilot test is completed, design for the project will proceed.

What should I do?

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These individuals should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA's Safe Drinking Water Act Hotline (800-426-4791). If you have specific health concerns, consult your physician.

What does this mean?

This is not an emergency. This notification is provided to advise Mtn. Lake Park Water customers of the treatment requirements for their water system. Any questions or concerns should be directed to Allen Festerman at 301-387-9141. Please share this infonnation with others who may find it useful.

Date of Notice: November 2005

Willow Bark: Used For Pain & Inflammation

Willow bark is from the plant family salicaceae. Willow bark is also known as white willow bark or willow. Willow bark contains substances called salicin glycosides. These are converted into saligenin in the intestine. Saligenin is then converted into salicylic acid in the blood and intestines. Salicylic acid is well known for its analgesic and anti-inflammatory effects. Historically, willow bark has been used to treat headache and muscle pain. More recently, it has been studied for headaches, back pain, and osteoarthritis.

Possible side effects from willow bark include stomach irritation/upset, nausea, vomiting, skin rash, and bloody stools. Willow bark should not be taken with aspirin, since it is also a salicylate. Also, willow bark should not be used by persons who are allergic to aspirin. Willow bark is available as capsules, tablets, powder, teas, and tinctures. Tablets are most commonly used because they reportedly mask the bitter taste of the bark.

Old Idea... New Setting

When the Pilgrims held their first Thanksgiving celebration, it wasn't a new idea. The idea was as old as people's awareness of their dependence on God.

But it was a new setting. A group of people far from home, barely settled on a strange shore, surrounded by dangers real and imagined, facing their first New England winter. A remarkable time and place to say "thank you, God".

Whenever earnest men and women pause to express gratitude to God, it's an old idea. But the setting is always new. For wherever we are, whatever the circumstances surrounding our lives, our faith reaches to the Almighty...realizing anew His power, His love. "Give thanks to the Lord, for He is good; His love endures forever."
(I Chronicles 16:34)

Take time this week to say, "Thank you, God". Worship with your family and friends and remember that first Thanksgiving celebration.

ADVANCE YOUR GOALS

Sometimes the sheer size of a task has a paralyzing effect on us. How do you overcome the blank page or computer screen in front of you when you know you have a twenty-page report to write? The answer is, 'one word at a time.' When I was in graduate school and procrastinating getting started on my dissertation, I was effectively paralyzed by the size and scope of my task, since I knew I had to write roughly two-hundred pages of scholarly material. Sensing what was going on, my advisor suggested that I write a page per day, and this advice worked wonders. I certainly couldn't sit down and just write two hundred pages, but I could write a page a day. The moral of the story here is that doing some small bit every day to advance towards our goal will get us there, no matter how big the goal. Even the journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. And you can always go one more step, which eventually gets us to our goal

That Cat Smell!

Q. I hope you can help me with a big problem — cat urine! First, my older daughter gave me her mattress, which seemed in good shape until a few days after setting up, when the odor of cat urine permeated the guest bedroom. So, outside it went. Will it be salvageable after airing? Second, my younger daughter just moved into a new apartment and one room smells terribly of cat urine. She can't rip out the carpet; what can she do? — Thanks, Betty

A. Your first problem may not be solved by simple airing. Mattresses are thick and spongy and extremely hard to clean, especially when liquids have soaked deeply into them. Unfortunately, I don't think you'll ever get the smell out. Plus it's been sitting outside for a while, and even if it's in a dry area, who knows what else could take up residence inside the mattress? It might be better to dispose of it and purchase a new one.

The second problem — a stinky room — may be fixable. I recently dealt with a similar problem in a commercial office. I purchased a liquid cleaning solution at the pet store designed to break up the enzyme that makes that "cat pee" scent linger for so long. I sprayed the solution over the entire room's carpet and let it dry. There are several brands available; I just picked one at random and tried it, and had very good results.

If the room is really stinky and a little spray bottle won't do it, contact a professional carpet cleaner. He or she will deep-treat the carpet with a similar enzyme solution, reaching any soaked-in urine.

ENERGY SAVING IDEAS

Q. With the price of heating going up so fast, how can I save money on energy around my home this winter?

Just last week, in the space right alongside this column, there was an article about exactly that topic. Some of that text said "...as part of a winterization program – weather stripping around the doors, expanding foam in cracks, insulation in the attic, a new door where rain used to leak into the basement, and energy efficient light bulbs."

The first step toward conserving energy is to take a look around your home and ask yourself a few questions about where the energy is going. Little things that you didn't bother to fix in the summertime can cost you real money in the wintertime. Paying attention is where it all starts.

By far the cheapest and quickest thing you can do to stop wasting energy (and money) is to eliminate drafts. If there were an obvious gaping hole in a wall, you'd patch it. Well, a drafty door that doesn't fit right or doesn't close right is also a big hole – it's just not round-shaped, so people tend not to notice it. But it lets in plenty of cold air and allows the warm air (which you've paid to heat) escape. Even if you just shove an old towel under a door that is drafty, that will be a good start. To do the job right, get a roll of weather stripping. Weather stripping is so cheap and easy to install that there is no reason not to do it. Window frames don't get as much notice as door frames, but when they're loose, they still can leak a lot of air.

Those cans of spray-insulation foam are a good idea too. In a typical door frame, there is a hole cut through the wood where the metal plate for the locking bar is placed. Behind that is a void space, often drafty. A quick shot with a can of spray insulation will seal up the open space behind the plate. You can walk around the house and find a dozen such minor leaks. With a can of spray insulation and a few minutes of effort this time of year, you'll wind up saving lots and lots of dollars over the length of the winter.

If your home has forced-air heating and cooling, remember to change the vent settings before winter. Knowing that hot air rises and cold air falls, during the heating season you want to have the downstairs vents fully open and the upstairs vents nearly closed. The warm air will drift up the stairs and keep the entire house comfortable.

One basic principle of heating efficiently is to heat only what needs to be heated, and not the entire surroundings. An excellent example of this principle at work is the electric blanket: Knowing exactly where you'll be for several hours, why heat the entire rest of the room?

Wearing a sweater around the house saves energy too, because you're much less likely to get a chilly feeling and turn up the thermostat. We're not talking big changes in comfort level here – just a few degrees. That adds up over the entire winter.

There are many other things to do, short of calling in a contractor to make major modifications. A "set-back" thermostat costs about $20, and is easy to install. At night when you're sleeping and in midday when everyone is away (school, work, ...), the indoor temperature is set lower; but in the morning and later in the day (just before folks come home) the temperature goes up. You get to decide how big a temperature difference you want, and at what time of day the settings are to be automatically changed. The U.S. Energy Department estimates that people can save up to 10% that way. You don't notice any discomfort at all, but at the end of the heating season, you'll sure notice the savings.

One way to learn more things that can be done is to attend one of the home-energy saving seminars offered by the large hardware chains like Lowe's and Home Depot on Sunday afternoons.

Dr. Sheahen is a physicist who was educated at MIT. He lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

ENERGY SAVING IDEAS

Q. With the price of heating going up so fast, how can I save money on energy around my home this winter?

Just last week, in the space right alongside this column, there was an article about exactly that topic. Some of that text said "…as part of a winterization program – weather stripping around the doors, expanding foam in cracks, insulation in the attic, a new door where rain used to leak into the basement, and energy efficient light bulbs."

The first step toward conserving energy is to take a look around your home and ask yourself a few questions about where the energy is going. Little things that you didn't bother to fix in the summertime can cost you real money in the wintertime. Paying attention is where it all starts.

By far the cheapest and quickest thing you can do to stop wasting energy (and money) is to eliminate drafts. If there were an obvious big gaping hole in a wall, you'd patch it. Well, a drafty door that doesn't fit right or doesn't close right is also a big hole – it's just not round-shaped, so people tend not to notice it. But it lets in plenty of cold air and allows the warm air (which you've paid to heat) escape. Even if you just shove an old towel under a door that is drafty, that will be a good start. To do the job right, get a roll of weather stripping. Weather stripping is so cheap and easy to install that there is no reason not to do it. Window frames don't get as much notice as door frames, but when they're loose, they still can leak a lot of air.

Those cans of spray-insulation foam are a good idea too. In a typical door frame, there is a hole cut through the wood where the metal plate for the locking bar is placed. Behind that is a void space, often drafty. A quick shot with a can of spray insulation will seal up the open space behind the plate. You can walk around the house and find a dozen such minor leaks. With a can of spray insulation and a few minutes of effort this time of year, you'll wind up saving lots and lots of dollars over the length of the winter.

If your home has forced-air heating and cooling, remember to change the vent settings before winter. Knowing that hot air rises and cold air falls, during the heating season you want to have the downstairs vents fully open and the upstairs vents nearly closed. The warm air will drift up the stairs and keep the entire house comfortable.

One basic principle of heating efficiently is to heat only what needs to be heated, and not the entire surroundings. An excellent example of this principle at work is the electric blanket: Knowing exactly where you'll be for several hours, why heat the entire rest of the room?

Wearing a sweater around the house saves energy too, because you're much less likely to get a chilly feeling and turn up the thermostat. We're not talking big changes in comfort level here – just a few degrees. That adds up over the entire winter.

There are many other things to do, short of calling in a contractor to make major modifications. A "set-back" thermostat costs about $20, and is easy to install. At night when you're sleeping and in midday when everyone is away (school, work, …), the indoor temperature is set lower; but in the morning and later in the day (just before folks come home) the temperature goes up. You get to decide how big a temperature difference you want, and at what time of day the settings are to be automatically changed. The U.S. Energy Department estimates that people can save up to 10% that way. You don't notice any discomfort at all, but at the end of the heating season, you'll sure notice the savings.

One way to learn more things that can be done is to attend one of the home-energy saving seminars offered by the large hardware chains like Lowe's and Home Depot on Sunday afternoons.

Dr. Sheahen is a physicist who was educated at MIT. He lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

SHS JROTC PARTICIPATE IN VETERANS DAY ACTIVITIES – The Southern Garrett High School JROTC Rams Battalion marched in the recent Veterans Parade. The JROTC Color Guard and members of the Rams Battalion participated. The mayor of Oakland met with the cadets as well as several of the veterans that were present that day. The JROTC Color Guard and members of the Rams Battalion also participated in Oakland's Veterans Day Ceremony held at the Oakland Veterans Park. Cadets had an opportunity to meet with several veterans there also. According to LTC Jack Riley (retired), senior instructor, highlights were meeting with the WWII veterans and a Congressional Medal of Honor veteran. Later that day, the JROTC Color Guard opened the Kitzmiller Veterans Day Ceremony in Kitzmiller, pictured below. The mayor of Kitzmiller presented them with a certificate and gave each member a "Kitzmiller" hat.

KITZMILLER SALUTES ITS VETERANS – The town of Kitzmiller recognized its veterans with a Veterans Day ceremony where mayor and retired Navy veteran James Browning opened the program by reading a proclamation by President Bush, and the Southern High School JROTC led the Color Guard ceremony. Among the program's many highlights were a presentation on Vietnam by U.S. Marine Corps veteran James Stewart and the recognition of all veterans present. Pictured from the left are veterans Sonny Stanley, William Evans, Charlie Paugh, Larry Gregg, Roger Welch Martin Harvey, Gail Armstrong, George Brady, Robert Fletcher, Stewart, Bill Brantner, Michael Brantner, and Mayor Browning.

VETERANS WERE OUT IN FORCE for Friday's Veterans Day observance in Oakland, where pledges, prayers, music, and memories were the order of the day's salute. Among those on hand, as shown above, were Vietnam War veteran Dick Friend of Oakland, left, a Distinguished Service Cross recipient, and part-time area resident John Bocca of San Diego, right, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. Pictured below is American Legion Post 71 commander Marvin "Red" Guthrie, shown with World War II Army Staff Sgt. Joe Peck of Oakland. Known to many local residents for his longtime employment as an Oakland mail carrier, Peck served from Oct. 1941 to Oct. 1945 in locales as diverse as Panama, Costa Rica, France, Germany, and Austria, where his division liberated the 18,000 Jewish prisoners of the Gunskirchen-Lager concentration camp. The ceremony was attended by the full gamut of local veterans – men and women; the old, middle aged, and young; those in uniforms and suits, and others in construction worker garb or leather biker gear. Their experiences and opinions may differ, but they all share a common bond of service and sacrifice with past, present, and future soldiers, sailors, and airmen. Oakland Business Helping Operation Christmas Child

The JC Penney catalog store in Oakland is receiving gift-filled shoe boxes for Operation Christmas Child during the project's National Collection Week, Nov. 14-21. Local hours of operation are Monday through Friday 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Operation Christmas Child is a project of Samaritan's Purse, an international Christian relief and evangelism ministry headed by Franklin Graham. The project encourages children, families, churches, and groups to fill empty shoe boxes with toys, school supplies, hygiene items, photos, and personal letters, then hand-delivers them to children worldwide suffering from poverty, war, disease, natural disasters, and terrorism.

"What a blessing to be involved with the ministry of Operation Christmas Child," said Garrett County resident Debbie Welch, who is volunteering as a site coordinator. "It is exciting to see how the Lord will take a shoe box filled with love and use it to make a difference in child's life on the other side of the world."

This is the Oakland store's seventh year as a drop-off site. Last year, it collected 900 gift-filled boxes from Oakland and surrounding area residents and has set a goal of 1,500 boxes for 2005.

More than 7.4 million boxes were collected worldwide last year and distributed to children in more than 90 countries, including the United States, according to Samaritan's Purse. This year's goal is to collect and distribute 7.8 million boxes.

Boxes have been delivered to those living among civil war in the Darfur region of western Sudan; children who survived last September's terrorist attack in Beslan, Russia; those recovering from war in Kosovo and Bosnia; and children whose lives were changed forever by last December's tsunami in India, Sri Lanka, and Indonesia.

"This simple and fun project gives people right here in this community a chance to bring a smile to the face of a child very far away from them," said Mary Damron, Operation Christmas Child West Virginia regional director. "By taking the time to pack these gifts and pray over them as we drop them off to be sent around the world, we want to show hurting children that they are loved, and that they are not forgotten."

For more information about dropping off a gift box, persons may call the catalog store at 301-334-9648. Further information about Operation Christmas Child is available online at samaritanspurse.org.

Rotary Clubs Begin Annual Christmas Drive

The Rotary Clubs of Garrett County (Oakland and Grantsville) recently announced the kick-off of their annual effort to collect items to be distributed to the needy for Christmas. Last year, this effort distributed food as well as gifts of clothing and toys to over 400 families countywide. Gifts and toys are provided for children age 16 and under.

"It is important to note that these 400 families were divided fairly equally throughout the county, with one-third in the southern part of the county, one-third in the central part, and one-third in the northern section," said a spokesperson for the Oakland club (primary sponsor).

Deliveries were made to over 125 families in the Grantsville and Friendsville areas in 2004.

The primary method of obtaining gifts and food for these families is through donations. A series of displays or trees are placed in businesses and other locations throughout the community, with tags indicating what is needed. For example, the tag may read, "small toy fire truck, age 8." Individuals wishing to help may simply remove a tag, purchase the item, attach the tag to the gift, and then place it under the tree from which the tag was removed.

Tags are also provided on all trees in Grantsville to remind people that dollars are also needed to purchase food. The local Rotary will pick up the items and arrange delivery.

Joe Bender of the Grantsville club reported that gift tag trees for the Grantsville area are located at Beachy's Pharmacy, the Grantsville branch of the Ruth Enlow Library, Penn Alps Restaurant, First United Bank & Trust, First People's Community Federal Credit Union, M & T Bank, and Grantsville Comfort Inn.

Anyone who cannot obtain a tag and would still like to help is asked to call Bender at 814-662-4366.

"Monetary donations are also greatly appreciated and needed," Bender said.

Checks should be made payable to the Grantsville Rotary Christmas Project and mailed to Grantsville Rotary, P.O. Box 358, Grantsville, MD 21536, or dropped off at any tree location.

"The collection period runs only through Dec. 6 (approximately three weeks)," Bender said. "Therefore, those who are interested should act now."

Collections throughout the county will be assembled, sorted into family units, and delivered to homes on Dec. 10.

THE ANNUAL ROTARY CLUB PROJECT has begun in Grantsville to collect Christmas donations for the needy. Tree displays have been placed in various area businesses, and persons are encouraged to make donations through Dec. 6. Pictured above, from left, are Mark Diehl of the Grantsville Rotary Club and Joyce Mauet of Penn Alps Restaurant. Similar displays can be found throughout the area. Photo by Marla Reams. See story.

Parents Must Prove Special Ed. Plan Inadequate, Court Rules

by Brooke Howell
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON – A Supreme Court ruling in a Maryland case Monday has mixed implications for those who want the best education for students with disabilities, an education expert said.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that parents must prove that a school's individual education plan, called an IEP, for their child is inadequate.

"The burden of proof in an administrative hearing challenging an IEP is properly placed upon the party seeking relief," wrote Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in a 6-2 majority decision.

The ruling is "positive and negative," said George Giuliani, vice president of the National Association of Special Education Teachers.

The federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act Amendment of 1997, which was designed to ensure that students with disabilities receive an appropriate education, "relies heavily on the expertise of school districts to meet its goals," O'Cormor wrote for the court.

"The court is saying that we have to assume that teachers are right," Giuliani said. "I think that's a good thing to hear from the court."

Still, he said, "it places an unfair burden on parents. They may look at this and say it's not worth the fight."

That concern was echoed by Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg in her written dissent.

And ultimately, that's what led the parents of Brian Schaffer, a student in Montgomery County Public Schools, to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Talking to other parents in similar situations, mother Jocelyn Schaffer has said she found "case after case of people feeling that they just weren't being heard."

The case began in 1998 when Jocelyn and Martin Schaffer, with the help of experts, concluded that their son, Brian, who struggled with a severe auditory processing disorder, would not be able to achieve academic success under an individualized education plan designed by the schools. Brian's ability to understand what is being said when there is a lot of background noise, such as in a crowded classroom, was sharply diminished.

In his seventh-grade year, the Schaffers realized the private school they had been sending him to was unable to provide him with the services he needed, and they transferred him to a public school in Montgomery County.

The county put together an IEP, which must include information about the student's disabilities, current abilities, goals for the school year, and concrete plans to reach those goals.

The Schaffers were unhappy with Brian's IEP because it required him to be placed in a larger, more crowded classroom than the one where he was already having problems.

They followed the procedures to challenge the school and in the meantime put Brian in another private school.

During their legal struggles, the schools eventually created an IEP that satisfied the Schaffers, so in 2003 Brian graduated from Walter Johnson High School. He now attends college in another state.

Schaffer said she and her husband were lucky to be able to send Brian to a private school and hire lawyers to pursue the case, but that other families might not be able to do the same.

Giuliani said that this is a likely problem with the court's ruling.

"At some point parents are going to say: 'Is this really worth the battle and can I afford to do it?'" he said. "It really puts them at a disadvantage."

Montgomery County Schools were pleased with the decision, with Superintendent Jerry Weast calling it a "victory for special education teachers in Montgomery County . . . who work hard every day to provide the best possible education for students with disabilities."

A Message from Larry Gnegy,
Candidate for Sheriff of Garrett County

Dear Friends,

As a native of Garrett County, I have developed a love for this county and a desire to serve in whatever capacity necessary to make this a better and more beautiful place to live. More than 30 years ago, I chose law enforcement as my career.

Today, as a Republican candidate for the office of Sheriff of Garrett County, I hope to continue my efforts for the citizens of this county as your public servant.

Having served more than 25 years with the Garrett County Sheriff's Office and during that time, working in virtually all fields of law enforcement and corrections, I feel as though I have grown up within this department and I have gained a great deal of knowledge and experience from each of the five different Sheriffs under whom I have served. Over the next several months, I hope to meet you in your civic groups and with many of you individually on your doorstep.

Your support in any form will be greatly appreciated. Financial contributions may be made payable to the address listed below. Thank you.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

BUCKWHEAT CAKE SUPPER

A buckwheat/pancake and sausage dinner sponsored by the Bittinger 4-H Club will be served this Friday, Nov. 18, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Price is $6 for adults, for children ages 6-12 $3, and free for children under 6. Also included will be sausage gravy and drinks. All proceeds will benefit hurricane relief.

Every morning between 5 and 6:30 a.m. I wonder who the drivers are on Rock Lodge Road so early in the morning. Most of them are driving eastbound, but a few are passing the other way. Maybe some Bittinger residents are working a night shift somewhere. The sight of them is almost welcome as the sun rises. Most morning daybreaks come about either about a half hour after the first headlights go past. But it is still several hours until full light.

I always believed that my house was too far from the woods for any bear to come close to it. However, the other night Boo was outside late and she went crazy. I never heard her bark that hard. Not even Sally Poholsky inspires that kind of barking. Boo knows Sally is afraid of her because another black Lab once attacked her. I think Boo just enjoys seeing someone take her seriously. But the nighttime barking was mean business. I guess it works, because unlike the Southerlys' porch, my shriveled jack-o-lanterns are still there. Another bear took apart Shane Buckel's charcoal grill, trying to get to the leftover grease in the bottom of it.

CONSORTIUM GRADUATES READY TO TACKLE JOB WORLD – Members of the Microsoft Office 2000 class at the Western Maryland Consortium in Oakland received their certificates recently. "Two of these students will complete their internships at the Oakland Towne Restaurant and the Overlook Judy Center at the beginning of next month, and the training they and their classmates have received in all the programs of the Microsoft Office Suite, plus Intuit QuickBooks accounting software, would make them excellent candidates for any local employer," said class instructor Terese Walters. Businesses that hire one of the students shown above can qualify for a 50 percent wage rebate with the Consortium's On-the-Job Training (OJT) assistance program. Pictured from left, in the front row, are Jeanne Pleuger, Heather Lilter, and Kristen Michaels, and in the back row are Carol Umbal, Michelle O'Brien, Samantha Davis, Eileen Buckel, and Walters. For information persons may call Walters at 301-334-8136.

It is true that sometimes bears are a bit of a nuisance, but still some people like Sheila and myself are glad they are still around after the bear-hunting season. I certainly enjoy telling my city friends that I had a bear visitor. I would hate to think people totally tamed our little piece of wilderness here in civilized Maryland. Our neck of the woods is a treasure for all Marylanders. I believe, along with Sheila, that we should limit bear permits to Garrett County citizens. It is a special event to encounter a bear around here. No one saw our white stag since last deer season, but no one will admit to killing it.

It is a miracle that bear hunters did not shoot Boo, as she is big and fat enough and weighs close to a hundred pounds. I will have to tie a blaze ribbon on her collar before deer hunting season. In spite of her many bad habits, I can't imagine living without her. When I go out [illegible] she gives me a big hero welcome when I come home.

My mother's little white lap dog, Pippie, is in heaven now because her mistress came home from a long stay in the hospital and now she doesn't want to let her out of her sight. Believe it or not, the stay in the hospital for eight days took enough out of her that she has stopped running around. She doesn't do much but lie around in bed or on the couch recuperating. Pippie does not leave her side. I doubt she will go hungry, as her family sees that she has something to eat. Dot Teets stopped by [illegible] Monday bringing [illegible] and salad from lu[illegible] at the education building following the Women of [illegible] ELCA church meeting.

Last weekend [illegible] a visit from Mary (Ru[illegible]) Brenneman and her [illegible]ster June Opel from Alaska, bringing me delicious banana bread.

Steve and Linda Sweinberger of Root Beachy Road hosted a small birthday party for me on Sunday evening. Besides Linda and Steve and their teenage kids, Jack and Caroline DuBose of Grantsville attended it. Good food, good company, and some good presents. I don't like going out after dark, especially when my kids are at my house, but I must seize any opportunity for some kind of social life. An invitation to almost anywhere is too rare to ignore.

The girls' volleyball team of Northern High School held its seasonal banquet at Uno Restaurant Monday evening. My Meredith picked up a "Minds in Motion" award. To qualify for that award, an athlete must maintain at least an 87% average in schoolwork. Actually, Mere's midterm report was nothing but A's in all subjects. If I average it out in my head, her GP average is about 97.

So volleyball and band season are finished and I may have more time with my daughters. Speaking of my daughters, Claire will be home from West Virginia University break this weekend. WVU will have a much longer break than we had at Univ. of Maryland during the 1970s. I [illegible] nephews and nieces will only be off from Wednesday to Sunday. One year when in college, we had a huge snowstorm of about three feet of snow, which prevented us going back in time for our Monday classes.

I blissfully fell asleep to the sound of rain instead of howling winds. We do need some more rain before the ground gets frozen. I wish I knew why Rock Lodge spring is still not running, and until it does I will not feel good about it. I am afraid it is due to the new heavy development above it.

Speaking of development, the pink and orange flags in the hayfield on the late Jimmy Glotfelty farm mean it is being subdivided. It is a very pretty locality in the summer, spring and autumn, but the people who plan to build there will have a bad shock soon when winter sets in and the wind and snow closes the road and fills the fields with snow. Nowhere south of the Mason-Dixon line is there worse arctic weather than in that field. If you can get through Rock Lodge Road in that area in a snowstorm you always count it as a miracle. In my lifetime I have seen many times 20-foot snow drifts.

It is sad to see another wonderful beautiful farm fall to unstoppable development. There is not much money in farming, but plenty of people are getting rich by developing our last open spaces. Garrett County is not anymore "Maryland's Best Kept Secret." Money makes the world turn, but if we destroy the entire world, nothing will be left to turn.

During last Sunday's worship service at St. John's, Meadow Mountain, Pastor Mitchell gave a blessing for Lud and Doris Kubli's 5th wedding anniversary. Their daughters and Doris' sisters were on hand.

Pastor Jim and Norma are looking forward to a visit of their son from New Philadelphia, Ohio. They hope nothing like bad weather will prevent the visit, which is unpredictable at this time of the year.

Bittinger Lutheran Parish blessing funds for December will go to hurricane relief.

A pancake/sausage dinner will be held at the McHenry fire hall this Saturday, Nov. 19, from 5 to 8 p.m. Proceeds will go to Bolivia missionary, Derick Workman. Anyone wishing to make a contribution is asked to call Sally.

Beulah Moon recently spent a week visiting with her grandson James and his wife. She especially enjoyed her great grandsons Caleb and Benjamin. James is a medical rescue pilot with the Virginia State Police. Beulah was honored with a family dinner at the home of Jay Moon and family, Finzel.

Farming On The Mountaintop

Women Elected To Local Farm Bureau Board

Elections were held recently for the Garrett County Chapter of the Maryland Farm Bureau. The election marked the first time in history that women were chosen as board members. They are Kristen Enlow and Terri Rodeheaver. Also elected to the board was Delvin Mast.

Outgoing board members are Gary Berkebile, Brooks Hamilton and Hoover Meyers.

One new officer was also elected for 2006, as Donald Ringer was named vice president. Terms did not yet expire for Delmer Yoder, president, and Paul Miller, secretary/treasurer.

In women's committee elections, Nancy Berkebile was named chair, while Terri Rodeheaver was chosen as co-chair. Other newly elected members are Joan Dixon, Lori Schmuck, Nancy Jane Bernard and Kay Steyer. Other committee members and volunteers are JoAnn Ringer, Carla Miller, Alta Birkby, and Joy Fratz.

State President Attends

The Maryland Farm Bureau president also attended the annual election meeting. Earl "Buddy" Hance reported about testifying before the House Committee on Resources last month in opposition to the Kelo Decision by the Supreme Court, stating that it "opens a whole new avenue" for developers to use local governments and eminent domain to force farmers off their land.

"We cannot understand – nor can we support – our land being taken for the profit of private corporations," Hance said.

The Maryland Farm Bureau has initiated a Stop Taking Our Property campaign. Hance noted that the key elements to the campaign include educating the public about the Kelo decision and its impacts, and working to achieve state laws prohibiting the use of eminent domain for private economic development.

"Congress does have the authority and responsibility to determine how our tax dollars are spent," Hance said. "Using federal funds to help municipalities take from the poor and give to the rich adds insult to injury to those who work hard for themselves and their families."

Superintendent Present

Also in attendance was Dr. Wendell Teets, Garrett County superintendent of schools, who thanked the Farm Bureau for its funding of the "Ag in the Classroom" trailer. The bureau covers the expenses for the trailer to come to Garrett County and visit the elementary schools to provide an agriculturally related educational experience for the children in the county.

Farm Bureau Activities

Other recent activities of the local farm bureau included building a new ice cream booth at the Garrett County fairgrounds. The booth is the major fundraising vehicle for the bureau. This year [illegible] gallons of ice cream were sold at the booth.

The local chapter also paid out $1,500 in scholarships in 2005. They were awarded through the Miss Garrett County Farm Bureau (farm queen) competition.

The bureau also awards savings bonds to youth exhibiting the county-bred grand and reserve grand champion market steers, swine, lambs, and goats at the fair. The organization supports this program, which was started to encourage youth exhibiting livestock to buy their project animals from the county-based farmers. It is a way to recognize the quality of the local agricultural products, and opens up another market for county livestock producers.

Kristen Enlow, newly elected board member, and Becky Berkebile, Miss Garrett County Farm Bureau, represent the local Farm Bureau on the Garrett County Board of Education's Advisory Committee on Education.

Resolutions

Several resolutions were also recently passed by the local bureau. They include support of the action to limit government's power to use eminent domain to transfer land from a private owner to another private entity for the purpose of economic development, support of the Oakland bypass, and support of increasing the weight limit on tank trucks hauling bulk milk.

Farm Bureau Philosophy

The Maryland Farm Bureau is a private, non-profit organization that depends on the active participation of over 13,800 member families that belong to the state's 23 county Farm Bureaus. The American Farm Bureau Federation represents more than 4.7 million member families in over 2,800 counties.

Farm Bureau's purpose is to increase net farm income and improve the quality of life by providing a legislative voice, increasing public understanding, and promoting member involvement.

The organization's vision statement reads, "Maryland Farm Bureau shall be recognized as the leading voice of Maryland agriculture and the predominant force in agriculture policy development. Maryland Farm Bureau will be regarded as the most credible source of information and the strongest advocate of safe, environmentally responsible, and economically sound food and fiber production."

THANKING THE BOARD — Dr. Wendell Teets, Garrett County superintendent of schools, attended a recent meeting of the Garrett County Chapter of the Maryland Farm Bureau to offer his thanks for their funding of the "Ag in the Classroom" trailer, which visits elementary schools throughout the county.

Maryland Farmers Doing Their Part To Save Chesapeake Bay

ANNAPOLIS – Agriculture is Maryland's single largest land use, and according to the Maryland Department of Agriculture, farmers are committed to protecting the Chesapeake Bay. For more than two decades they have spent millions of dollars of their own money, in addition to spending countless hours of labor, to match strong state and federal conservation funding. They will continue to incorporate soil conservation and water quality measures into their businesses while addressing their two greatest priorities – the availability of farmland and access to markets or profitability.

"During a series of listening sessions this summer leading up to Governor Ehrlich's forum on the future of agriculture in February, hundreds of farmers across the state told us that high land prices and limited markets were threatening to drive them off their land," said Agriculture Secretary Lewis R. Riley. "Finding solutions to these issues is key to protecting the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries. As reinforced by the Chesapeake Bay Foundation in its State of the Bay report, 'well managed agricultural land provides many more environmental benefits than developed land.' At a time when development pressure may be at its greatest, we need to find ways to keep farmers on the land for the benefit of the Bay."

Riley says that Maryland's agricultural conservation accomplishments are many and include:

•Since 1984, farmers have spent $11 million of their own money to match $90 million in government cost share funding to install more than 20,000 water quality best management practices on their farms – almost three a day each and every day of the year for more than 20 years.

•In 25 years, the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation has permanently preserved almost 250,000 acres of priority farmland for farming, with a public investment of $333 million. This is the greatest ratio of farmland preserved to total land mass by any state.

•Under Governor Ehrlich, the most cost-share funding ever for winter cover crops was allocated, and the Bay Restoration Fund has created a stable funding source, causing farmers to sign up for the program in record numbers. With changes to the program that may allow harvesting, it is expected that even more farmers will participate, possibly creating a market for alternative fuels such as barley for ethanol.

•With contributions of more than $1.2 million from the state and each of the poultry companies, more than $300 million pounds of chicken litter have been transported over six years to areas where it can be used safely. New technologies and markets to use poultry litter and other animal manures are promising and may soon reduce the volume of nutrients while providing profit for farmers.

•After changes in the Water Quality Improvement Act were approved by the legislature and signed into law by Governor Ehrlich last year, nearly 80 percent of farm acreage is now being managed under nutrient management plans.

The federal government recognizes these conservation accomplishments. More than 50 percent of Maryland farmers achieved the highest assistance rate from the Conservation Security Program (CSP), a federal program that provides funds for the farmers who go the extra mile for conservation. This level was the highest in the nation, and more farmers in Maryland qualified in their first year of eligibility than any other state in the Northeast.

"Incorporating best management practices such as these into a farming operation takes time, planning, and technical expertise," said Secretary Riley. "Any increase in actions, such as those proposed by CBF, needs to be practical, strategic, and increased over time, not all at once. Maryland has a strong record of reducing agricultural nitrogen and phosphorus loads to improve water quality, and our efforts will expand as profitable, science-based techniques and technologies become available. Farmers understand that the Bay did not get in its current condition overnight, and they are committed to the restoration effort for the long haul. They remain among the strongest stewards of the land and will continue to build on their accomplishments with prioritized resources and profitable markets."

Farm Service Agency Update

The Farm Service Agency recently released a brief summary of several programs. To learn more about FSA programs and to obtain more details, persons may visit the local FSA office or visit online at www.fsa.usda.gov.

Spotchecks by FSA

All CCC-502s (Farm Operating Plan for Payment Eligibility Review) are subject to spot-check through the end-of-year review process. If selected for a spot check, producers will be asked to submit proof of their contribution to the operation, such as seed, fertilizer, and chemical bills, land lease agreements, equipment lists, canceled checks for paid labor, and any other items the Farm Service Agency county committee determines are necessary.

The producer is required to provide these items for the spot check so that the FSA county committee can make a determination that the farming operation is actually being performed as was stated on the applicable CCC-501 or CCC-502 that was originally completed.

2006 DCP Sign-Up

Producers have until June 1, 2006, to enroll in the 2006 Direct and County Cyclical Payment Program without paying a late fee. Applications accepted through Sept. 30, 2006, will require a $100 late fee. Producers can sign up at their service center or online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/egov/edcp_default.htm.

Applying for DCP Online

To access the online service, producers must have an active USDA eAuthentication Level 2 account. This requires filling out an online registration form at http://www.eauth.egov.usda.gov, followed by a visit to the local USDA service center for identity verification.

Farm Bureau Appoints New Administrator

Hollingsworth has been in the Farm Bureau since 1975, and currently serves as director of the Farm Services Division of the Indiana Farm Bureau.

He first served as regional field representative, then was named Young Farmer Program coordinator in 1978. In 1989, he was named director of the education department, with responsibility for the Young Farmer Program, youth activities, and leadership development. He has been in his current position since 1994.

Hollingsworth's honors include the FFA outstanding service award and the Honorary American FFA Degree. He was also named a John J. McCloy Fellow in Agriculture. He is a 1971 graduate of Purdue University.

Farm Bureau –

The Voice of Agriculture

by Terri Rodeheaver

Today's edition of The Republican includes coverage of the recent happenings within our county Farm Bureau chapter. These happenings might be of interest to those involved in agriculture, and perhaps some folks from across the county in general. But among the issues is something known as the Kelo Ruling. The Farm Bureau refers to itself as the voice of agriculture, and right now that Voice of Agriculture needs to be shouting "Stop!" at the top of its lungs.'

In June 2005, the Supreme Court ruled against the rights of private property owners in the case of Kelo versus City of New London (Conn.). In short, this ruling paved the way for private property to be seized for the purpose of giving developers access to the property to facilitate the development of new homes, office buildings, and retail space. The city of New London argued that this development would result in greater tax revenue and more jobs for the city.

Under the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, the government may not take private property for public use without just compensation. Historically, the court has interpreted this wording to mean that the "taking" of property can occur only to facilitate the development of resources geared for public use, such as schools, hospitals, highways, etc. These types of projects are intended to benefit society as a whole. The significance of this ruling is that it paves the way for local governments to support the acquisition of private property under eminent domain, transfer it to other private interests, and then benefit from the tax revenue from the development that was not available from the property under its original ownership. Because agricultural land is generally taxed at a lower, if not the lowest, tax rate available, it becomes highly susceptible to seizure under eminent domain in light of the Kelo ruling.

The Kelo ruling has generated outrage among farmers from across the state. If left unchallenged, this ruling represents a real threat to a farmer's ability to retain land during a time when development pressures across Maryland threaten to destroy agricultural land. On other occasions, I have commented about the current state of affairs in our own county, as the complexion of Garrett County's landscape changes at what I describe as a "break-neck" pace. So what are we to do?

Fortunately, in response to the Kelo ruling, a number of states have already passed legislation to better protect private property. To date, Maryland is not one of those states. However, Maryland's Farm Bureau is not silent on this issue. In late October, Earl Hance, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau, testified to a Congressional committee on the matter. The American and Maryland Farm Bureau organizations have developed the STOP (Stop Taking Our Property) campaign, which is geared at getting legislation passed at the state and national levels that would discourage local efforts to seize private lands for use by other private interests. On Nov. 7, the House of Representatives passed legislation that will address the concerns being raised in response to the Kelo ruling. This legislation will move on to the Senate.

So, if you are concerned, now is the time to act. Pick up your pen or pick up your phone and let your elected officials know how you feel about this threat to the rights of private property owners. Get involved with and support the efforts of Farm Bureau. If you have hesitated to join, not being clear about what benefit you might reap from your membership, here is your answer. Like any organization, it is only as effective as its members. To our state and national Farm Bureau organization – thanks for your efforts to date, and keep up the good work. To our county Farm Bureau – this is a call to action. To our local, state, and federal elected officials – act now in support of legislation to protect private land holdings; from this voter's perspective, your job depends on it.

Election Period Open For FSA Co. Committees

Michael R. Kozier, executive director for USDA's Farm Service Agency in Garrett County, recently announced that the election period for the FSA county committees began Friday, Nov. 4, and is open through Dec. 5.

"County committees help administer federal farm programs at the local level," Kozier said. "It is vital that FSA committees represent a cross-section of producers in each community. I encourage all eligible producers, especially minorities and women, to make a difference by voting in this year's FSA county committee elections."

FSA county committees help ensure that FSA agricultural programs serve the needs of local producers. Committees provide input on commodity price support loans and payments, conservation programs, disaster payments for some commodities, and other farm disaster assistance. FSA committees operate within official regulations designed to carry out federal laws. Most committees consist of three to five members, and may have one or more appointed advisors to further represent the interests of minority and women farmers and ranchers.

Agricultural producers who participate or cooperate in any FSA program and are of legal voting age may vote. A person supervising and conducting the farming operations on an entire farm, but not of legal voting age, may also vote.

Ballots were mailed to eligible farmers, ranchers, and other agricultural producers on Nov. 4. Eligible producers should contact the Garrett County office if they do not receive a ballot. All ballots must be returned to the voter's FSA office or be postmarked by Dec. 5.

For additional information, persons may contact the office at 301-334-6954.

The candidate receiving the most votes serves a three-year term as the elected county committee member. The person receiving the second-most votes serves a three-year term as the first alternate, and the candidate receiving the third-most votes serves as second alternate for three years.

Approximately one-third of the nearly 8,000 committee seats nationwide are up for election annually. Newly elected committee members and alternates will take office on Jan. 1, 2006.

Producers can learn more about FSA county committees by contacting a local FSA office, or online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/.

The Role Of Organic Matter In Soil Quality

by Chad Backlew,
District Conservationist of the Natural Resources Conservation Service

Organic matter consists of the chemical compounds in soil that are derived from decaying plant material and animal waste. By contrast, the components of the soil that are minerals, commercial fertilizers, and salts are inorganic, because most of these minerals were not directly present in the soil as a result of decaying matter that was once living.

Organic matter can be present in soil from decaying plant roots, above-ground growth that has fallen to the soil surface, fallen leaves, animal wastes, green manures, compost, and crop residues. Typically, organic matter consists of the carbohydrates, structural carbohydrates, and proteins from plant and animal matter that are being broken down by the microorganisms that live in the soil. Beneficial soil organisms help to break down organic matter and provide the increased soil quality functions, including better water-holding capacity, reduced drought, reduced soil erosion, and better nutrient-holding capacity.

Increased organic matter improves the tilth of soil, because organic matter levels increase the aggregation of soil particles. As organic matter is degraded by soil organisms, gummy substances are created that help soil particles bind together in clumps. The clumping increases the permeability of the soil to precipitation. The soil soaks up a greater percentage of rainfall with higher organic matter levels, and less runoff and discharge to streams occurs. The increased permeability also reduces drought of the soil in summer rainfalls, as more of the rainfall soaks into the soil before runoff occurs.

Increased organic matter also reduces the erodibility of the soil. Soil with enough organic matter to form aggregates is less likely to be dislodged by precipitation than the same soil texture with less organic matter. The increased permeability of the soil reduces the amount of runoff that occurs, and reduces the chance for runoff to carry away soil particles.

Organic matter in the soil also helps to retain nutrients. The nutrients in organic matter itself are typically slow-releasing. Most of the nitrogen in the soil is stored in the organic matter. The nutrients stored in organic matter are stable and may become plant-available only after soil micro-organisms have broken down the organic matter.

Organic matter is a reservoir of many of the nutrients in the soil in other ways as well. It also binds with the free nutrients and minerals in the soil, and increases the nutrient-holding capacity of the soil.

As land managers, there are several practices that can help increase the organic matter content of soils. Leaving crop residues on the soil after harvest is one of the best ways to add organic matter to the soil. Crop residue remaining on the soil surface also helps to intercept the precipitation over the winter months, and reduce the amount of soil that is dislodged into runoff.

A winter cover crop also helps to stabilize the soil over winter, and can act as a green manure if the cover crop is not harvested. By tilling under or spraying the cover crop in spring, the organic matter that the crop produces is added to the soil.

Reduced tillage intensity also helps add or preserve soil organic matter levels. The more the soil is tilled, the greater the rate that the organic matter is broken down by soil organisms. Frequent, intensive tillage may result in several of the soil nutrients becoming plant-available before plants can uptake them, and nutrients may be lost. Tillage intensity may be reduced by increasing the number of years of hay in the crop rotation, or by using less conventional tillage.

Increased soil organic matter is one major reason why long-term-no-till can be beneficial in the long run. Organic matter levels in no-till fields is typically higher than that in conventionally tilled fields, because the organic matter that accumulates is better retained.

Persons with questions about how to manage soil organic matter may telephone the Garrett Soil Conservation District at 301-334-6951, or visit at 1916 Maryland Highway, Suite C, Mtn. Lake Park.

RELATIONSHIP ADVICE!

Why are realty professionals called "agents?" What is the meaning of the term "agent" in the context of real estate?

Real estate is practiced under the "Law of Agency," in which one party – the agent – represents the interests of another – the principal. The association is termed an "agency relationship."

As the sellers' agent, the representative acts on the sellers' behalf, with their best interests in mind, to locate a buyer. The buyers must be treated honestly and fairly, but they are not "represented" by that agent. The sellers' agent is always faithful to the sellers' best interests (but not necessarily those of the buyer).

In the past, most buyers were not represented by an agent – they made their buying decisions using factual information presented to them by the sellers or their agent. Because of the increasingly complicated nature of real estate transactions, however, "buyer agency" has become more common. To gain representation in their purchase, buyers may choose an agent to represent their interests and fulfill the obligation to faithfully serve them.

What's the real message about agency? Both buyers and sellers should know whether they are represented and by whom. To find out, ask the agent(s), "Who are you representing in this transaction?" Inform yourself and make confident decisions by learning the facts about agency relationships before you buy or sell.

If you'd like to buy or sell a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

Willard has also served on the board of directors of the Clear Mountain Bank (formerly the Terra Alta Bank) since the 1960s, and he continues to be one of the community's active advocates of the Brookside Volunteer Fire Department and the Union Ambulance Squad in Aurora."

Wind Revenue Could Fund Two New Initiatives

The Garrett County board of commissioners and several other local officials are in the "early stages" of discussing proposals on how to make use of tax revenue the county expects to gain if and when Clipper Wind power places its 101 MW wind, 40-turbine electricity generating facility along Backbone Mountain. The county projects an additional $800,000 to $1 million in personal property tax revenue could to be added to the tax base initially – if the facility is built – with depreciation eventually drawing that figure down to the $600,000 later in the facility's projected 20-30 year lifespan.

Officials believe the money could be used to fully fund a proposed education initiative that would guarantee every graduate of Northern and Southern high schools a free two-year education at Garrett College, while also funding the operations of a new county Parks and Recreation Department that would manage and maintain park facilities located outside the state and town networks.

"The wind turbines would be a public utility that would pay a personal property tax," county administrator Monty Pagenhardt said as he explained the motivation for the education initiative. "We could use that money for a number of things, but one of the commissioners' top priorities is providing jobs for Garrett County residents. Everyone knows our unemployment rate is down, but we still have a problem with the skills base of our labor pool. Our local residents need better skills to compete for jobs, and their better skills would draw companies that pay higher wages."

The educational initiative was first conceived of by Economic Development director Jim Hinebaugh "two or three years ago," he said. "I discussed it with GIVING THANKS FOR... GIANT FROSTED MINI-WHEATS? It's a snowy Thanksgiving in Garrett County this year, with some on the ground and more to fall. No matter how one feels about the wintry blanket, though, the population on the mountaintop, though chilly, has much for which to be thankful. A giving community resides here, abounding in art and family, security and fun; ready to express opinions, offer ideas, and work together — when we're not fighting, of course. There are problems, as in every other place in the world, but in general, it is a fine place to live a life. Thanks to you, our readers, for your continued support of this newspaper. May you and all you love share a Thanksgiving of peace, warmth, and good food. Photo by John McEwen.

Obstetrics Care To Continue At Garrett Co. Memorial Hospital

The obstetrics department at Garrett County Memorial Hospital is "alive, well, and will continue to operate well into the future," announced Charlene Bennett this week, nurse manager for the Family Centered Maternity Suite at the hospital. The department is enduring, she said, thanks to members of the community who are continuing to patronize the facility.

"Residents may remember that the malpractice insurance issues during 2004 had put obstetrical services in Garrett County at great risk," Bennett said. "However, thanks to outstanding community response — letters to their legislators — the situation did receive some action at the legislative level. Since the initial crisis, hospital administration and area physicians offering obstetrical services have continued to work together to ensure the long-term viability of OB services at OCMH."

Babies are being delivered at GCMH by Dr. Ken Buczynski and Dr. Sotiere Savopolous, who are both accepting new patients. Additionally, GCMH administration is actively recruiting new doctors.

"Our goal is to maintain maternity care for members of our community as well as the care required for all phases of their lives," Bennett said.

For more information about the Family Centered Maternity Suite or other departments at GCMH, persons may call 301-533-4000.

Blaze Claims Life Of Elderly Swanton Resident Late Sunday

Local volunteer firefighters battled a pair of structure blazes this week, one of which resulted in the death of a 94-year-old Swanton man.

Personnel from the Deer Park, Oakland, Bittinger, and Kitzmiller fire departments were called to the residence of Carl G. Sweitzer, 3767 Swanton Road, at 11:41 p.m. Sunday. Upon their arrival they found the 10' x 12' wood-frame rustic cabin ablaze. It took only about 10 minutes to bring the fire under control, but the body of Mr. Sweitzer was found in a chair inside.

According to a report from the Maryland State Fire Marshal's Office, the fire originated in the area of a woodstove; however, the exact cause is still under investigation. There was no smoke alarm found in the cabin.

The body was taken to the office of the chief medical examiner in Baltimore for an autopsy. (See Page A-6 for Mr. Sweitzer's obituary.)

The material loss to the house and contents was estimated by investigators to be $25,000.

Also called to the scene was the county air cascade unit, housed at the Deep Creek VFC fire hall, and the Southern Rescue Squad.

Because the house was located adjacent to the railroad tracks, CSX stopped train traffic during the incident, according to the Garrett County Office of Emergency Management.

Volunteers from the Accident and Friendsville VFDs were called to a

Bumble Bee Property Resident Asks GC Officials To Up Offer For Property

Bumble Bee Road resident Floyd Ellis asked the Garrett County commissioners this week to increase their offer to purchase his property to $185,000. Since the Garrett County Airport expansion project began about four years ago, the county has bought four properties near the facility. The Ellis site is the last one needed.

"I am perfectly happy where I am, and since you are proposing that I move, I think this is a reasonable request and equitable compensation to me," Ellis said.

His property was appraised in November 2003 at $76,000 and in April 2004 at $88,500. Ellis was also offered an additional $61,400 (maximum) for reimbursement of costs such as moving. He believes, however, that his property is worth more, given the increase in property values since 2004.

The county's most recent offer, made in August 2005, for Ellis's 1.45-acre parcel with a 1987 mobile home (728 square feet) is $161,626. The offer consists of $100,226 for the property, plus the additional $61,400. This price is in line with what was paid to another home owner in the airport property buyout, according to Gary Mallich, director of General Services.

The $100,226 figure is $11,726, or 13.25 percent, above the appraised fair market value of the property, the commissioners noted in their meeting with Ellis on Tuesday.

The county, Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), and the Maryland Aviation Administration have been sharing the cost of the property purchases. But the FAA will not pay more than the appraised fair market value of a property. The county, therefore, is solely responsible for the additional $11,726 that it offered Ellis in August.

He would like the commissioners to forego the reimbursement fee and offer him a lump sum of $185,000. This would be $35,100 above the FAA,

County's Vacation Rental Ordinance Draft Released

A draft of the Transient Vacation Rental Unit Ordinance has been released by the new Office of Licensing and Enforcement, a division of the Garrett County Sheriff's Office and the Department of Planning and Land Development.

The proposed ordinance has been presented to the Garrett County commissioners for their consideration. A public hearing on the issue will be conducted in the near future prior to the commissioners voting on the draft.

Should it be approved, the ordinance will require property owners within the Deep Creek Watershed who rent their units for a period of 14 days or less to register and license those units with the county. The owners will need to meet some minimum requirements to be eligible for the license.

Most of the same requirements have been in place since 2003, when the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning Ordinance was amended, noted a Planning and Land Development spokesperson.

Patrick Kelly was recently promoted to manager of the Licensing and Enforcement Office and will implement the new requirements.

"I have been working with an adhoc committee to refine the ordinance during the last few months," Kelly said. "We have worked very hard to consider all the concerns and comments we have received from owners, neighbors, and the rental agencies to ensure a balanced outcome. I believe this a necessary step for the county as it continues to grow and will be beneficial to all involved."

A copy of the draft ordinance may be viewed on the Garrett County web site at garrettcounty.org/pandz/licenfman.html. Persons may also request a copy from the Licensing and En-

Edwards To Field Queries About Bay Restoration Fee

Officials Outline Their Cases in Support Of Oakland Bypass

Several local officials who have each given their support to the Oakland bypass project – Oakland mayor Asa McCain and Garrett County commissioners Ernie Gregg, Dave Beard, and Fred Holliday – spoke to The Republican this week to explain the reasons behind their respective decisions, and answer concerns raised by project opponents. Still in its design phase, the $41.2 million bypass could break ground as early as 2010. The proposed two-lane roadway is drawing criticism from a newly formed citizens' group called Garrett Countians for Smart Growth.

Maryland Department of Transportation Secretary Bob Flanagan and Oakland Bypass Project manager Sean Johnson of the State Highway Administration are both on record stating that the state is proceeding with the bypass project only at the behest of a unanimous desire expressed by officials from the town, county, and western Maryland legislative delegation. State legislators Sen. John Hafer and Del. George Edwards have both said that their support for the project derives from the desires of elected representatives at the own and county levels.

Flanagan said the state would not invest in the project if the local elected officials changed their minds about a bypass, and Hafer and Edwards have each said they would withdraw their support should the local officials change their minds.

State transportation officials Flanagan and Johnson, along with each of the local officials mentioned within this account, affirmed with no qualifications that the Oakland bypass is not part of a "hidden agenda" to construct a new north-south interstate highway through the county.

Support for the bypass stems from several factors, many of which were mentioned by McCain and the three commissioners, as well as Garrett County Office of Economic Development director Jim Hinebaugh, in separate conversations this week. Each individual praised the presentation put forth by Garrett Countians for Smart Growth at a recent commissioners' meeting, but said they disagreed with the group's stance.

"I've been supporting a bypass since 1967, and have been working to get one for Oakland during my 18 years as mayor," McCain said. "My personal observation of traffic is that the increase has been pretty dramatic over that period of time, and there will only be more traffic in the future. I have a letter from a company (which I'd like not to name yet because the final agreement has not been made) that says when it locates in the Southern Industrial Park it will be responsible for a traffic flow of 100 trucks a day in and out."

McCain also referred to the work of retail consultant Robert Gibbs, who presented a program to the Greater Oakland Business Association approximately 10 years ago. At that time Gibbs spoke to local retail business owners and facilitated a workshop based on the dara he compiled to address future trends in the town's business community.

The consultant told the group that there are ways to make a bypass work to a town's advantage, according to the mayor. "Gibbs said that if you can get people on a bypass to see businesses in a town it will increase the flow to the businesses; this design does that, especially on the northern end where the shopping strip with the Chinese restaurant is located across from Wal-Mart.

"As it stands right now the heavy traffic on Third Street acts as a divider between the two halves of Oakland. The bypass would also allow the east and west sides of Oakland to come back together; it obviously doesn't do that for the east side of Oakland and the west side of Mtn. Lake Park, but they are two different towns to begin with. This bypass design is a local extension of Rt. 219 from the proposed endpoints at its northern end and southern end, as it continues through in basically a straight line," McCain stated. "One interesting thing often overlooked is that going back to 1967, when I started looking at this the general route took only three houses. Today's design would only take only one additional house," McCain stated.

The mayor supports the currently proposed location, but said he does have concerns about some of the specifics of the design. "The state is studying putting a new road in as a diagonal from Southern High to the intersection of the bypass and Rt. 135, with a recreational trail next to the new roadway for pedestrians and bicyclists. This would funnel the schoolchildren to a traffic light to allow them to cross the road safely, and not send them up High Street to meet the bypass fence and swing down 90 degrees toward Burger King; if that's done they might try crossing the by-

Road Closed For Few Hours For Vehicle Accident

A portion of Rt. 219 was closed for approximately 2½ hours Tuesday night after a refrigerator-type truck overturned and landed on its side because of the snow covered and slick roadway, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

The truck, operated by Ni Resheng, 32, Alhambra, Calif., skidded into the southbound lane and was hit by a vehicle operated by Joan Maria Vasdy, 46, Pasadena. No injuries were reported in the 7:39 p.m. accident.

Resheng was charged with failure to keep right of center. Deputies were assisted by Maryland State Police, Oakland City Police, State Highway Administration, Southern Rescue Squad, and Oakland firefighters.

State Police Mounting Extra Traffic Patrols

With one of the busiest holiday travel periods of the year approaching, the Maryland State Police will be fielding special "The Bee is Back" traffic patrols – in addition to a full complement of patrol troopers statewide – to combat speeding, drinking and driving under the influence. Many of the additional troopers on patrol will be funded through federal highway enforcement grants.

The Thanksgiving holiday is nationally recognized as one of the CARE (Combined Accident Reduction Effort) holidays. State police agencies across the country who participate in Operation CARE increase the number of road patrol personnel by reassigning administrative officers to the highways throughout the holiday period. In Maryland, the areas of heightened awareness and enforcement are seatbelt and child safety seat violations, speeding, and driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs.

Citizens who observe a suspected drunk driver are encouraged to obtain a license plate number and vehicle description, and call #77 ("Pound 77") to be connected to the nearest MSP barracks. The duty officer will obtain the vehicle description and location and may ask the caller to follow the vehicle at a safe distance until a trooper is able to locate the suspected DUI driver.

"Motorists should plan ahead and be courteous and patient when traveling," an MSP spokesperson said. "Also, be an attentive driver and make an effort to reduce cell phone use, eating and other distractions when driving."

"Troopers will be out in force for one of the three busiest travel holidays of the year," said Maryland State Police secretary Col. Thomas E. Hutchins. "Strict enforcement by troopers has proven to help reduce crashes. I urge everyone to drive safely, responsibly and sober so all may be thankful this Thanksgiving."

Special Blood Drive Scheduled At Legion Hall

There will be a special blood drive conducted by the American Red Cross this Saturday, Nov. 26, at Proctor Kildow Post 71 American Legion hall in Oakland. Donors will be welcomed there from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Persons may telephone 1-800-448-3543 to make an appointment, or simply show up at the hall.

Persons who are at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 105 pounds, and are in generally good health typically are eligible to donate a unit of blood every eight weeks. Those desiring more information about the ARC blood service program may telephone the Garrett County office at 301-334-3810.

Hospital Gala Called Success; Lynch Speaks

The recent Garrett County Memorial Hospital Foundation Gala was deemed a "great success" by organizers, as the event yielded approximately $50,000 from hospital supporters.

Gala Gold, Silver, and Bronze corporate sponsors were recognized for their financial support of the event. The corporate sponsors were Mike Delligatti, Gold level; Railey Realty and Deep Creek Mountain Resort, Silver level; and Tom Moran and Beitzel Corporation, Bronze level. These five corporate sponsors provided a total of $45,000 towards the success of the gala.

Additionally, nearly 100 local and surrounding area businesses and residents donated items for the raffle and live and silent auctions, sponsored various aspects of the event, and purchased advertisements in the program booklet to show their support.

The Carl DelSignore Foundation served as the event's honorary chairman. Being the lead donors for the 2004 Capital Campaign, the new wing of the hospital, named for the foundation, was in part made possible through a donation from the DelSignore Foundation.

Former prisoner of war Jessica Lynch was the guest speaker for the event. The West Virginia native was a private first-class in the United States Army who served in Operation Iraqi Freedom. She was severely injured in an ambush of her unit and captured. Following her dramatic rescue by a Special Forces unit of the Army, Lynch was flown to an Iraqi hospital for recovery.

Lynch spoke to the group on the importance of teamwork and perseverance, both of which she said resulted in her successful rescue and survival.

Also honored at the event were Wayne and Jackie Johnson, co-chairs of the Gala Steering Committee. "The Johnsons devoted countless hours and energy to the success of the event," stated a spokesperson.

Proceeds from the gala will assist in the purchase of a new state-of-the-art mammography machine.

For more information on the GCMH Foundation, persons may telephone the foundation office at 301-533-4178.

Jailhouse Assault Nets Two Years For Preston Man

A Preston County, W.Va., man who pleaded guilty to assaulting another inmate while the two were incarcerated in the local jail in August was sentenced to a two-year jail term during a recent Garrett County District Court proceeding, with Judge Ralph M. Burnett presiding.

David Wayne Welch, 43, Terra Alta, had cornered the victim in his cell prior at the time of the assault and proceeded to beat him. The beating continued even after an initial warning from a correctional officer, who had to physically intervene in order to break up the altercation. Welch continued the assault even as he was being pulled off the victim, according to the charging statement.

Welch was incarcerated at the time of the incident on convictions of theft and a failure to appear.

Additional charges of misdemeanor theft, possession of a firearm after being convicted of a crime, possession of a stolen firearm, and selling and conspiring to sell a stolen firearm were not prosecuted by the state's attorney's office. Those charges stemmed from a February arrest by Garrett County sheriff's deputies after Welch had allegedly taken a .22 caliber handgun from a residence and sold it with the help of his brother, Timothy Allen Welch, 40, Mtn. Lake Park, who was not prosecuted on the same six charges.

Donald Henry Lycette, 44, Connellsville, Pa., pleaded guilty to misdemeanor theft and was handed a six-month jail term and ordered to pay $500 in restitution to the state attorney's office. The charge's stemmed from Lycette's involvement in a January 2004 shoplifting incident at the Oakland Wal-Mart. After he and two accomplices carried out the theft, the three fled north on Garrett Highway in a car driven by Lycette. During the ensuing police chase, the car rammed two police cruisers, leading to two charges of second-degree assault that were not prosecuted by the state's attorney's office.

Charles French Stinson, 50, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to second-degree assault and was handed a 30-day jail sentence by visiting Judge Edward Malloy. Stinson had been jailed in September after a trespassing incident that occurred in his neighbor's apartment. Sheriff's deputies making the arrest reported that he was very intoxicated and kicked at them while being placed under arrest.

Kevin Hugo Waeschle, 26, Maplewood, N.J., pleaded guilty to drug paraphernalia possession and was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ) and a $200 fine, while an additional charge of marijuana possession was not prosecuted. Waeschle's July arrest by sheriff's deputies stemmed from a July traffic stop on Interstate 68, when a drug dog alerted on his backpack, where a smoking device bearing suspected marijuana residue was located.

Mary Elizabeth Bell, 54, Oakland, was handed a stet ruling on charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. She had been arrested by sheriff's deputies after emergency medical personnel noticed a smoking device when they had been called to check on a possible overdose in her apartment.

Chase Allen Dumire, 21, Oakland, was not prosecuted on felony theft and conspiracy to commit felony theft charges filed in the wake of a February burglary of an Oakland area home. Dumire was accused of helping the perpetrators carry a safe out of the residence and break into the safe.

Virginia Lee Hooper, 33, Oakland, was not prosecuted on charges of misdemeanor theft and unlawful use of a credit card number filed by sheriff's deputies in July after she allegedly copied a credit card number off a friend's receipt in order to use it to pay her own cell phone bill.

Robert James Rounds, 37, Oakland, and Denise Mullins, 22, Terra Alta, were not prosecuted on charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia filed by the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force in March. Detectives entering Rounds's Memorial Drive home on a search and seizure warrant detected the odor of suspected burnt marijuana, and a search reportedly uncovered various items of paraphernalia.

Kimberly Ann Strawser, 31, Oakland, was not prosecuted on charges of intimidating a juror. Her July arrest by sheriff's deputies came after she allegedly threatened and harassed a couple who were scheduled to testify against her.

DUI/DWI HEARINGS

Several driving while under the influence (DUI) and driving while intoxicated (DWI) cases were heard in District Court recently.

Patricia Ann Michaels, 34, Md., was deemed to be in violation of her DUI probation, which was revoked, with a three-month sentence reimposed.

Francis Stephen Morris, 51, Md., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a PBJ and a 30-day suspended sentence, fined $450, placed on one year of unsupervised probation, and ordered to complete 30 hours of community service.

Aaron James Riggleman, 20, Md., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a PBJ and a 30-day suspended sentence, fined $300, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 30 hours of community service.

Fairness of Flush Tax...

The Bay (Chesapeake) Restoration Fund was established to do just what its title suggests – save/restore the Chesapeake Bay. What funds the fund is a tax now commonly referred to as the "flush tax," one which must be paid by every citizen of the state. Since most of Garrett County's waterways do not ultimately empty into the bay, but rather the Mississippi, this particular tax is causing quite a negative stir among the residents of the Mountaintop. Apparently only about half of our county residents paid the tax which appeared on their recent public utilities bill.

Imposing the flush tax on every Maryland citizen was truly a mistake – but not for the reason described above. The big mistake made by our state legislature was the singling out of this project, and then singling out its funding with a new tax. If they had simply allocated funds for bay restoration efforts, and not designated a specific, named tax to support it, then there would have been none of this backlash from Garrett County residents.

General tax monies collected by the state – any state – are spent on needs and projects throughout the state, just as federal tax dollars collected annually by the IRS are used to fund projects throughout the nation, and beyond. If, for example, when the Chesapeake Bay bridge were built the legislature had designated a specific "bay bridge tax," the same ranting and raving would have ensued as with today's flush tax. "We Garrett Countians don't use that bridge; why should we have to pay for it!"

The same, of course, could be claimed by non-Garrett County residents if we received money, say, for construction of a bridge here. Why should someone who lives in Ocean City have to pay for a bridge that serves Garrett County?

So having "our very own" tax money spent somewhere else in the state is certainly nothing new.

There are two other major points to consider. First of all, even though little of Garrett County's waters flow into the bay, the well-being of that great estuary is absolutely crucial to the economic vitality of the entire state of Maryland. The state's economy would be severely damaged if the bay were to "die," and we in Garrett County would suffer along with the rest of the counties if that were to happen.

Secondly, if one takes a close look at the stated purpose of the Bay Restoration Fund, it reads that, while priority for the use of these funds will be treatment facilities that discharge into the bay, the fund is also "available for treatment facilities into ... other waters of the state." This means that the Youghiogheny watershed in Garrett County, for example, could also directly benefit from the fund.

No one likes taxes, but the "flush tax" is really no more unfair than any other tax from which the funds might be, and often are, spent somewhere far, far away from Garrett County.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I'm outraged that any citizen of Garrett County can be stopped, searched, and assaulted at gun point by a man allegedly impersonating a police officer for any reason whatsoever! I'm also outraged that our court commissioner did not have a problem with this man being released back into our community on his own recognizance!

I would like to know why this man was not placed in jail and why no bail was set! Here in Garrett County bail is set for people arrested for theft, drugs, DWI, and various other serious crimes. Was this alleged crime not serious? Any man who can allegedly impersonate a police officer and take it upon himself to pull over another citizen, search that citizen, and then confiscate their license and registration while holding them at gunpoint has committed a serious crime!!

Is this man a special citizen allowed to terrorize other Garrett County citizens as he sees fit? Should we all be looking over our shoulders for fear that someone may misinterpret our actions and call it to our attention while holding us and our families at gun point?

Sincerely,
Velma Beckman

To the Editor:

We recently had the pleasure of attending the end-of-season awards banquet for the Northern Maddawgs peewee football league. Our grandson Zachary Bittinger just completed his first season with the Maddawgs.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank each and every person who has given their time and talents to make this past season such a success for the Maddawgs. With this being Zachary's first year, we had no idea what efforts are put forth to have a successful football team, and we must say, the Northern coaches, parents, volunteers, fans, etc., pulled out all the stops and made us very proud to say our grandson plays for the Maddawgs! Most of our away games left a little to be desired (most not having a scoreboard or announcer), but our home games were top-notch, showing true Maddawg hospitality!

Last, but certainly not least, we would like to acknowledge Steve and Sandy Vincent for the time they have devoted to the Northern Maddawgs. It's true it takes a lot of time and volunteers to pull off such a successful season, but without the selfless dedication of these two individuals, things may not have fallen into place so seamlessly. Thank you and we wish you the best.

If parents think there aren't enough activities for their children in Garrett County, we must disagree. There are countless sports activities to get your child involved in. Although it takes a commitment on the parents' part to get the children to practices, games, etc., we think it is very much worth the effort and it's fun!

Zachary is already looking forward to next season and we will be on the sidelines cheering him on!

Go Maddawgs!

To the Editor:

I think we are very fortunate in Garrett County to have The Republican, an independent local newspaper – a good way to keep up with interesting folks and activities in our area. I especially enjoy the letters to the editor section, a space that provides valuable discourse, supportive comments, and educational information from thoughtful and sincere writers who bravely open themselves to anger and ridicule from others as they share views. My thanks to recent letters from Calhoun, Scott Avey, Bill Thomas, Tasker, Morgan, and Slocomb.

Slocomb is so right to point out that "democracy is based on a knowledgeable people speaking." To speak wisely with our vote it is necessary to read, listen, and understand – to become educated. But, I think Tom Sheahan failed to grasp the meaning of Morgan's letter. At no point did she use any words against Steele or any support of racist activities of any kind. You mention that schools teach against racism – but apparently the meaning of racism is still not understood. I sense Morgan may live on a planet of "open eyes and concerned heart," where education is grounded in history and social awareness. Luckily many similar residents do live in our area.

Racism is not the only misunderstood and misused word – others are Christian, liberal, patriotism, and hero. At this dangerous time for our country, it is important that we all learn to understand the true meaning of words. The administration promotes divisiveness, fear, and misunderstanding with repetitive spin. Poor Bush thinks he has a PR problem that can be fixed by making campaign-style speeches at military bases. He needs to listen to what is really happening in the world around him. Progress? Women in Afghanistan are still in danger as the Taliban is gaining power. In Iraq all civilians are in more danger since the war. Iraq is on the verge of civil war. The occupation builds terrorism throughout the world. Chemical weapons are being used by our troops, and they themselves are being exposed to the dangers of spent uranium from their own shells. And sadly, too, the only reason Bush can say "we don't torture" is because his bunch has changed the definition of torture to save himself and Cheney from future actions by the world court. Arrogance and denial will not save you when the world is watching.

Sincerely,
Cynthia Knight

To the Editor:

If we are going to remove any references to Christ in the calendar, then I think that we should also secularize the names of the day of the week:

The ancient pagan Greeks and Romans believed that the sun was the source of life on the planet and they gave it prime importance in their thinking–hence, the first day of the week is Sunday.

Monday is named for the moon. If the sun is honored on Sunday, it would be lunacy to not give the moon a place of prominence on Monday.

The word Tuesday, however, was derived from a wholly different religious tradition. Tyr or Tiw was the Norse God of War.

The mid-day of the week is named for the Norse God Odin. He was also known as Woden or Wotan–hence, Wednesday.

Thor was the Norse God of Thunder. Thus came the name Thorsdaeg, which comes down to modern English speakers as Thursday.

Friday? The name of the day is derived from yet another Norse God (in this case a goddess), Frigga–the wife of Odin.

Saturday was named for the Roman God of Time and the Harvest, Saturn.

If we are to secularize the calendar, we cannot leave the names of the days of the week pagan, can we? It would be unconscionable to let the days of the week violate the separation of church and state, wouldn't it? We must secularize–rename–the days of the week:

Sunday could be changed to Firstday; but, that would seem to make the day of Christian worship to seem to have priority. So, the first day of the week should be given the generic name: Oneday, Monday: OneMoDay, Tuesday: Twoday (two days after Oneday), Wednesday: HumpDay (although, if hunchbacks are offended, we can change it to the more politically correct: PCday . Thursday: Fourday. Friday: TNITday (The "T" is silent and TNIT is pronounced like 'night"–"Thank Nothing Its TNITday!"); and Saturday: EndDay.

So, the sooner we adopt OneDay, OneMoDay, TwoDay, HumpDay (PCDay), FourDay, TNITDay and EndDay, the BETTER! The pagans have been given an unfair advantage over other religions. We need to get rid of all references to these gods–let's do it for the children!

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter in the November 17 edition of The Republican written by J.T. Slocomb, who suggested three steps aimed at restoring the real meaning of democracy.

First of all, it should be noted, the United States is not a democracy, but is a republic. A democracy is government directly by the people, often referred to as direct democracy. A republic, on the other hand, is government exercised by people by representatives, commonly referred to as a representative democracy.

The Founding Fathers longed for a republic as opposed to a democracy. They expressed concerns about democracies throughout the Federalist Papers, a series of articles published in newspapers urging the adoption of the Constitution. In Federalist 10, James Madison conveyed, "...democracies have ever been spectacles of turbulence and contention; have ever been found incompatible with personal security or the rights of property; and have in general been as short in their lives as they have been violent in their deaths."

The beauty of it all is that, with a republic we are all afforded the opportunity to elect our leaders. So, instead of dealing directly with each issue, we (hopefully) elect representatives based on their positions on important issues and their qualifications to further the opinions of the citizenry. Additionally, in our republic, we are all free to contact our legislators and voice opinions concerning important matters of public policy.

However, data shows that fewer than 10% of Americans have ever contacted their legislators. Additionally, voter turnout to select legislators is less than impressive. On average, a state election brings out 40% of the registered voters, and a local election brings out about 30%. Hence, if we cannot get people to vote once every few years, or contact their legislator concerning issues of importance, I think it would be rather lofty to assume the general public would be interested in attending monthly meetings or participating in monthly surveys regarding proposed bills.

Our elected leaders are, on the other hand, according to Madison in Federalist 10, people "whose wisdom may best discern the true interest of their country..." Therefore, I propose to allow our legislators to continue as they are.

If we want to restore "the real meaning of democracy" in America, I suggest, first and foremost, that we Americans begin to exercise our right to vote and to contact our legislators concerning issues important to us.

Respectfully submitted,
Brandon James Hoover

Last week's issue of The Republican contained a front-page series of fascinating photos of a black bear that were reportedly taken by Bob Bantz in nearby Allegany County, and submitted to The Republican by his friend Lawson "Buddy" Duckworth of Long Stretch.

In fact, those photos were not taken by Bantz, but found by him on the Internet and simply forwarded to Duckworth for him to enjoy. Duckworth then forwarded them on to the newsroom of The Republican, assuming that his friend had indeed taken the photos, as Mr. Bantz has taken various photos of black bears on his property in the past.

We were unable to find out just where the photos were really taken, as claims included Canada, Moscow, and nearby Connellsville, Pa. While we cannot identify the photographer, we thank him/her for taking them, we hope our readers enjoyed them, and we apologize for any and all confusion!

Upon their arrival they found smoke coming from the 12' x 60' mobile home, which is owned and occupied by David Rinker.

The fire originated in the kitchen and was reported at 6:59 p.m. by a passerby, as Rinker was not at home at the time. It was believed to have been caused by an electrical malfunction, according to a report from Deputy State Fire Marshal J.M. Mowbray.

The blaze was brought under control in about five minutes. Damages were estimated to be $20,000 to the structure and $5,000 to contents.

Also responding was the Northern Rescue Squad. There were no injuries reported.

Rinker was displaced from the trailer and is being assisted by friends and family, according to the report.

The trailer was equipped with a smoke alarm.

Maryland State Fire Marshal William E. Barnard urges all Marylanders to install smoke alarms in their homes and, particularly during the winter months, to make sure that they operate properly and are equipped with a fresh battery. He added that working smoke alarms and home fire escape plans are two of the best ways to avoid the loss of life in house fires.

A Soldier's View From Iraq

IRAQ, Oct. 21

What do you and your buddies want people back home to know about what you're doing over there, and what you are having to deal with? Go into as much detail as you can, please.

Hi,

Let's see, what do I want to say. It's hard. It's not what is shown on the news. From what I see, which isn't much, just stuff on the Internet, it's not as bad. I am in the Anbar Province, pretty much the heart of the insurgency. The few towns that we patrol, it's hard to get a feeling on the people. Most of them want us here, there are a few that don't. The hard part is figuring out which ones are the bad ones. For safety and security, we usually don't dismount our tanks to talk to the people, so I haven't had a chance to interact yet with the local population.

Unfortunately, I usually only see when bad things happen. I am able to watch the people, though, doing their daily routines. It is a totally different culture here, something that still shocks me. This part of the country, it is more traditional customs. The women are dressed head to toe in black robes and walk behind the men. There is no display of affection (holding hands, hugs, etc.) between men and women. The children only play with members of their gender. The boys go to one school, the girls to another.

Religion dominates life here. Prayer is five times a day, men usually attend at least once a day to the mosque. They have outside speakers to hear the service, which can be heard throughout town.

There aren't any real stores like back home, no Wal-Marts or grocery stores. Most are small "mom and pop" type places. They sell usually only a few items in each. I haven't been in one, just seen it from the outside. One thing that caught my attention the first time I was out. They sell live chickens outside each store. When someone buys a chicken, they slaughter it right in the street, along with lamb. They also sell ice by the block, which is kept outside as well.

Some of the hardest things to deal with here are the local people. You never know their intentions. One day, we were on patrol in a small town and everyone was outside, sitting on lawn chairs watching the road as we drove by. It looked like the Autumn Glory Parade in Oakland. Little kids were waving and smiling. A few minutes later, a convoy drove through and was hit by a roadside bomb, which detonated a few hundred feet from my tank. No one was injured in the blast. Right after the explosion, the town was deserted. This has happened to my crew a few times. Sometimes something happens, sometimes it's nothing. You just never know. We are on our toes for the entire mission. All of the crew is ready and looking for anything out of the ordinary.

Our mission is to patrol the MSR (Main Supply Routes) that is in our sector. We do a shift everyday. I have done nearly 90 missions so far since I've been here. Every day is a new day here. The enemy changes its tactics, and we change ours. It is a cat and mouse game. We try to stay ahead of them, and force them to change to meet us. Everything changes – times, places, number of vehicles.

Man Charged In Single-Vehicle Accident Tuesday

A Deer Park man was charged in connection with a single-vehicle accident on Steiding Church Road in Swanton Monday night, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

David DeBerry, 19, apparently lost control of the 2000 Chevrolet Malibu. The vehicle overturned several times in a field, where it came to rest on its top. DeBerry was charged with driving while impaired, driving under the influence, leaving the scene of a property damage accident, driving without a license, and a civil citation for underage possession of an alcoholic beverage.

He was not injured in the 11:15 p.m. accident.

In other police news, John McCullough, 55, Oakland, was charged Monday with failure to yield the right of way after he attempted to make a left turn onto Oakland Drive and pulled in front of a vehicle operated by Rebecca Moyer, 30, Oakland.

No injuries were reported in the 3:45 p.m. accident.

Could Fund

Garrett College president Steve Herman and Community Action Committee director Duane Yoder, and Steve came across some communities that were funding educations for their high school graduates using tax revenue from a variety of sources.

"In order to sell the idea to the commissioners I had to find a way to fund it. The beauty of tying in the wind revenue is that it would be all new revenue, so we wouldn't be raising anyone's taxes to pay for this proposal."

While many details would be have to be worked out, Hinebaugh envisions that every graduate of the two local high schools, and home school graduates, would be eligible to receive a free two-year education at Garrett College, with probable requirements that the student be enrolled fulltime and maintain a minimum "C" average. "We wouldn't want to place a restriction stipulating that students stay in the county after they graduate," he said. "They can go on for further education, or move away to take employment, then someday return to the county and bring their knowledge and experience home to benefit the community. That's happening a lot already.

"Some estimates say that as many as 80 percent of the new job growth in the future will be in knowledge-based fields, such as engineering, architecture, computers, and professional services like nursing. These all require education and training beyond the high school level. We're competing with other parts of the state that have much higher educational levels, and we need to send a message to employers that we are serious about improving our residents' knowledge base and skills.

"While we'd initially look at funding the academic tracks, down the line we could do the same for vo-tech training through the college. We're always going to need qualified carpenters, electricians, plumbers, and so on, and those jobs pay good wages," stated Hinebaugh.

While acknowledging that some persons may assume that the county is taking up these discussions in order to deflect criticism of the commissioners' approval of the controversial project, Hinebaugh rejected that line of thought. "This is not connected to the wind facility," he said. "The commissioners will likely try to go ahead with the educational initiative whether it's funded by wind power revenue or something else, such as revenue from the development going on at Marsh Mountain. The bottom line is expanding the talent base of our labor pool in order to compete for jobs.

"This also could satisfy critics who say that the wind project is just a tax shelter for the wind company, and doesn't stand to benefit local residents at all."

The parks and recreational proposal is in a much earlier stage of discussion, according to Pagenhardt, who said grant funding could be sought to help set up a new department, while a portion of the wind revenue could be used to pay for a small staff and equipment to maintain facilities in McHenry and other locations.

While Clipper Wind power garnered state approval for its Backbone Mountain project two years ago, it has yet to commence construction. Although company spokespersons have said that they would like to begin construction this coming spring, there is lawsuit pending by project opponents that will come before the court [illegible] coming weeks.

Adorable Adoptables

PLENTY OF PETS AVAILABLE – The female Dalmatian/Lab mix, above left, was recently brought to the Garrett County Animal Shelter with her puppies. Also looking for a home are a female yellow Lab/golden retriever mix, above right, and a medium size female beagle/collie mix, who will need some minor training and a visit to the vet. "She was rescued from a terrible situation," said a Humane Society spokesperson. "She was tied outside on a short chain, with little attention given to her." Also looking for homes are a "tortie" and calico, who are shown "hanging out" with the many other cats at the shelter. A wide variety of colors and kinds are available. Last week's featured dog was not adopted locally, so he was taken to a rescue, where he will be adopted into a good home. A large male black Lab, however, is still available. "Hay bales have been placed outside the shelter for pet owners to take for their dog houses," said the spokesperson. "Please only take half a bale, if you only have one dog so there is hay left for others. Please make sure your pets have food, water, and shelter this winter." For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553.

authorized amount, according to Mullich.

Ellis asked for the lump sum so that he could purchase a new home, costing $185,000, which is located near his current one.

"I'm looking for a place my sons and I can call home," he said.

Ellis told the commissioners that he has spent much time and gas money in the last three years looking for a new place. The new Bumble Bee home would be good for him and his two sons, Danny and Nathan, since it has three bedrooms and is located near their work, family, and friends, Ellis indicated. Additionally, any relocation from his current residence would increase his travel costs, taxes, and time to get to work.

He added that there were no comparable or lesser priced homes available close to his job. Ellis, a county employee, is an attendant at the Bumble Bee Road refuse collection site.

"I'm not trying to be piggish," he said. "I could look at $400,000 homes."

He would also like the commissioners to make a decision on his request as

Effect of Certain Drugs on Exercise

Drug interactions frequently make news in our society. Little is known about the potential interaction between drugs and exercise. While no one denies the value of routine exercise, combining exercise with certain drugs can cause potential problems. For example, some prescription drugs can affect a person's ability to respond appropriately to exercise or increased activity.

Any drug that causes drowsiness such as diphenhydramine or any of several pain medicines such as propoxyphene can decrease a person's reaction time, balance and coordination. These drugs can increase the risk of an accident, especially when playing sports, driving a car or operating equipment. Some antibiotics such as ciprofloxacin and levofloxacin have been linked to serious injury of tendons. This type of antibiotic should be avoided during high-impact activities such as weightlifting, jumping, or rapid acceleration and deceleration. Stimulants, such as caffeine or methylphenidate are taken to enhance athletic performance. However, combining stimulants with strenuous activity can lead to irregular heartbeats.

GCCB Members To Be Featured In Dec. 4 Concert

GINO MAURICCI

TOM SIMPSON

The Garrett Community Concert Band, under the direction of Jerry McGee, is finalizing the program for its "'Tis the Season" concert, scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 4, at 2:30 p.m. in the college auditorium.

In the presentation of a variety of music celebrating Christmas and Chanukah, the band will feature two members as soloists, as well as numbers by the Mountain Top Dixieland Jazz group, the membership of which includes GCC Band members.

Performing a solo in "Adagio-Tarantella," a fast Italian dance number, will be Gino Mauricci, concert master and principal clarinetist.

Mauricci, a native of Peru, moved to Washington, D.C., with his family in 1970. Having lived in Maryland most of his adult life, he moved to Garrett County in 1992. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in music from St. Mary's College of Maryland, and a master of music degree in clarinet performance from the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y. He has performed with the Rochester Philharmonic, and toured with Winson Marsalis in 1989.

Mauricci also plays saxophone with the local pop band, the Remedy. He recently completed a year-long course in instrument repair and maintenance, and now operates his own business, Precision Winds.

Performing Leroy Anderson's "Trumpeter's Lullaby" will be Mtn. Lake Park native Tom Simpson, first-chair trumpet in the band.

Simpson holds a bachelor's degree in trumpet performance, with a minor in art, from West Virginia Wesleyan College. He has taught for the Cumberland Music Academy, worked for the Western Maryland Symphony, the Emmanuel Brass Ensemble in Cumberland, and with numerous other jazz ensembles, wind symphonies, brass ensembles, and rock and jazz groups. He currently performs with Queen City Funk and Soul, and the Cumberland Jazz Society's big band Bop Go the Weasels and quartet and quintet jazz groups.

Simpson is the owner of Simpson & Associates, a local computer networking and consulting company.

The Mountain Top Dixieland Jazz group had a casual beginning two years ago when three friends started playing music together. It has grown to become a 10-member band, many of whom are members of the GCC Band.

Admission costs to the Dec. 4 concert are $8 for adults, $2 for students, and free for children under 6. Tickets are available at the Arts Council Gallery along Alder Street in Oakland, and at the door.

The program is funded in part by the Garrett County Arts Council and Maryland State Arts Council.

Lakers Bounce Back From Two Losses With Three Straight Wins

After dropping a pair of games to highly talented opponents last week in Iowa, the Garrett College men's basket team bounced back on their home court to record two victories over the weekend in their own McDonald's Classic.

The Lakers topped Jamestown (N.Y.) on Friday, 82-69, and then handed Mercyhurst Northeast a 104-94 defeat in the classic title game Saturday.

Then Garrett upped its record to 3-2 last night by rolling over the Frostburg State University junior varsity, 94-61, on the Bobcats' floor.

The Lakers drained four three-point buckets in the final five minutes against Jamestown on Friday to record the win over the 1-2 Jayhawks.

The Lakers were on top at halftime, 35-27, and built a lead of as many as 14 points in the second half, but the Jayhawks chipped away at that advantage and trailed by a single point late in the game.

Pat Carwile hit two of the aforementioned long-range buckets, while Ivan Funcic and Jason Moore each recorded one to allow Garrett to pull ahead again by eight points. Moore's bucket was a four-point play, as he was fouled in the act of shooting.

Barry Cornish led Garrett's balanced scoring attack with 18 points, Tyrice Watkins netted 14, Carwile and Funcic each finished with 12, Moore scored 10, and Aaron Meachum chipped in with nine.

Watkins also had four steals and two blocks, while Cornish and Carwile dished out three assists each.

"Jamestown is a well-coached team," GC coach Dennis Gibson said. "Pat Carwile stepped things up for us offensively in the last eight minutes with some good shooting and penetration, and that led to some good shots by others.

"I was also pleased with Jason Moore's performance off the bench," he added.

Pacing Jamestown offensively was Matthew Schmechtig, who recorded a game-high 26 points, and also grabbed four rebounds. Randy Brandow also reached double figures with 17 points and four boards.

In Friday's other game, Mercyhurst nipped Montgomery-Germantown, 83-82.

The Lakers had another balanced scoring effort in their win over Mercyhurst on Saturday, with six players, again led by Cornish, breaking into double figures.

The 6-6, 230-pound Cornish actually had a double-double evening, scoring 20 points and pulling down 11 rebounds.

Funcic hit 17 points, nine of which were from three-point range. Chris Henderson recorded 14 points and nine rebounds, while Moore, Meachum, and Watkins each netted 10 points.

The Lakers had a 10-point lead at intermission, and stretched that margin to 20 points in the second half before the visitors pared the advantage to 11.

Leading Mercyhurst in scoring and rebounding was Julian Pinkston, who had game-highs with 27 points and 15 rebounds. Teammate Tryvan Leech was right behind with 26 points, and Derek Reed finished with 15.

In the consolation game, Germantown rallied from a 10-point deficit to top Jamestown, 75-70.

Lakers Cornish and Watkins were named to the All-Tournament team, along with Leech and Pinkston of Mercyhurst, and Darshawn Johnson of Germantown.

Funcic led the way offensively for the Lakers last night in their easy win over the Frostburg State jayvee squad, as he finished with 19 points, while Cornish was close behind with 17 points.

Also reaching double figures were Dyre Ross and Meachem with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Pacing the Bobcats were Barnes with 13 points, and Green and Wamsley with 12 points each.

The Lakers led at the half, 45-34. No other details of the contest were received by press time today.

After a Thanksgiving break, the Lakers will play again next Wednesday at CCBC Dundalk.

Lakers Downed By Dundalk; Fall To 1-2 On Year

A titanic performance by Garrett College freshman Ashley Hill, a graduate of the T.C. Williams Titans high school basketball program in Alexandria, Va., wasn't enough to push the Lakers over the top to victory in a 16-point loss at Dundalk Sunday afternoon. Garrett dropped the contest 89-73 as its record dropped to 1-2 in the early stages of the current campaign.

Hill hit for a game-high 25 points, with help from sophomore Kierra Wilkins with 13 points and sophomore Eugenna Carson with 12. Freshman Flodysha Peterson just missed a double-double with 11 rebounds and nine points, and added five blocks.

Dundalk also mounted a balanced performance en route to its win, with Kendra Baldwin scoring 18 points, while Gloria Brody scored 14 and Latoya Brody scored 12.

Garrett was down by 10 at the half, 45-35.

After the Thanksgiving break, the Lakers will host Takoma Park on Wednesday, Nov. 30.

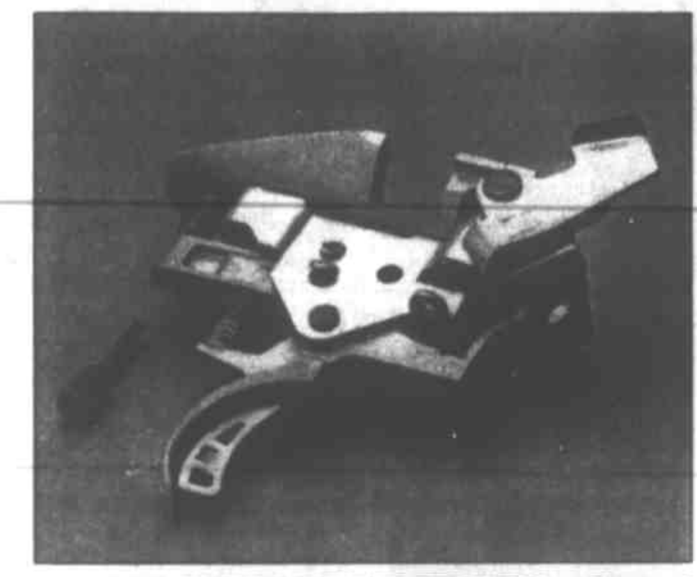
Savage Arms' New "AccuTrigger" Is Attracting Shooters' Attention



SAVAGE ARMS REFINES TRIGGERS — Pictured is the new Savage Arms AccuTrigger with the AccuRelease in the center of the main trigger. Until the AccuRelease is fully depressed the gun cannot fire, preventing accidental discharges. The added safety feature allows the trigger pull to be adjusted to much lighter levels than conventional factory triggers, enhancing accuracy substantially. Photo courtesy of Savage Arms.

Editor's note: Hunters taking to the woods next Monday with the opening of rifle deer hunting season may be interested in this trigger safety mechanism.

by Craig Speicher © 2005 RCS

Imagine yourself descending a steep rocky slope while hunting with a loaded center-fire rifle. You suddenly trip and the gun goes flying. The gun hits the ground the same moment as your body does. Unfortunately, you can see the muzzle is pointed directly at you. Will the safety work? Maybe.

This instance shows exactly why Savage Arms engineered a revolutionary safety known as "AccuTrigger."

Five years ago, it might have seemed unusual to hear Savage (www.savagearms.com) mentioned in the same breath with Remington or Winchester, the latter two being veritable American legends. Then Savage engineers focused on solving an industry-wide problem. Their efforts succeeded dramatically, resulting in the AccuTrigger, notably on their bolt-action Model 12 Varmint Series. The trigger contributes to remarkable, if not incredible, accuracy for a mass-produced factory rifle, with a price tag much lower than custom firearms.

For years, guns have been compromised with "lawyer triggers." Almost any gun that misfired by inadvertent shock to the trigger mechanism was fair game for lawyers. Isn't that funny? The guns targeted varmints, and varmints targeted the guns, and then those varmints (the human variety) think I'm a varmint for exposing them.

To pre-empt costly litigation, manufacturers were forced to build heavier and heavier "trigger pulls," making accidental discharges less likely. Unfortunately, as any marksman can tell you, the more force required to pull the trigger, the more difficult it is to aim steadily. So Savage focused on improvements of both safety and accuracy at the source, the problematic trigger. In simplest terms, accuracy could be enhanced by a lighter trigger pull, with safeguards that prevented inadvertent firings from dropped or jarred guns.

To achieve the lighter triggers, Savage made them capable of adjustment with a tool supplied to customers. On the varmint Model 12, to acquire the utmost accuracy for small distant targets, the trigger pull can be tuned to anywhere from about 1.5 to 6 pounds.

The second technique employed by the AccuTrigger is actually a seamless extension of the sear pin, which at first seems to be a trigger centered within the main trigger. This is actually the "sear block" or "AccuRelease." Until the AccuRelease is fully depressed, the real trigger cannot be fired. Especially important, the AccuTrigger actually adds a second safety to the gun.

One of the first signs of outstanding success for the Model 12 came in 2003 when the Shooting Industry Academy of Excellence chose the Model 12 as Gun of the Year.

Further evidence of success came in an Outdoor Life review, which can be found by Google, searching for John B. Snow Varmint Rifle Roundup.

By field and bench rest, Snow tested the .22-250 caliber Savage Model 12 single shot with stainless steel barrel and wood stock. (For 2005, the Model 12 was made in 10 versions.) Snow tested it extensively along with the best varmint-weapons of Remington, Ruger, and Browning. Savage not only dominated the tests, Snow crowned it with an elite stamp of "Editor's Choice," all the more impressive coming from a deputy editor of a prestigious magazine. Better yet, Savage was easily the least expensive gun of all.

It is important that the sub-headline for Snow's article was "You don't need to spend big bucks for outstanding accuracy," an implied reference to extraordinarily expensive custom rifles. So far the customs have reigned as the ultimate choice for varmint rifle accuracy; but it is a gradually shrinking reign as manufacturers like Savage continue to improve technology. As for accuracy, Snow came close to getting half-inch groups (well below .600) at 100 yards with factory ammunition. Perhaps 10 years ago, such a feat would have been almost impossible without a custom gun and hand-loaded ammunition.

Another Google search, for Chuck Hawks Savage Model 12 Varminter Low Profile, reveals how impressed Hawks was by the gun. At the time of this writing, Hawks called the gun the most accurate ever tested for his Guns And Shooting Online, which has been described as the definitive online shooting web site. Hawks makes many other compliments about this gun worth reading.

There was a surprising coincidence with the Sierra Bullets Hotline. I questioned fulltime ballistician Paul Box, a lifelong ballistics freak (that's a high compliment, as Paul knows) who describes accuracy as "A way of life." Paul talks to thousands of gun owners every year in his work. Without any mention of Savage or any other brand, I asked Box what he considered to be the most accurate factory-made center-fire gun in America. He replied, "It would be extremely hard to beat the Savage Model 12 Low Profile Single Shot...in the .22-250.

"I bought one of these earlier this spring [and after testing various hand-loads] it is now shooting groups between two-tenths and three-tenths of an inch" at 100 yards. Box is available expressly to answer your questions by calling 1-800-223-8799.

Frankly, the initial praise struck me as almost too good to be true. It took several phone conversations with Effie Sullivan, customer service coordinator at Savage Arms, to convince me that, no; the praise is not mere hype. Yes, Sullivan is a woman in a man's world, but ask her a few questions about Savage Arms (phone 1-800-370-0708), and you will soon understand why this congenital and congenial explainer coordinates the men at customer service.

After I purchased the basic version of the Model 12 at a nice discount from Laurel Sports Shop in Meyersdale, I spent most of the summer testing it. It's everything they say; my pride and joy and main summertime toy.

The Model 12 is also made in .223, .220 Swift, and .308 calibers, the latter a fine tool useful in making venison bologna. For sure, if you miss the target, you can't blame it on this firearm.

Ultimately, Savage center-fire guns with AccuTrigger are easily among the safest anywhere, making the woods and the world a little less worrisome – and a bit more wonderful – for all.

DNR Issues CWD Guidelines For Deer Hunters

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources is continuing its ongoing effort to protect the state's deer herd from Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD), a fatal disease of deer and elk that was recently discovered in several white-tailed deer in nearby Hampshire County, W. Va.

DNR has requested that Maryland deer hunters voluntarily abide by certain guidelines when bringing deer parts into Maryland from West Virginia or other CWD-positive states or Canadian provinces. These guidelines are:

- Hunters can bring into Maryland deer meat that is detached from the bones, cleaned hide and cape, antlers, antlers attached to a clean skull cap, clean upper canine elk teeth, a tanned hide or finished taxidermy mount; and,
- All other parts should be disposed in the state or province of harvest according to that state or province's guidelines.

DNR will be proposing new regulations for the 2006-07 deer hunting seasons that will restrict the importation of certain deer parts from CWD positive states and provinces.

Further information on CWD can be found on the DNR web site www.dnr.maryland.gov, and the CWD Alliance web site at www.cwd-info.org

Rifle Deer Season Opens Saturday

Maryland's rifle deer hunting season opens this Saturday, Nov 26. Fifty-five percent of all deer taken by hunters occurs during the firearm deer season, according to the Maryland Department of Natural Resources.

In Deer Management Region A, which consists of Garrett and Allegany counties, the firearm bag limit is two deer 1 antlered and 1 antlerless. Only antlered deer may be taken from Nov 26 to Dec 9. Antlered or antlerless deer may be taken on Dec 10. The first Sunday of firearm season, Nov. 27, is open for deer hunting on private lands in Region A.

The top ten counties for 2004-05 firearm deer harvest were Washington, 6,375; Frederick, 4,426; Carroll, 2,953; Worcester, 2,852; Allegany, 2,728; Montgomery 2,485; Garrett, 2,462; Dorchester, 2,445; Baltimore, 2,385; and Kent, 2,122.

Successful Maryland deer hunters must register their kill by calling 1-888-800-0121, or through the Internet www.gamecheck.dnr.state.md.us. Prior to moving the deer from place of kill, hunters must immediately attach a field tag on the deer's head and record the harvest on the Maryland big game harvest record portion of their hunting license. Both forms must be completed in ink. Upon registering the deer, hunters will be given a confirmation number that is recorded on the big game harvest record.

Successful junior deer hunters (age 16 and under) are eligible to receive a junior hunter game certificate from designated junior hunter game certification agents. Those agents located in Garrett County are B.J.'s Store, 11329 Savage River Rd., Swanton, 301-777-0001; Chestnut Ridge Gas & Liquor Store, 2534 Chestnut Ridge Rd., Grantsville, 301-895-3197; and D&B Sport Shop, 832 Edgewood Dr., Deer Park, 301-334-9725.

The DNR also reminds deer hunters to completely inspect their permanent tree stands and portable tree stands before use. Safety belts should always be used while climbing into a tree stand, during the hunt, and while climbing down. There were 12 deer hunting accidents in Maryland during the past hunting season, with nine of those (75 per cent) involving a tree stand.

Complete bag limits, season dates and other deer hunting information can be found at the DNR website www.dnr.maryland.gov/huntersguide. The Hunting & Trapping In Maryland Guide, issued with each hunting license, contains detailed information about programs, regulations, and requirements for all of Maryland's hunting seasons.

pass first chance they got."

Commissioner Beard, whose district includes the western half of Oakland, favors the bypass because "it will ease traffic congestion in town, and promote growth.

"The town that doesn't grow dies," he continued. 'This bypass would help with the commercial development of the Rt. 219 corridor on the northern end of town, and also with residential growth. The town that doesn't grow dies."

Commissioner Holliday stated that although he doesn't represent the areas directly impacted by the bypass, he supports it. "I'm basing my opinion on what the town of Oakland has said it wants.

"I don't know specific numbers, but I've heard people who live in town complain about the traffic, especially in regard to the large trucks; I've also heard people who live along Sand Flat Road complain about safety concerns stemming from the large trucks that use that road to bypass the town. A new bypass would take care of both problems, wouldn't it?

"I also know from personal experience that it can be really difficult to access Rt. 219 in town if you're swimming upstream.' By that I mean if you need to come out of a side street or a parking lot to cross a lane of oncoming traffic in order to head in the other direction. You'll see cars lined up trying to get onto Rt. 219, and that's frustrating for everyone."

The current bypass design and any bypass proposal located to the east of existing Rt. 219 would fall within the district represented by Commissioner Gregg, who said he supports a bypass but not in its currently proposed location.

"I think we do need a bypass, and think that there is enough evidence to show we need something, but I have serious questions about this bypass," Gregg said. "It really troubles me that this route is so close to three schools; I always thought it should be a little farther from town. Sand Flat Road may be a little too far out, but this one is too far in – perhaps a compromise can be found.

"If the location goes as is, I'd have to say the design of a roundabout at Dennett Road would be OK only because it's the lesser of three evils. I'm opposed to a bridge at Dennett Road because of the cost and the space that entrances and exits would take up; I also don't think that an at-grade intersection is feasible, because serious safety issues can arise when a residential street meets a highway."

Gregg added a caveat that although he still supports a bypass of some sort to meet future needs, he is intrigued by the numbers put forth by project opponents which indicate a bypass may not be warranted at this time. "There's more and more evidence that a good deal of Oakland's traffic is not bypassing the town, but actually going to locations in town," he said. "That's why I think some of the traffic numbers the state is using to justify the project may be skewed, because it's hard to delineate whether traffic is actually through traffic or in-town destination traffic. We have some counts, but won't know for sure what effects a bypass will have on traffic until it's built and $41 million has been spent. We need to think hard about that. I don't want to kill the project; I'm just not comfortable with how it stands right now.

"Change and progress are inevitable," Commissioner Gregg concluded. "The best we can do is manage it now with an eye to the future."

Hinebaugh pointed to future trends in discussing the proposed project. "When you look at the need for a bypass, you just can't look at current needs and patterns – you have to look ahead. In that regard, I'd point to three factors:

"One – There is another big box retailer, which I can't identify at this point, looking at locating in the Oakland area;

"Two – We have sold all but about three acres of the Southern Industrial Park to a "distribution center [also referred to by Mayor McCain] that will also generate a lot of traffic, with a number of trucks traveling in and out of the park on a daily basis. We're now looking at expanding the Southern Industrial Park as well; and,

"Three – The coming completion of Corridor H will boost our traffic numbers here considerably. People who want to access that highway to head east or west, or eventually south, will choose the shortest route to get to Corridor H, and for a lot of them that shortest route will right through Oakland on Rt. 219."

As each official did in his respective comments, Hinebaugh outright disavowed the suggestion made by bypass opponents that the project is part of a larger plan to construct a north-south interstate highway through Garrett County.

"It's a fact that 10 years ago that was being looked at, but since then the concept of a new interstate corridor has been moved to Rt. 220 south through Allegany County. There's actual money being spent, and more being sought, for that idea; for instance, Senator Paul Sarbanes is working to get Rt. 220 south of I-68 included in the Appalachian Highway Development System, which would qualify that project for a lot of federal funding. There's nothing like that going on with Rt. 219 south of I-68."

The county's economic development director also stated that neither his office, and to his knowledge nor other government entity "cut any deals" with Wal-Mart to entice the store with a bypass. "The bypass proposal was talked about long before Wal-Mart ever started looking around here," he said. McCain concurred, saying "There was absolutely no discussion with Wal-Mart about a guarantee of a bypass when they were deciding whether or not to locate here – no connection whatsoever."

Hinebaugh went on to say, "Furthermore, those new businesses that I cited as looking at the Oakland area are not being guaranteed a bypass in return for locating here. We tell them we're working on it, and obviously they're interested in its progress, soon as possible in order that he may purchase the new house.

"I only have 10 days to close the deal," Ellis said. "I need a deposit from you to secure the deal." He would like the commissioners to respond by Dec. 1. "Time is of the essence," he said.

Ellis told the commissioners he could not afford to pay the difference between their offer and the new home price. He said a mortgage payment at his age, nearly 60, with his salary, would be difficult especially if he retires as planned at 62.

"You know my income as a county employee with no benefits," he said.

Nathan, Danny, and two other supporters made impassioned pleas to the commissioners to grant Ellis's full asking price.

Nathan said he understood that the property was needed to help the county. "All I ask is that you keep us close to home," he said. "I'm just asking if you could help us out." He added that he did not want to see his dad have to get a second job to pay for a mortgage.

Peggy Beitzel of Grantsville said she has looked at prospective homes with Ellis. Most are only two bedrooms, too expensive, and in need of many repairs.

"Floyd can't afford to buy a home [in need of] a lot of repairs," she said. "This $185,000 home is a bargain compared to the $245,000 beside it."

Dorothy Joyner of Accident said it would be "fair" to grant his request.

"Garrett County has a lot of money," Beitzel said. "What's the big deal. The man only wants a home."

"It's not our money," Commissioner Ernie Gregg said. He indicated that any decision involving county funding had to be carefully weighed. The commissioners needed to discuss the issue further and would call Floyd about their decision, he said.

"If I don't accept your deal, I'll be forced off my property," Ellis said.

Commissioner Fred Holliday said he sympathized with the family being forced to move, but he and Commissioner Dave Beard reiterated that the county had already offered 13.25 percent more than the appraised value of the property.

If the commissioners decide not to grant Ellis's request, and if he does not accept the $161,626 offer, the county will proceed with "condemnation." County Administrator Monty Pagenhardt said all previous offers to Ellis would be void and the matter would be turned over to the county attorney. The case would then go to court, and a judge would order that a new property assessment be conducted. A jury, perhaps, would then decide how much Ellis should receive.

Should the case go to court, it would be a precedent-setting one for the county, as it has never taken property by eminent domain before. Gregg said he hoped that it did not come to that. He noted that the now defunct Sanitary Commission did seize a property several years ago.

Mullich said if the case does go to court, the FAA would reimburse the county for its legal fees. It would also help pay the court-suggested price for the Ellis property.

Health Dept. Notes Third Rabies Case

Environmental Health Services of the Garrett County Health Department has reported the year's third laboratory confirmed case of rabies in Garrett County.

The most recent incident occurred this past Tuesday when a skunk came onto a property in the Keyser's Ridge area and fought with an unvaccinated dog and a rabbit. A relative of the property owner shot the skunk, and it was sent to Baltimore to the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene Rabies Laboratory, which confirmed the skunk positive for the rabies virus on Thursday.

The unvaccinated dog and the rabbit were euthanized. The property owners also own other pets that are currently vaccinated against rabies and were not exposed to the skunk. There was no human exposure in this case.

Pet owners are advised to check the vaccination status of their pets. The health department's next rabies clinic is tentatively slated for May 2006. In the meantime, pet owners with animals in need of rabies vaccination are urged to contact a local veterinarian clinic to schedule an appointment and get their pets vaccinated.

but it's not the overiding factor in their decision-making process. I'm confident that at least one of them will locate here whether we have a bypass or not, and when it does it will add to the traffic on our streets.

"It's also been stated that we could use the bypass money elsewhere in the county, but that's just not the case," Hinebaugh continued. "If the bypass doesn't go through, that transportation fund money will leave Garrett County and go toward projects downstate, like the Woodrow Wilson Bridge reconstruction. That money also won't be going back into the taxpayers' pockets – that's just not the way government works."

In summing up his viewpoint, which dovetailed with the others, Hinebaugh stated "You just don't build to catch up to today; you also build to be ready for tomorrow."

"MOUNTAINS OF POSSIBILITIES" is a theme being considered for a new spring series of events that will be discussed during a 10 a.m. brainstorming session on Friday, Dec. 2, at the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce in McHenry. All persons, including representatives of businesses and non-profit organizations, are invited to attend. The sport of fly-fishing, a booming pastime in Garrett County, is just one potential springboard for discussion. Photo by Tim Tadder Photography. See story.

Annual Christmas Auction Scheduled By Women's Group

The Garrett County Business and Professional Women will hold their annual Christmas Auction on Thursday, Dec 8, in the Sitzmark Room at Will O' the Wisp. Social time will be held at 6 p.m., followed by the buffet dinner at 6:30 p.m. The auction is slated for 7:30. Those unable to attend the dinner may still participate in the auction.

"The auction is a great place to add to those Christmas presents and/or stocking stuffers," said Linda Fike, BPW auction chair. "A good time is had by all, the young and the young at heart. Join your family, friends, and co-workers for an evening of dining pleasure followed by the light-hearted encouragement from the auctioneer to buy, buy, buy!"

Proceeds from the auction, as well funds raised at the BPW Garrett County Fair booth, support two scholarships that are awarded each year to mature Garrett County women.

"There are three ways to be generous with this year's auction" said BPW member Judy Carbone.

"First, an item to be auctioned can be donated. The item can be something homemade, holiday-related, something purchased, or a business donation.

"Second, invite someone to attend the auction and plan to do some Christmas shopping; and third, plan to attend and bid."

Tickets for the dinner, featuring two entrees, cost $12. Reservation can be made by calling Joanne Harm at 301-334-9766 by Friday, Dec. 2.

CRP To Hold Open Meeting

The Local Citizen Review Panel (LCRP) will hold an open meeting on Thursday, Dec. 1, from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at the Department of Social Services in Oakland at 12578 Garrett Highway.

The LCRPs in Maryland are to provide oversight for the child protection system in Maryland by advising the State Citizens' Review Board for Children and the State Council on Child Abuse and Neglect on how effectively state and local agencies are fulfilling their responsibilities related to child protection.

This is to be accomplished by ongoing local system reviews and individual case reviews. LCRP members include individuals with interest and expertise in the prevention and treatment of child abuse and neglect.

All local LCRP members have been appointed by the Garrett County commissioners. For more information, persons may call Crystal Stewart at 301-334-1189.

Spring Events Planning Session Set By Chamber

A special meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. on Friday, Dec. 2, at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters in McHenry to discuss a new spring series of events and activities. All persons interested in learning more about this spring marketing program are invited to attend, according to chamber president Charlie Ross.

"We are looking for a March to June theme, such as 'Spring Break with Mountains of Possibilities in Garrett County,' and we are looking for a variety of events tied into that theme," said Ross. "They could be developed to offer fund-raising possibilities to local non-profit organizations and promotional opportunities for businesses."

The Marketing Roundtable of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce is planning to promote the new spring series, and is seeking organizations or groups willing to host events.

Some ideas discussed could include events around St. Patrick's Day for the Irish, May Day for Swedish, a garden and flower show for English Victorian, and the Living History programs with their French and Indian connection. The Highland Festival highlights the area's Scottish and Celtic background. Other events can stress fly-fishing, whitewater rafting, or American baseball.

"These are just ideas. They show some of the county's variety and diversity," Ross stated. "We invite members of the community to contact us about becoming part of these events and welcome other ideas."

This past September the chamber worked with the American Red Cross to promote the Art and Wine Festival, which raised approximately $11,000 for the Red Cross.

"Although planning for this event had actually begun in early spring, the timing was perfect to help the victims of Hurricane Katrina," said Deb Clatterbuck, the chamber's director of tourism and marketing. "These spring events can be smaller, but still offer groups fundraising opportunities. The chamber will help with promotion of the event. This will be our 2006 marketing blitz for spring," she said.

"We feel we can offer visitors mountains of possibilities," said Ross. "Community organizations, businesses and the marketing roundtable can dramatically increase the number of our visitors by adding new activities."

Drivers Needed To Transport Cancer-Treatment Patients

The American Cancer Society is looking for volunteers for its Road to Recovery program to transport ambulatory patients to their cancer treatments.

Under the program, volunteers 18 years and older use their own vehicles and gas and donate their time to take the patients to chemotherapy, radiation, surgery, or an initial consultation to set up these treatments at local treatment centers. Drivers may say how large an area they wish to cover.

Volunteers must possess a valid and current driver's license, have access to a serviceable car with seatbelts, attend an initial training session, and attend recertification training sessions every two years.

For more information about the program or volunteering, one may call the American Cancer Society at 301-722-2145 or 1-888-227-9979.

Some Claim Maryland's Hanson Is The Founder Of Thanksgiving

by Chris Landers
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – As you tuck into your traditional Maryland crab cakes and sauerkraut this Thanksgiving day, take a moment away from all the palaver about Pilgrims and Plymouth Rock to reflect on the Maryland statesman who really created the national holiday we celebrate on Thursday – John Hanson of Charles County.

Or so say Hanson supporters. Actually, there is considerable disagreement on who established the holiday among historians, some of whom get downright partisan on the issue.

Hanson served as "President of the United States in Congress Assembled" under the Articles of Confederation in 1781 and '82. The Articles preceded the U.S. Constitution as an organizing document among the colonies.

Some still claim Hanson, and not George Washington, was the first president of the United States. Detractors point out that before the Constitution there really wasn't an office of the president, or, for that matter, a country to be the president of.

Whatever his presidential status, Hanson did issue a proclamation declaring Thursday, November 28, 1782, "a day of solemn Thanksgiving to God for all his mercies."

"It's very clear that [Hanson] was the first one to do the tradition we have now," notes Stanley Klos in President Who? Forgotten Founders, on the presidents of the U.S. under the Articles of Confederacy. "He really was a great man."

By first, Klos means that Hanson located the holiday at the end of November, on a Thursday. There were other Thanksgivings before and have been since. Klos, by the way, lists Hanson as the third president, making George Washington the 11th.

"George Washington is the father of Thanksgiving," George Washington's Mount Vernon Estate and Gardens spokeswoman Melissa Wood said. Wood points to an article in the Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser describing Washington's declaration designating the last Thursday in November a "day of public Thanksgiving."

A press release from Mount Vernon mentions in passing the belief that Washington was also the first president of the U.S.

Unfortunately for Washington, though, his Thanksgiving declaration was for November 26, 1789, a full seven years after Hanson's.

Similar Johnny-come-lately Thanksgiving claimants include Abraham Lincoln, who established the national holiday on the last Thursday in November, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who moved it to the fourth Thursday to extend the Christmas shopping season.

The first Thanksgiving of popular lore – the one with the Pilgrims – was a one-time affair to celebrate the 1621 harvest in Plymouth, but that was a regional harvest festival. Maryland had its own regional Thanksgiving on October 22, 1698, after a particularly harsh "epidemic or pestilence, the nature of which is not clear," according to Matthew Page Andrews' 1925 Tercentenary History of Maryland.

To John Hanson Briscoe – who, when asked about Hanson over the phone, responded, "You mean the fust president?" – the Thanksgiving claim is just another example of the Washington public relations machine's attempt to steal the thunder of lesser-known Hanson.

"Hanson was very quiet," said Briscoe, a retired St. Mary's County Circuit Court judge and former speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, who has done considerable research on his illustrious forebear. "He came from humble means, didn't make a big deal about his contributions."

Washington, on the other hand, was an aristocrat and self-promoter, Briscoe said, and remains so even in death.

"The John Hanson Society is not as well funded as the George Washington Society," Briscoe said. In fact, the record on the once-active Hanson society seems to run out in the early 1980s.

Locating traces of Hanson's legacy was easier. U.S. Route 50 bears his name from Washington to Annapolis, and a small bronze statue adorns the president's desk on the floor of the Maryland Senate, along with one of Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Larger versions of both graced the statuary hall at the U.S. Capitol until Congress limited states to only one, and Hanson was moved to a nearby corridor.

Eva Malecki, spokeswoman for the Architect of the Capitol's office, said Hanson was by no means shunted aside for the more popular Carroll.

"It's a well-trafficked hallway," Malecki said. "It's not just shoved in some corner."

Hanson has also been commemorated with monuments in Philadelphia, Frederick, and Port Tobacco. Administrators at John Hanson Middle School in Waldorf were unavailable to comment on whether students are taught about Hanson's Turkey Day contributions.

Briscoe, Klos, and other Hanson fans can still celebrate his life on April 15, declared John Hanson Day by then-Gov. Marvin Mandel in 1973.

There were other, more meaty, issues on the table during Hanson's political career. He is credited with keeping Maryland out of the Continental Congress until Northern states had agreed to limit their western borders, and the Post Office and the first national bank were both established while be presided over the Congress. He died on November 22, 1783, a year after leaving office – right around Thanksgiving, although that year it wasn't celebrated.

Briscoe and Klos both took pains to say they didn't want to denigrate George Washington, just get Hanson his due. Briscoe called back after a phone interview to make this clear.

"In today's political atmosphere, I certainly hope this doesn't generate any [charges of] un-American feelings that I'm questioning a great American war hero."

"Have a good Thanksgiving," he said, "and think of John Hanson or George Washington, whichever you prefer."

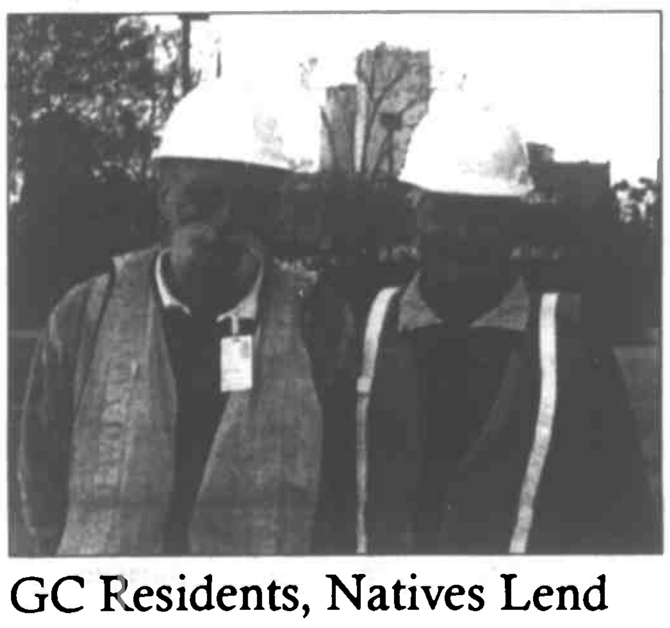
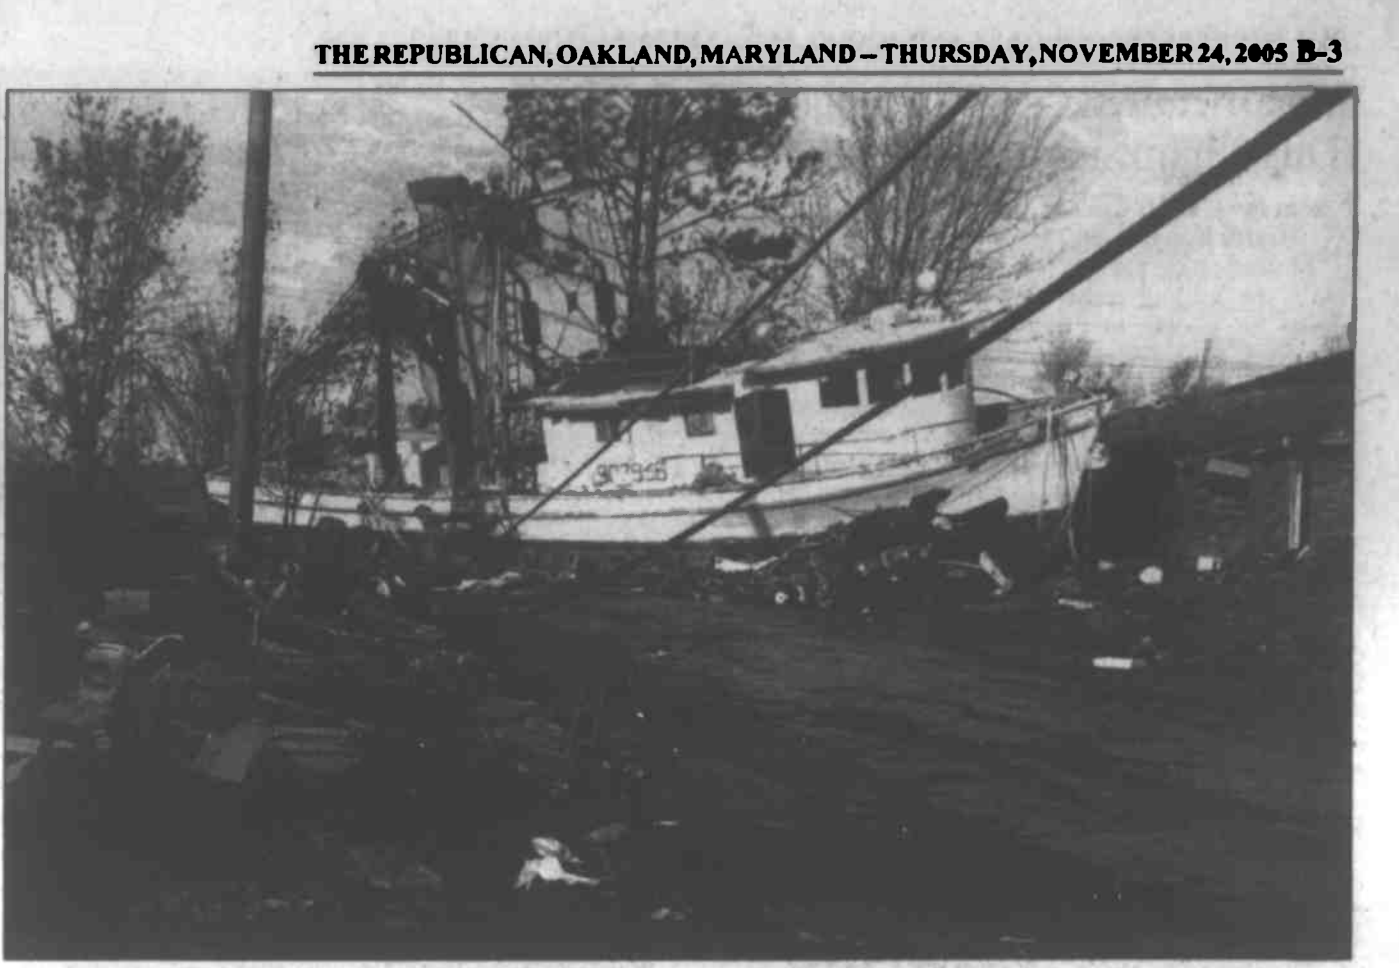
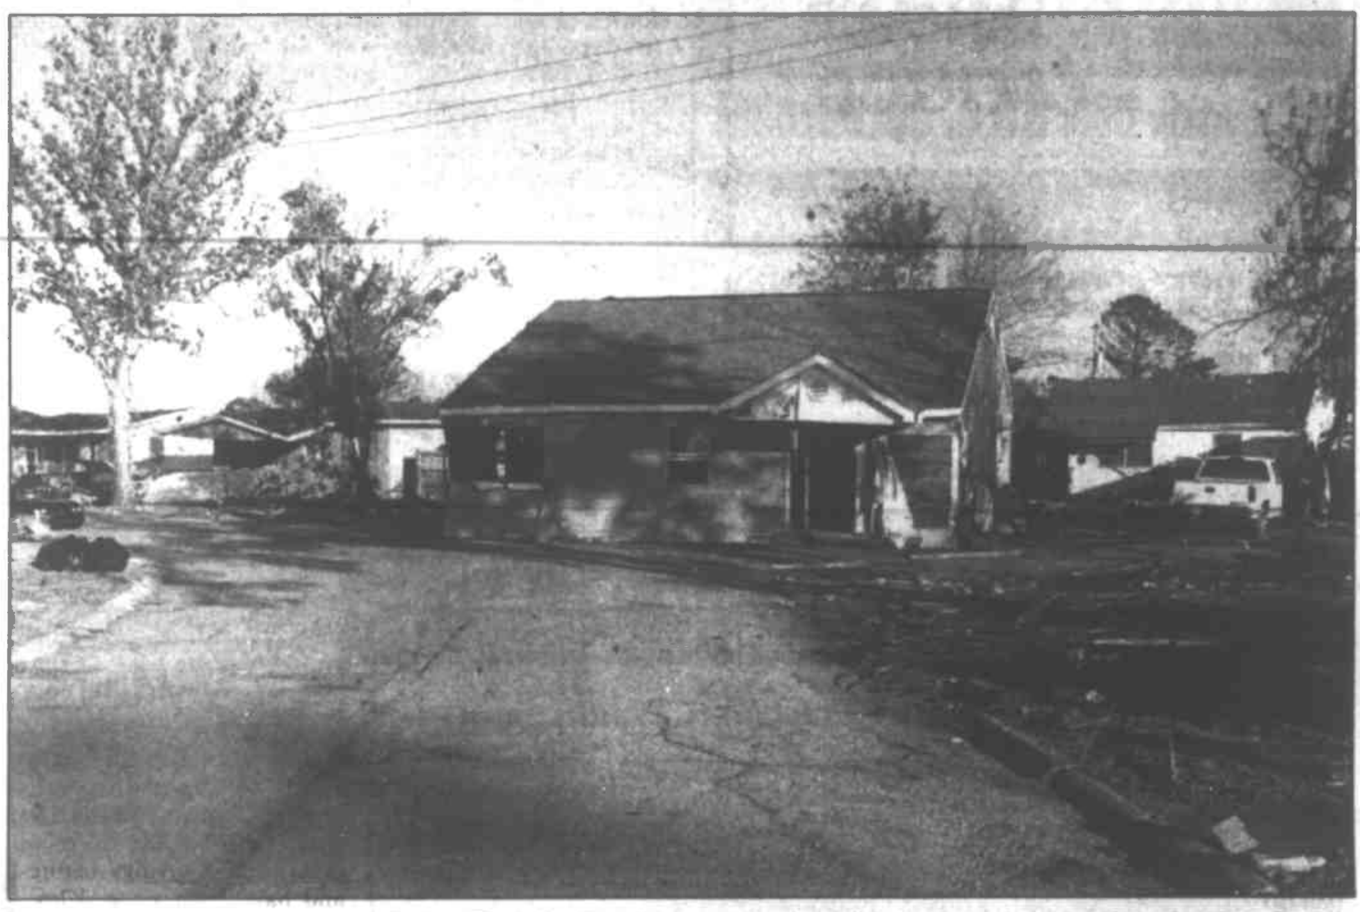
GARRETT COUNTY MEN HELP WITH LOUISIANA CLEANUP – Garrett County has been well represented by workers with Alpha Corporation, a contribution management firm, with the hurricane cleanup relief in Louisiana. Pictured above, from the left, are Rick Pullen of Accident, Bill Nace, formerly of Oakland, Arthur Childs of Oakland, and Tom Bittinger of Oakland, at the Almonaster Michoud Dump in New Orleans, La. They are standing in front of "white goods," or large appliances after the initial crushing. Below are Larry Coddington of Loch Lynn, John Rushing of Westernport, Ed Nace, formerly of Oakland, and Rick Wakefield of Friendsville, at the Lakeside Dump in Lake Charles, La. At the bottom with Tom Bittinger, right, is Doug Bittinger, also of Oakland, pictured near the central business district of New Orleans. Photos by Bill Nace.





WASHED ASHORE – This shrimp boat was washed ashore by the flood surge to this location, which was at least three miles away from its original location, according to Bill Nace. Below, is a frame house in Arabi, east of the lower 9th Ward and north of Chalmette, that was swept into the street by the storm surge from nearby levee breaks. Photos by Bill Nace.



GC Residents, Natives Lend A Helping Hand To Louisiana

The Garrett County area is being well represented in the hurricane cleanup efforts in Louisiana. Several current and former county men are spending two months in the New Orleans, Lafayette, and Lake Charles areas inspecting the work of contractors who are removing and disposing of debris left by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Former Oakland resident Bill (Dick) Nace of Alpha Corporation, a construction management firm, is managing a force of 105 quality control inspectors under a contract with the Army Corps of Engineers to assure that cleanup contractors are doing their work according to standards.

Assisting Nace as team leaders are Tom Bittinger of Oakland, Larry Coddington of Loch Lynn, and Rick Wakefield of Friendsville. Quality Assurance (Q/A) inspectors include Doug Bittinger and Arthur Childs, both of Oakland, Rick Pullen of Accident, John Rushing of Westernport, and former Oakland resident Ed Nace.

The inspection team members are working 12 hours a day, seven days a week under demanding living and working conditions, said Bill Nace. The inspectors live in RVs parked in mobile home parks and in pastures turned into temporary parks. Everything in workers' time-off is brief, including meals, showers, and leisure. There is little time for eating out, even if restaurants could be found open near work or camp.

In the New Orleans area until now, most stores have already closed by the end of the work day. Even in areas where electricity, water, and sewer have been restored, business hours are curtailed by the lack of workers who can live nearby. According to Nace, team leaders have spent a lot of time shopping during the day for the personal needs of the Q/A inspectors. There is no time off for lunch or errands and breaks come only with pauses in the work.

The crew members spread out each morning to monitor loading sites, dump sites and certain sites along the haul routes. So far, the Corps contractors are only removing debris from roads and streets, but this includes debris that land owners have carried to the streets.

"Safety First" is not just a motto in these operations, it is the rule, and it is strictly enforced, Nace said. If cones, signs, and flaggers are not provided, inspectors halt the operation. Nace explained that if a safety device on a truck or machine is not working, it is taken out of operation. If a load in transit has shifted to present a hazard or if it appears that some of the load may fall off, inspectors require the driver to get out and reposition the load by hand. At the dump site, inspectors in towers look down into the vehicles to estimate the part of the vehicle that is not filled and that amount is deducted from the load ticket.

Although most of the contractors are honest, there have been some who have tried various schemes to get overpaid, Nace said. Among these has been padding the bottom of a high side non-dump trailer with old tires which do not get unloaded each trip to the dump. Another trick was to bring a load into the dump but not unload it. The driver would exit the dump by another exit and bring it in about a half hour later. These practices were halted by constructing an inspection tower at the dump exit and requiring all trucks to exit there, Nace explained.

Although most businesses are now operating and homes are livable in Lake Charles and Lafayette, conditions to the south and in the New Orleans area vary from worse to much worse, according to Nace. Some of the higher areas in New Orleans such as the French Quarter, central business district and "up town" are beginning to bounce back, but most parts of the city remain in complete desolation.

Block after block after block of deserted homes leave lasting impressions on the crew of the unimaginable magnitude of this disaster, including visions of the frustration, misery, and helplessness that residents must have endured as the waters rose beyond expectation following Katrina and Rita, said Nace.

Few of the flooded homes and business buildings will ever be used again, Nace said. Every day the crew sees some property owners back at work salvaging the few worthwhile items and carrying large volumes of waste to the street for pickup by contractors. At a temporary morgue near Baton Rouge, most bodies remain unidentified, he said.

In New Orleans there lingers in the air the foul smell of mold and other unpleasant odors, Nace explained. Masks help somewhat, but many inspectors and contractors alike just put up with it. There are still areas in New Orleans that FEMA has not yet cleared for entry by cleanup crews and where humane officers are still finding deserted pets, some with new babies.

In areas of the lower 9th Ward, there are many houses that were demolished by the storm surge and others that were washed off their foundations, some blocking the streets. Several of the places, where levee breaks were blocked by sandbags and rocks are still leaking. There remains so much to do and so many different opinions on just what should be done, Nace said.

The Garrett County crew members have distinguished themselves in the cleanup efforts, and several have been singled out for specific compliments from the Corps and local residents for their outstanding work.

News Shocks Area SUV And Van Buyers

Morgantown, WV.,

Good news! Major media sources proclaim gas prices are on their way back down to $2.00 and SUV and van buyers are in for quite a shock. SUV buyers typically purchased their vehicles because they wanted safety for their family as well as room and comfort, but the media's incessant harping on gas prices, and other negative news has scared buyers out of the market, and according to one auto insider this story has a huge silver lining. Mike Wood of the New Bortz KIA had this to say, " Due to serious slacking demand for the SUV and van, manufacturers are scrambling to move inventories and they're doing it with phenomenal offers like I've never seen before. Imagine, a couple new vehicles I have in mind is the KIA Sorento and KIA Sedona that has over $7,000 in factory rebates and other incentives. These savings are so dramatic they swallow up years of high fuel prices which are already on their way back down to below $2.00 a gallon. I think the manufacturer has over reacted, and that's a huge silver lining. You don't have to sacrifice your family's safety for gas prices."

It was quite a surprise to know that the New Bortz KIA is selling safe vehicles with some models turning up to 40 M.P.G. And better. Wow! And the good news doesn't end there. Again Mr. Wood added, "Price is obviously a major issue to the auto buyer... A concern we're keenly aware of at the New Bortz KIA. We decided long ago that we would be fiercely competitive when it comes to price. If you have seen any of Bortz KIA TV ads you know we are serious. We call it a low price guarantee, our customers call it peace-of-mind knowing that they are getting the right price and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty. This month we are sweetening the deal even more by offering a minimum 110% of Kelley Blue Book value for trade-ins."

The New Bortz KIA is located at 696 Fairmont road in Westover. Phone: 304-291-5090 or toll free at 866-313-5998.

The New Bortz KIA also has a quantity of previously titled 2005 KIA Sedona's priced from $14,995, that's more than $10,000 off the original M S.R.P.

With prices this low and a 10 year, 100,000 mile warranty you don't have to sacrifice your family's safety, room and comfort because of high gas prices.

Motorists Asked To "Buckle Up" This Thanksgiving Weekend

from the Garrett County Health Department

Motor vehicle crashes remain the leading cause of death for people of every age from 4 to 33, and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration projects that as many as 567 highway fatalities could occur nationwide during the 2005 Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

A new study from the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia/State Farm Insurance Company's Partners for Child Passenger Safety Project reveals that many of these crashes will happen close to home, so whether you are traveling across country or just around town – buckle up!

The Maryland State Highway Administration's Highway Safety Office, Safe Kids Maryland, and the Garrett County Health Department offer tips for traveling safely – whether near or far from home – during this busy holiday season.

New data provided by the Partners for Child Passenger Safety Project (PCPS) underscore the importance of buckling everyone up regardless of the length of the trip. The report was culled from a database containing information on more than 377,000 crashes involving more than 557,000 children from birth through age 15 years, and provides startling data for typical crashes involving child passengers. For example:

•Nearly three out of four crashes (73 percent) happen between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

•More than half of crashes occur at speeds less than 45 mph.

In order to help everyone stay safe on the roads this holiday weekend the Garrett County Sheriff's Office and Maryland State Police are joining law enforcement officials throughout Maryland to remind all holiday travelers to buckle up on every ride.

"Whether traveling three states away to Grandma's house or just down to the store to pick up extra cranberry sauce, it's important for everyone to buckle up on every ride," said Diane Lee, highway safety coordinator at the Garrett Count Health Department. "That's why law enforcement throughout the state will be out in force over Thanksgiving with a strong 'Click It or Ticket' message – to help save lives on our highways."

Although a record 91 percent of Marylanders now wear their safety belts while riding or driving in vehicles, up from 89 percent in 2004, too many people still do not. More than 460 passengers died in crashes during 2004 – and more than half of those killed were not wearing their safety belts at the time of the crash. Drivers and occupants of pickup trucks tend to buckle up less than the general population at only 84 percent of the time.

Thanksgiving is also a good time to remember that children must always be properly restrained in moving vehicles. Although 99 percent of all American infants younger than age 1 are now restrained, many older children tend to be placed in adult seat belts too early. When booster seats are used, 8 out of 10 child restraints are improperly installed.

To assist families with selecting the appropriate type of restraint for each member of the family, the Safe Kids Maryland Coalition and the Garrett County Health Department offer the following tips.

The "4 Steps for Kids" are:

1. Rear-facing infant seats in the back seat from birth to at least 1 year old, and until they outgrow the rear-facing convertible seat, usually around 30 to 35 pounds.

2. Forward-facing toddler seats in the back seat after the rear-facing convertible seat is outgrown, to about 40 pounds, usually around age 4.

3. Booster seats in the back seat from about age 4 and 40 pounds to at least age 8, unless taller than 4 feet 9 inches.

4. Safety belts at age 8 or older, or taller than 4 feet 9 inches. All children 12 and younger should ride in the back seat.

"Because law enforcement officers have seen firsthand the severe injury and death that can result from not using a safety belt or a child safety seat, they will be showing zero tolerance for anyone not buckled up this Thanksgiving weekend," Lee said. "We want everyone on the road to reach their destination safely this holiday season, so please – 'Click It or Ticket.'"

For more information about child passenger safety, persons may visit online at nhtsa.dot.gov or mdkiss.org.

TV-PIPELINE

Townsend is television's second 'Stalker'

By Jay Bobbin

Stuart Townsend

Q: Wasn't there another "Night Stalker" program years ago? –Sheri Potter, Crawfordville, Fla.

A: ABC's current, Stuart Townsend-starring series is an update of the cult-classic show "Kolchak: The Night Stalker," in which Darren McGavin played the reporter dedicated to pursuing stories of the supernatural. Based on a successful 1972 TV movie and its 1973 sequel, the original series lasted only one season (1974-75). It can be found on DVD, as can the two films that inspired it.

Q: Last summer, there were previews for a CBS show with Stockard Channing on Monday nights. Has that happened? –Chuck Stephany, Bend, Ore.

A: Yes, every Monday for roughly the past two months. The show is the sitcom "Out of Practice," about a family consisting mainly of doctors. Henry Winkler, Christopher Gorham, Paula Marshall and Ty Burrell play the other members of the clan.

Q: My daughter and I loved watching "Beautiful People" on ABC Family. Will it be back? –Ann Hickey, Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

A: The network recently ordered eight more episodes of the Daphne Zuniga-starring show, so yes, it will be back. That will happen in the new year, at this writing, no specific date had been given for its return.

Q: Are "The Winds of War" and "War and Remembrance" out on DVD? I taped these years ago, just got around to watching them, and found out I had messed up the last hour. –Sondra Spooner, Lawrence, Kan.

A: Both miniseries are available in boxed DVD sets; "The Winds of War" has been released by Paramount Home Entertainment, and "War and Remembrance" is on the MPI Home Video label.

Q: Was there a series in which Sarah Jessica Parker and Isaiah Washington played young attorneys? If so, what was the name of the series, and when did it run? –J. Gasser, Lancaster, Ohio

A: We have a feeling you're thinking of "Equal Justice," which ABC aired in 1990-91. Parker did star in the drama about lawyers in the Pittsburgh district attorney's office, but Washington didn't. The other members of the ensemble cast included Joe Morton ("Speed"), Jane Kaczmarek ("Malcolm in the Middle"), Kathleen Lloyd, Jon Tenney and James Wilder ("Melrose Place").
